U.S. War Protest Draws 150,000

Space Link Begins

MOSCOW (AP) — After a chase of more than 41 hours, the manned Soviet spaceship Soyuz 10 docked with the automatic space station Salyut Salute today, then broke away for further approach and linking manoeuvres.

Soviet television announced that the Soyuz 10, with its three-man crew, had made a "rigid mechanical docking" with the unmanned Salute.

Afterward, the link was severed, and the Soyuz, which means union in Russian, drifted away. The experiment was carried out after the three cosmonauts had awakened from a nap.

"During the joint flight," Tass said, "scientific and technical experiments were conducted and the work was done for linkup and undocking of the manned spaceship and the orbit station Salute."

Tass added that rendezvous and docking equipment on the spacecrips was checked, and the "radio tecnnical equipment was perfected."

The brief dispatch also said that the three cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 10 "feel fine" and that all the systems aboard their craft and the unmanned dummy ship Salute "function normally."

IT'S NEW ITEM

Soviet cosmonauts have docked two Soyuz craft in a previous space mission, but the Salute craft, launched last Monday, is a new item in the Soviets' catalogue of space hardware.

Soyuz 10 streaked into orbit early Friday morning and began pursuing Salute around the earth. The crew made two slight adjustments in the craft's orbit Friday and zeroed in for the rendezvous.

At last report, Soyuz and Salute were in parallel orbits, but the manned craft was slightly higher and would have to throttle down a bit to drop into lower orbit.

This manoeuvre apparently was carried out today.

The linkup of the two craft would be a major step toward the declared Soviet goal of building the world's first orbiting space laboratory.

Three-time cosmonaut Vladimir A. Shatalov, an air force colonel, is command pilot of Soyuz 10. With him are Alexei S. Yeliseyev, also a veteran cosmonaut, and rookie Nikolai Rukavishnikov.

HINTED AT MISSION

Yeliseyev hinted at Soyuz 10's mission shortly before blastoff when he told Russian journalists that the Soviet space program is "entering a period when the creation of orbital space stations is becoming a crucial problem."

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of England's Jodrell Bank Observatory, said Friday he believes the Russians are "very close to carrying out procedures that have been predicted for some time."

Shells Stray Over Border As India, Pakistan Tense

NEW DELHI (AP) — The Press Trust of India said Pakistani heavy artillery shells fell on Indian territory today during bombardment of a rebel-held border post 40 miles northeast of Calcutta.

Quoting reports reaching Calcutta, the agency said the bombardment began in early morning and shells fell near the customs checkpoint at Petrapole on the Indian side of the border with East Pakistan.

There were no reports of casualties on the Indian side.

Units of the East Pakistani Rifles which support the so-called Republic of Bangla Desh man the East Pakistan border post opposite Petrapole, and Pakistani troops moved to within three miles of the border in the Petrapole district a week ago.

On the Indo-Pakistani diplomatic front, tension reached new heights Friday night when Pakistan ordered the closing of its mission in Calcutta and told India to shut down its high commission in Dacca.

BROADCAST DECISION

Radio Pakistan broadcast the decision which called for simultaneous closing down of the countries' missions, to become effective Monday. It was confirmed later by an official statement issued in Islamabad.

Diplomats and their families would be repatriated under a reciprocal arrangement, the radio said.

The move came after East Pakistanis took over the Pakistani consulate in Calcutta and India declined to take any immediate action to restore it to Pakistan's control.

A spokesman at the Calcutta mission said a letter from Islam was being sent to overseas capitals calling for the establishment of "normal diplomatic relations and exchange of envoys with a view to further strengthening of friendship."

U.S. IN AIR DUEL OVER N. VIETNAM

SAIGON (AP) — United States fighter-bombers duelled Friday with a Soviet-made MiG interceptor and came under heavy anti-aircraft fire over North Vietnam in the sixth day of intensified air activity over the North, the U.S. command disclosed today.

The command said one U.S. aircraft "received minor damage." The U.S. planes were attacking North Vietnamese anti-aircraft defences, but results of the raids were not known, the command said.

The activity was the heaviest in a six-day period since the halt in the bombing of North Vietnam Nov. 1, 1968.

U.S. planes have made four times as many so-called protective reaction strikes this year as the U.S. command announced during all of 1970.

BOMBERS ATTACK

At least 10 U.S. Navy planes and one MiG were involved, and North Vietnamese gunners fired seven surface-to-air missiles at the U.S. aircraft.

While action focused on the North, U.S. B-52 heavy bombers and smaller fighter-bombers kept up heavy attacks on North Vietnamese supply points and routes along the 300-mile Ho Chi Minh trail network, along the demilitarized zone dividing North and South Vietnam and just to the east of the A Shau Valley, one of the exit points of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The U.S. command reported two U.S. helicopters were shot down inside South Vietnam Friday while supporting South Vietnamese forces in the Mekong Delta and far to the north in operation Lam Son 720, centred at the A Shau Valley near the Laotian frontier.

NDP Voting On Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—The five candidates made their final pitches Friday night and today one of them will become leader of a New Democratic Party that has rejected left-wing suggestions for sweeping nationalism and self - determination for Quebec.

On the eve of voting for a successor to retiring T. C. Douglas, 66, party delegates successfully turned back the thrusts of the radical Waffle group, both in policy matters and elected offices.

But Waffle's influence, which at this convention is built around the candidacy of James Laxer, a 29-year-old Queen's University lecturer, was clearly evident.

Votes on several key issues indicated that the group's delegate strength has grown beyond the 20 per cent with which it is credited generally.

BACKED BY WAFFLES

On the delicate issue of Quebec's future in Confederation, a policy area that worried party officials because of high emotions and organized factions, delegates rejected by a vote of 853 to 423 a motion favoring self-determination for Quebec.

Second Ballot

THINK AHEAD AT BED TIME

Daylight saving time goes into effect in British Columbia at 2 a.m. Sunday morning.

Set your clocks and watches ahead — repeat AHEAD — an hour when you go to bed and you'll be getting up perhaps a little more tired Sunday but at least in step with everyone else.

Everyone else who remembered, that is.

For those who like to really look ahead, the province reverts to standard time Oct. 31. That's when you . . . but that can wait.

City Man Dies After Collision

A 20-year-old Victoria man, David Brian Bresenham, 339 St. James, died today as a result of injuries suffered in a two-car collision on the Trans-Canada Highway at the north end of Tunnel Hill Friday night.

Bresenham was the only passenger in a car driven by his mother, Mrs. Daniel Bresenham, who was treated and released from hospital with minor injuries.

Massive March Peaceful

WASHINGTON (AP) —A massive gathering of young war protesters, estimated by police to number 150,000 to 200,000 and still growing, marched peacefully on the United States capitol today in the biggest anti-war demonstration in 1½ years.

The march started spontaneously an hour ahead of schedule. The line of marchers streamed from the locked, partially fenced-off Capitol all the way back down the Mall to the Washington Monument grounds, more than a mile away.

Police gave their first crowd estimate at noon, but marchers were still streaming into the monument staging area.

Helped by perfect spring weather, the march was the biggest anti-war demonstration since 250,000 or more were estimated by police to have gathered in Washington Nov. 15, 1969.

Mayor Walter E. Washington said "things have gotten off to an excellent start." He said it shows "we've maintained a climate where people can come and exercise their constitutional right."

As the Washington crowd swelled, a similar demonstration was scheduled to get under way in San Francisco.

CHANT AND CLAP

The march had been scheduled for noon, but an hour early the chanting, hand-clapping crowd boiled on to Pennsylvania Avenue from the monument grounds.

The head of the march reached the Capitol rally area about half an hour after the procession began. The line of march, perhaps 20 abreast, filled all three lanes of the broad avenue allowed for it.

Through the night and early hours, demonstrators by the thousands moved through Washington streets in a jubilant flow.

While sponsors of the protest vowed non-violent civil disobedience, many capital store owners, victims of vandalism in past demonstrations, had boarded their windows.

At the justice department in response to directives—all window blinds were lowered and carefully shuttered to deflect any thrown objects.

And for the first time in memory, hastily-erected barricades blocked access to the West Front of the Capitol, where demonstrators planned to end their day-long parading.

WHITE HOUSE CLOSED

Capitol police said the wood-and-wire fencing was merely "to protect the flowers" and not to bar the marchers.

President and Mrs. Nixon are spending the weekend in Camp David, Md. The White House was closed to visitors.

Sharp Confers With Pope Paul

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada today discussed Vietnam, the Middle East and Africa with Pope Paul during a 30-minute private audience at the Vatican.

It was the first visit to the 73-year-old pontiff by a Canadian external affairs minister since Canada and the Holy See established diplomatic relations last year.

Sharp, on a two-day visit to Italy, already has had talks with Aldo Moro, the Italian foreign minister, and with Marzo Zagari, the foreign trade minister, principally centring on Canadian concern over the effects of British entry into the European Common Market.

At a dinner Friday night, Moro assured Sharp that Italy wants an enlarged European community to be politically and economically outward-looking.

. . . NDP CONVENTION

With the exception of the leadership contest—which is clearly dominating this four-day biennial convention—the Quebec and public-ownership issues had been widely billed as the key issues to come before the 1,683 delegates who had assembled by late Friday.

The Quebec issue was also a key one for the five candidates who Friday night had their final opportunity to make their positions clear. All of them took part in the afternoon debate when the motions were on the floor.

As expected, Mr. Laxer came out firmly in favor of self-determination for Quebec. He was given rousing applause when he called for a new alliance between Quebec and the people of Canada.

CHEERED LEWIS

But the cheers were even louder when David Lewis, now the party's deputy leader, told the convention it would be a disservice to both the party and to Canada to pass any resolution questioning the desire of all Canadians to live in harmony together.

John Harney, former party secretary in Ontario, also came out strongly against the amendment on self-determination. What Quebec really wants, he said, was covered in the main motion, which was later approved.

This motion, a compromise resolution, called for a united Canada and instructed the party's federal council to draw up an unambiguous and lasting agreement on relations between French and English Canada.

This main motion was passed, by a massive majority, with a show of hands.

Ed Broadbent, MP for Oshawa-Whitby, said the union of English and French must be maintained, but added that, in the final analysis, the people of Quebec must have the right to decide their own future.

TAIL WAGS DOG

The fifth candidate, Frank Howard, MP for Skeena, said he did not question Quebec's right to make its own decision. But approval of the Waffle-sponsored amendment came close to supporting separatism. The Quebec tail would be wagging the Canadian dog.

During the hour-long Quebec debate, delegates were lined up in droves at the microphones waiting for an opportunity to speak.

Raymond Laliberte, NDP president in Quebec, said Canada is quickly going to the devil, and in supporting the amendment for self-determination, he said a new union should be negotiated on a parity basis.

In their final plea to voters Friday night, the five candidates sidestepped all references to personal leadership virtues and concentrated on Canada's problems and the type of NDP government which could cope with them.

Mr. Lewis, describing his personal association with problems across Canada, ended his speech with a promise to "devote all my time and capacity, all my knowledge and experience I have gained, to the service of our party and our cause . . ."

WIPE OUT CAPITALISM

Mr. Laxer used his final 15 minutes to call on the party to honor its 1933 Regina pledge to eradicate the capitalist system in Canada.

"Only when the people of this country own and control the basic means of production shall we build a truly human society in Canada."

Frank Howard, MP for Skeena, took the occasion to firmly oppose any special status for Quebec.

To widespread applause—along with a few scattered boos —he said:

"Special status and respect for the French language—you bet your life, yes—but I don't think we can have special status for the political unit called Quebec for that would deny French-speaking citizens elsewhere the equality they deserve."

Mr. Broadbent, who has run a campaign generally aimed at bridging the gap between so-called moderates and the leftwing elements, urged the party to adopt relevant programs for "the thousands of Canadians who are looking for a way out, who want a significant change from the Trudeau government."

If the NDP takes its programs to the people, he said, "Mr. Trudeau better look out."

Mr. Harney, the final speaker during the evening, said the NDP must stress the fact it is not a political party like the others. The people who worked and lived in the country must be given a chance to govern.

Cordova Bay Pioneer Dies at 82

Founder of McMorran's Cordova Bay Ltd., McMorran came to Cordova Bay in 1890.

A long-time recreation enthusiast, he opened the first camping site at Agate Lake in 1913. In 1919 he built a tea room, still known to many Victorians as McMorran's Tea Room on Cordova Bay Road. A year later he added a gas pump and the tea room grew to a resort, camping and regatta area.

He is survived by his wife Ida; four sons, Bruce, Eric and Richard of Victoria, and David of North Vancouver; his two sisters, Miss Marguerite McMorran and Mrs. Irene Lloyd both of Victoria and seven grandchildren.

Rev. John Travis will officiate a private service at McCall Brothers' chapel. Burial at Royal Oak Burial Park will follow.

. . . PROTEST

The National Peace Action Coalition called the mass demonstration to protest the war, and to demand "freedom for all political prisoners" and a guaranteed $6,500 annual income for a family of four.

The day of protest followed a week of Capitol Hill lobbying against the war by Vietnam veterans who bitterly ended their demonstrations Friday by casting away their medals and battle ribbons and crutches over on to the Capitol steps.

John Kerry, a former navy lieutenant who organized the five-day demonstration by 1,000 veterans, said afterward:

"We showed the country how it can be done. You don't have to chant, you don't have to storm the barricades. You do it by persevering."

He noted the veterans were first rebuffed in their attempt to place wreaths at Arlington National Cemetery, then were permitted to do so.

They were prohibited from camping on the Mall, stayed despite a judicial order upheld by the Supreme Court, and finally were allowed to remain.

ACID-FILLED CAR IN RIVER

TRAIL (CP) — One of the seven CP Rail cars that plunged into the Kootenay River near Nelson Friday night contains 7,000 gallons of sulphuric acid, a Cominco Ltd. spokesman said here today.

There is no danger of ecological damage, however, he said, even though there is a possibility the acid could be leaking into the river.

He said the river's flow rate — 120,000 gallons a second — will dilute the acid almost immediately.

Two of the other cars contain a type of non-toxic fertilizer that will not harm the river. The others are believed to contain zinc ore.

No one was injured in the derailment, the cause of which is not yet known.

Island Railway Seeks Fare Hike

CP Rail announced in Montreal Friday it is seeking fare increases on its inter-city passenger runs, including the Dayliner service between Victoria and Courtenay.

The Dayliner fare Victoria to Nanaimo is now $3.65 and Victoria to Courtenay $7.

NEED APPROVAL

CP Rail must gain approval for the increases from the Canadian Transport Commission, a federal government agency.

The announcement said the proposed increases are designed to reduce financial losses on passenger train operations. The new levels average 11 per cent and if approved will go into effect June 1.

Passenger trains operating out of Montreal and Toronto to Vancouver and between Montreal and St. John, N.B., Halifax and Yarmouth, N.S., would be affected as well.

An example of new fares: roomette between Toronto and Vancouver, from $110 to $112 without meals and from $125 to $138 with meals.

HADDOCK OPPOSED

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, Parksville Mayor Ray Young and Courtenay Mayor George Hobson said they are opposed to Dayliner fare increases.

Young and Hobson said their councils will likely lodge a formal protest. Haddock said the fare was already too high and an increase would be "just ridiculous."

Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife said that while he didn't like the idea of an increase, the public would probably have to accept it if the service was to keep running.

Quebec to Develop Major Hydro Project

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says a new Quebec government agency financed initially by about $2 billion of U.S. investment will develop a vast hydroelectric project on James Bay and Hudson Bay.

The newspaper says the project will eventually cost at least $4 billion and will produce about 72 billion kilowatts an hour, more than twice the output of the Manicouagan development in northeastern Quebec and the Churchill Falls project in Labrador.

In Trois-Rivieres, Le Nouvelliste says plans for construction of the project will be announced by Premier Robert Bourassa at a Liberal party dinner April 30.

La Presse says the new agency will consist of four members, three from the Quebec civil service, and will be directly responsible to the provincial cabinet.

Once the project is completed, its operation would be taken over by Hydro-Quebec, the state-owned supplier of electricity throughout Quebec.

The government hopes to get started on the project as soon as possible, La Presse says, perhaps before the end of the year.

It estimates that by 1974 15,000 to 20,000 new jobs will be created directly by the construction with 100,000 to 125,000 other jobs generated directly by the construction with 100,000 to 125,000 other jobs generated indirectly by activities tied to the project.

Le Nouvelliste says 10 dams will be constructed on the Rupert River and other rivers in the area will be diverted.

It estimates construction will take eight to 10 years.

Visit Curbs Being Eased

Visitor restrictions caused by the flu outbreak were eased at St. Joseph's Hospital today and will be removed at Mount St. Mary Hospital Sunday.

At St. Joseph's, where visitors have been barred for a week except with special permission, next-of-kin will now be allowed to visit patients provided they have no symptoms of a cold.

A Mount St. Mary Hospital spokesman said visiting will be allowed again as of Sunday but also asked that anyone not in good health not visit.

Royal Jubilee Hospital continues to ask visitors to stay away.

Flu has produced heavy staff absenteeism at the two major hospitals and is considered a hazard to elderly patients, particularly those suffering from respiratory ailments.

Pink Pipers Sing Sunday In United Church

The Pink Pipers, a group of about 35 Vancouver high school students will sing out at the Metropolitan United Church, in their pink gowns, Sunday at 4 p.m.

"They sing anything," a spokesman said, "from Camelot to Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head."

Leader and organizer of the group is former Victorian Colleen Erb, deaconess of Chilliwack United Church.

The girls performed in Port Alberni Friday and will be in Parksville and Campbell River today.

Fiscal Talk Dominates Meeting

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis said Friday night he and Prime Minister Trudeau spent the better part of their meeting earlier in the day discussing the June 10 federal-provincial conference to be held in Victoria.

And most of the talk centred on federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, the premier said in an interview after his luncheon at the prime minister's Ottawa residence.

Since becoming premier, Mr. Davis has placed most of the blame for the unemployment situation in Ontario on Ottawa's fiscal policies aimed at curbing inflation.

He said the two leaders discussed the tentative agreement reached on the constitution at the last conference and talked of ways to "move further ahead in June . . . we are anxious to see much concluded in June."

He said that Ontario was "not looking for confrontation" with Ottawa on fiscal matters but he told the prime minister "I thought the federal policies were having a greater impact on Ontario than our sister provinces."

It was the first lengthy meeting between the two leaders. Mr. Davis met Mr. Trudeau briefly in Ottawa after he was elected Progressive Conservative leader in February.

Mr. Davis declined to give Mr. Trudeau's reaction to Ontario's position on fiscal policies but described the talks as "very amicable."

Park Plan Shelved

REVELSTOKE (CP) — Development of a new park in the highway area has been shelved because city council fears it could become a haven for transients. A service club offered to provide the labor to develop a recreation area if materials were donated. Council referred the matter to a committee.

Shadow Mischief

Boy Scouts Plan Drive

Boy Scout troops in Camosun district are conducting a bag drive to help the Island handicapped in a "good turn" week for Goodwill Enterprises.

The co-operative drive to collect re-usable or repairable items begins Saturday, May 1, when the Scouts will deliver a Goodwill bag to every household in the Camosun district from Foul Bay Road east through to Harriet west, and from Hillside to Pandora.

Householders are requested to fill the bags by the following Saturday. They will be collected May 8 before 9 a.m. and taken to the Goodwill workshop for re-cycling.

Strikebound Community Suffering

By DERIK HODGSON

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — Oldtimers remember the first strike here 37 years ago. They remember the 200 RCMP officers, the barbed wire and the machine-gun emplacements.

This time there are no extra policemen, barbed wire fences or machine-guns. But a strike now entering its fourth month, over a contract dispute between 650 tradesmen and the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co., has all but crippled the economy of this northern mining town of 13,000 persons.

The tradesmen went on strike Jan. 27 — a day Mayor Ed Yauck calls "a black day in January."

The tradesmen-machinists, electricians and boilermakers — are essential to operation of the giant mining complex. The company immediately began to shut down its operation and in doing so left 1,600 members of the United Steelworkers of America without jobs.

The steelworkers, comprising both underground and above ground workers, had signed a contract with the company last fall.

AFFECTS THREE MINES

The shutdown affected three mines and the metallurgical plant in the Flin Flon area and five mines in the Snow Lake area, 75 miles to the east.

In a one-industry northern town a strike quickly touches all segments of society and within days of the Flin Flon shutdown credit tightened, eating habits changed and even the education of college students in Winnipeg is imperilled because the high-paying summer jobs are not available to miners' sons this year.

For all intents and purposes the whole town of Flin Flon went on strike pay, unemployment insurance or welfare on Jan. 27.

Mayor Yauck, a dentist, says businessmen up and down main street are being badly bruised financially. Almost every store had laid off staff and many store hours have been shortened.

"If this keeps up until school is out, some of the people are just going to take holidays and not come back," he said.

Viewed from the air, Flin Flon looks as if it is ready to slide west into Saskatchewan. It is perched precariously on a jagged outcropping of the pre-Cambrian shield. Most houses in the downtown area have no backyards or front yards and no grass. The rock is everywhere and the rock is the reason for the town's existence. A lucky prospector's bonfire melted snow and uncovered a copper ore outcropping in 1914 and mines have been there ever since.

PUEPOAW AWRRLWS

D. J. Robertson, the general manager of the Hudson Bay complex, is frank about Flin Flon's purpose in Manitoba: "The company is the one reason there is a town . . . our payroll is $1.5 million a month and almost all of that is gone with the strike."

The company and the strikers are not negotiating but Mr. Robertson says "I'm hoping for this to happen soon." So is everybody else in town.

The Steelworkers, who may have more to lose than the striking tradesmen, say they have no animosity toward the striking unions. Mayor Yauck explained that the strikers will eventually get a chance to bargain some of their losses back and that the merchants can regain losses by bumping prices up.

"The Steelworkers just stand to lose money," he said.

Roy Simmonds, Steelworkers' representative here, estimates that each Steelworker has lost an average $1,500 in wages. He also says there is no hostility between the two unions . . . yet.

Money is not a key factor in the strike. The tradesmen are demanding that they be permitted to bargain for a new contract for their trades association group. The company wants to settle within the framework of a wage and work contract signed last fall by the Steelworkers.

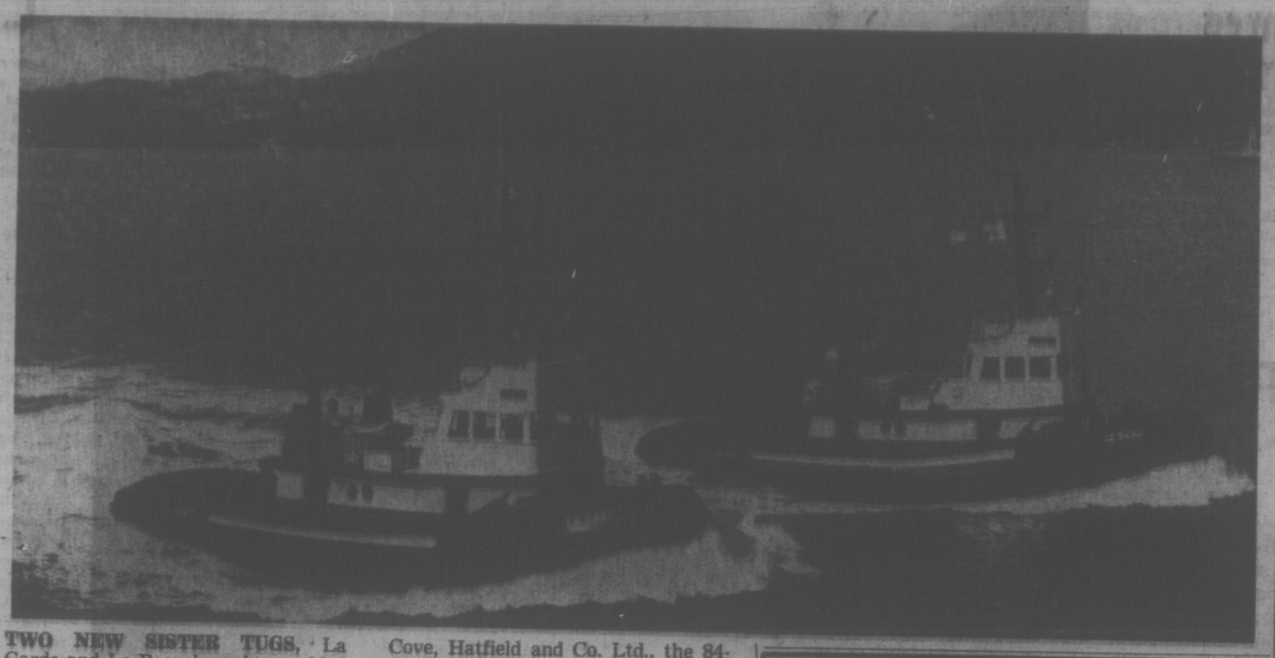

DEFENDS STAND

Jim Goodison, chief negotiator for the strikers and a representative of the International Association of Machinists, says it is important to remember that the trades are not trying to break new ground and are not demanding anything that is outrageous.

One of the major complaints of the trades group is the fact that the contract signed by the Steelworkers does not allow any bargaining for pension rights.

A federal mediator has already been in and out of the town without any signs of success and efforts now are being made to place the dispute in provincial jurisdiction. It is under federal jurisdiction because part of the company property crosses the provincial boundary into Saskatchewan.

Mayor Yauck says the trouble so far has been minimal — a few fights in the beer parlor, some curse words on the picket lines and a few banged fenders when company cars crossed picket lines.

TWO NEW SISTER TUGS, La Garde and Le Beau have been added to the fleet of Seaspan International Ltd. and may be expected to be soon seen working in local waters. Designed by the Vancouver firm of Cove, Hatfield and Co. Ltd., the 84-foot tugs have twin screws, automated enginerooms and modern control and navigational systems at three stations; the wheelhouse, top wheelhouse and aft boat deck.

Dammed English Channel Crash Course Solution?

LONDON (AP) — Dam the English Channel?

Engineers dreamed of tunnelling under it or building a bridge over it.

Now the respected British scientific journal Nature proposes damming it.

Nature saw it this way Thursday:

"Does it not make sense to ask whether the time has now arrived for getting rid of the English Channel, preferably by a dam that would yield electricity as well as a means of transport?"

The Nature editorial viewed with dismay the chaotic ship traffic on the channel, the busiest seaway in the world. It pointed out that 800 to 1,000 ships each day ply the polluted waters of the Strait of Dover.

"The result is that the problem of predicting collisions in the channel is not so much like predicting collisions between billiard balls on a smooth billiard table as that of predicting collisions between motor vehicles without brakes at road intersections without traffic lights."

In the last few months three vessels have sunk, two have been damaged and one was grounded on the Goodwin Sands in the straits.

"In short, the time will come when the best way of avoiding mutual shipping damage in the Channel will be to do away with the shipping" says the editorial.

"But, even as things are, much of the shipping exists only because the channel exists. If there were a dam from Dover to Calais, or if the natural causeway which disappeared 6,000 years ago with the melting of the ice were still intact, cross-channel traffic would go by dry land."

Regional Colleges Widen Opportunity

British Columbia's eight recently-established two-year regional colleges are democratizing post-secondary education in the province, a study of student enroiment has revealed.

The colleges are drawing students from families with no history of going beyond high school and from a variety of families of differing incomes, occupation and ethnic background.

The six-month study, by Dr. John Dennison, an associate professor of education at the University of B.C., and Gordon Jones, a political science instructor at Vancouver City College, surveyed all college students who had transferred to a B.C. university.

Comparing them with university students who hadn't attended a college, the study found the college transfer students to be much older, 23.7 per cent were over 19, compared to 6.8 per cent for university students.

At UBC, 26.1 per cent of the students surveyed had fathers with university degrees, while 7.8 to 16 per cent of the students at the various colleges had fathers with degrees.

"Over all, we found that the colleges are, in fact, attracting students from a broader socio-economic base than the university, and more older students," said Dr. Dennison.

"It seems that the colleges are, in fact, democratizing higher education by attracting students from lower social and economic groups. A large percentage of college students are first-generation college attenders — the first in their families to take such a step."

80% Success Claimed By Crisis Centres

VANCOUVER (CP)—An American psychiatry professor says crisis intervention centres have proved 80 per cent successful in dealing with immediate emotional upets and the service should be extended outside large metropolitan areas.

Dr. Louis Paul, who lectures at the University of South California, said Friday the centres should not replace other mental health services, but they are a valuable additional aid.

In Vancouver to lead a three-day teaching session for persons staffing crisis centres and family counselling units, Dr. Paul said a person who hopes to help another individual through emotional upset, must first have a non-moralistic attitude.

"The interviewer can help the individual to recognize his emotions, to come to grips with what the real emotions are," he said.

"Once the patient has done this, he is in a better position to solve his problems."

He said many laymen can develop raw techniques and become volunteers in crisis centres.

Helping to Set the Pace

CANADA HAS TAKEN A FAIRly active role in international discussions and agreements on laws which will govern the conduct of all nations, for among the most pertinent environmental and human problems facing the world today are many which are of particular importance to this country.

In a recent address to a Montreal audience, External Affairs Minister Sharp roved briefly over some of these areas, and it became very evident that, for one thing, because of Canada's position as a three-ocean country with a coast in the Arctic, there are situations demanding the control of international law which we should do everything we can to place before multi-national gatherings.

Mr. Sharp cited a number of international areas of controversy in which common action through the United Nations has achieved considerable regulation. There are several covenants, for example, dealing with human rights involved in racial discrimination, and economic and cultural opportunity, as well as documents on refugees, rehabilitation, the status of women, and other social considerations. But these are problems common to all. It is in physical matters that Canada has a more pointed interest in winning an international consensus.

Of major concern to Canada today is the establishment of international order in definition of the coastal waters and sea beds, their ownership and their protection from pollution. In 1967 the U.N. General Assembly set up a special committee, of which Canada is a member, to study means by which the ocean floor may be reserved exclusively for peaceful purposes, "and the use of their resources in the interest of mankind." This is a task which may take some years. Of equal importance is Canada's membership on the Preparatory Committee for the 1973 Law of the Sea Conference.

The latter meeting should be a vital one for this country. Our recent legislation setting out shipping pollution controls over the Arctic seas and our coastal fishing areas, as well as our declaration of extended territorial waters off both east and west shores, has been criticized as unilateral action which should have international sanction. Canada no doubt will seek at the forthcoming conference to win the support of other maritime countries for these actions.

It is clear that we have taken a lead in declaring firm measures to cope with the increasing dangers of sea pollution. The growing menace should move other countries to emulate our example, for there can be no future for mankind if nations continue to destroy the oceans.

In preparation for the conference, Canada has already proposed measures which could be implemented in the interim. These involve the determination of mutually acceptable areas of national jurisdiction on the sea bed beyond the normal coastal limits, and an international development fund to be created by coastal states from a percentage of revenues derived from offshore exploitation beyond their immediate coastal waters. This could initiate a whole new approach to global resources of the sea.

Mr. Sharp notes one defect in present international arrangements: "We have not yet created or established effective machinery for enforcing international law such as already exists." Law without enforcement and without teeth for those who break it cannot add much to efforts to regulate international affairs. At least some loss of national sovereignty is going to be necessary if the nations are not to lose much more.

Still Punching

AT THIS STAGE OF HIS STILLvigorous 66-year life, T. C. "Tommy" Douglas will not be placed in a niche with his revered predecessors, the Rev. J. S. Woodsworth, the "saint in politics," or the courtly, quiet, resolute M. J. Coldwell, who at earlier times led the political movement Mr. Douglas inherited. He is still the active political man and intends to remain so: welcome as the many current tributes are, he does not see them as a signal to step out of the arena as well as the leadership.

Physically a lightweight, Tommy Douglas has fought what he considers the good fight with the punch of a heavyweight. He has been knocked down by the electors and has sprung up again to return to the fray, bringing to his recovery a fine courage and outstanding skill. His recorded successes are impressive — election to Parliament in the early days of the CCF, transfer to Saskatchewan to head the party's first administration in any Canadian province, and a return to take over the national leadership of the newly-formed NDP. Some of his policies have raised the hackles of his own followers; others have been found favorable, even by many Canadians outside his party. Some betrayed more idealism than practical economics.

His political stance and footwork became familiar, perhaps too familiar to be as effective as they once were. But he speaks for many of his fellow citizens as he champions the principles laid down by predecessors dedicated to social progress. He has honored his commitments. He has earned wide respect and he enjoys an affection that extends beyond his own political family.

Tommy Douglas has stepped down. But it would be foolish to count him out.

Too Late

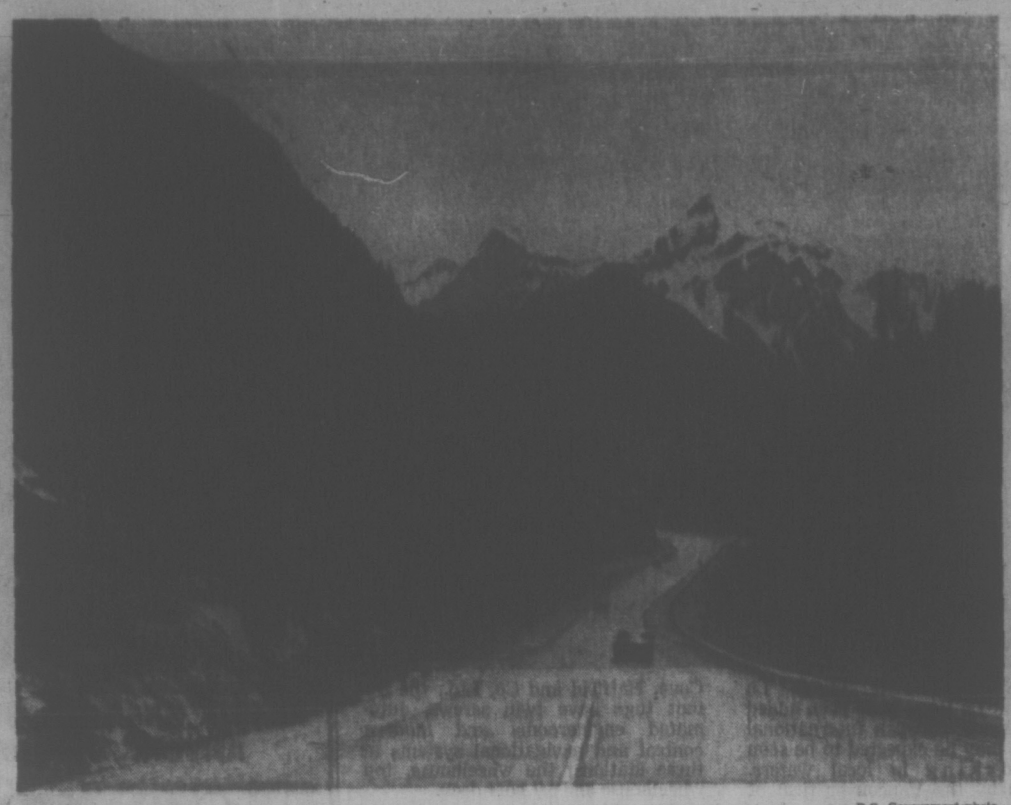

CRITICISM OF THE AIR-SEA rescue service—chiefly that it arrives too late on the scene — has revealed a disturbing arrangement which seems to guarantee delay. Except for a regular working shift during five weekdays, and then only from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., nobody is immediately ready to rush a helicopter or other equipment to the area in which a mishap may occur. It can take as much as two hours to assemble a crew for the job after the 4:30 quitting time and on weekends.

This, says a spokesman at Comox, is the fault of the politicians who do not provide for manning available equipment, or, for that matter, supplying enough equipment, to meet emergencies after the scheduled working day. Unfortunately, as fatalities have proved in recent weeks, accidents are not scheduled to fit the convenience of the rescue dayshift. In fact, when accidents involve recreation boating, they more frequently happen on the weekends, when more pleasure craft are in use.

This rescue service might be compared to a fire department which can assure fast response to a call only during one shift each day, and never on Sundays. Speed in rescue is of vital importance in the frigid waters around our coasts.

If air-sea rescue is to be air-sea rescue and not, as a critic contends, just a means of transporting bodies when it's too late, the present arrangement is far from satisfactory.

Fixing the blame for delays will never restore the drowned person to life. But it should be within the abilities of the service and of Canada to see that avoidable delays are eliminated — and as speedily as possible.

Original Tongues

I would agree with some of Jack Scott's statements regarding the universal Canadian use of the French tongue across hte alnd if it was accompanied by the universal use of the English language — expecially by the Quebecois. That is not the case. English is not universally used in Quebec, nor is it universally taught.

We have a large Chinese population in B.C. and in their homes among themselves they use their own language. In business with others they use English, which they seem to think is the official language of Canada.

If we go on the Quebecois idea "we were here first" we still would not be speaking French — it would be Iroquois, Huron, Cree or perhaps Eskimo.

The French made no concessions with regards to their language and customs. Mayor Juba of Winnipeg made a nice point a while back when he said that if we go by this theory Mr. Scott so strongly voices, Winnipeg schools would be teaching Polish, Icelandic, etc., not to mention Gaelic. — Puzzled.

EXPERTISE OF BAFFLEMENT

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Canadian Blueprint for Doing Nothing Busily

FOREIGN OFFICES throughout the Western world have always feared the sinister genius of His Majesty King Lumbago IX who has ruled the Himalayan state of Nostalgia for half a century. Strangely enough, however, the Canadian secret service did not foresee his latest diplomatic coup in Ottawa. For this mistake a terrible price will be paid.

Hutchison

As already revealed in these columns, Fragile Ali, the Nostalgian ambassador to Canada, has been making a detailed study of Ottawa's official life. But that was only the opening gambit of a larger strategy. King Lumbago's real intention was to establish in his state an exact duplicate of the Trudeau government.

Having read the non-partisan reports of the government's new information department, the king realized that Canada was the best governed country on earth. There could be no doubt about it. The government itself said so.

Accordingly, the king recalled Fragile Ali to the Nostalgian capital of Eyesore and appointed him prime minister with full authority to govern by Canadian methods. The new prime minister's first step, naturally, was to recruit a personal staff of 500 advisers, speech writers and economists.

King Lumbago protested that this entourage was larger than Nostalgia's whole decrepit army, which had not fought anyone since the conquest of neighboring Dementia in 1643. Such a retinue, he though, would be not only expensive but dangerous. It might decide to fight the army and destroy the prime minister, or even the throne.

"Don't worry," Fragile Ali replied. "That subtle statesman, Pierre Trudeau, knew what he was doing. He made sure from the start that his staff members would be so busy fighting among themselves that they would be no danger to anyone else. And since they never agree on anything, Trudeau can disregard all their recommendations and do precisely as he pleases while appearing to act on expert advice."

"Those Canadians are a diabolically clever breed," said the king.

"That's not half of it," the prime minister explained. "The government has also instituted a system known as participatory democracy. It's based on the remarkable assumption that if enough people who know nothing about the subject express their opinions on it vigorously enough a wise national policy will automatically emerge."

"I can't believe it," the king objected.

"That's because you haven't paid sufficient attention to the reporters of the information department," said the prime minister. "After you've read them you'll believe anything. Just like the Canadians."

Solutions from Everybody

"Besides, every man in Canada, however humble, ignorant and witless, knows how to solve the nation's problems without studying them and offers his advice freely to the government. The only Canadians who don't know the solutions are those few, a dozen at most, who understand the problems. But no one pays any attention to them and when everyone is shouting at once the government interprets public opinion to suit itself and calls it a universal consensus."

"How, then, are the problems solved?" asked the king.

"They aren't, except for the one vital problem in any system of participation — the re-election of the government. This problem has been completely solved by the parliamentary opposition."

"Marvellous," said the king.

"Even more marvellous than you suppose. The central mechanism of the system is a device known as cabinet solidarity. It works perfectly so long as no one believes in it and the people regard it as a harmless, jolly myth like Santa Claus."

"Unfortunately Mr. Trudeau tried at first to make it appear as an actual fact. He ordered his colleagues to say the same thing, to advocate the same policies and to look unanimous. A grave error. For then, of course, the public was led to expect clear-cut decisions, definite solutions and other absurd impossibilities. The country was soon disappointed, divided and restive. The situation became desperate."

"Yet you tell me that Trudeau is a brilliant man," said the king.

"So he is. Brilliant and ruthless. When he saw what was happening he ordered his cabinet to quarrel violently in public. The two most ferocious ministers, Kierans and Greene, were sent from coast to coast attacking the government's basic policies. Thus cabinet solidarity was re-established as only a myth, so understood by all citizens. The nation settled down again. Trudeau could relax and do nothing in particular about anything."

"That is usually the wisest course," said the wily old monarch.

"Indeed it is — provided that you appear to be doing everything. And of that art the Canadian government is an unequalled master. Its vast apparatus of innumerable task forces complete no task but they provide the image of perpetual motion. Its white papers invariably promise swift action on all fronts, and since no one reads them, and even the authors have forgotten their meaning, they keep the people in a state of serene expectation."

"Hence the rich patiently await the return of normal conditions which never existed. The poor are comforted by the prospect of an early revolution which won't occur. It's pathetic but the government has no worries. And Parliament is a great help."

"Perhaps we should set up a Parliament," the king suggested.

"By all means," the prime minister agreed. "But strictly on the safe Canadian plan. In Ottawa Parliament keeps talking until the people are bored and refuse to listen. The newspapers stopped reporting the debates long ago and write editorials instead to deplore the decline of the parliamentary institution. The government talks only to television or, preferably, to God."

Impressive Look

"And when the government talks with a piercing eye and a mass of statistics you can almost imagine, sometimes, that it knows what it's saying. Sometimes but not often. The risk of disclosure in any matter of importance is slight."

"As it should be," the king murmured. "Anyhow, I'm glad to see that the Canadian people are all mad and therefore easily governed."

"Not quite mad," said the prime minister. "It's only that they have a peculiarly wry sense of humor, a native love of the weird, the macabre and the incredible. It makes them happy, and when our information department is working satisfactorily all Nostalgians will be happy, too."

"Excellent!" the king cried. "Once Canadian democracy is firmly established in our kingdom the government's power will be unassailable, the throne secure and we shall conquer Canada in due course. So go ahead, and damn the expense."

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Mush Ice for Russia in the Sino-U.S. Thaw

SOME of the breathtaking possibilities inherent in the new turn of Chinese-American relations are only now beginning to come to the surface. A wholly new balance of world power may be in the making. For nearly a decade, the American presence in Southeast Asia has tied down Chinese forces which could otherwise have been arrayed against the Soviet Union along the Sino-Soviet frontier. The United States has, in effect, served the function of a Soviet military ally in that part of the world. China has been the common adversary.

Frye

It is irrelevant that the United States never had any serious intention of invading North Vietnam, much less China. Peking could not, and in its chaotic state of mind in the 60's did not, know this. China behaved as if the threat to her southern flank were real.

Disengagement

Now it is clear from Chinese actions that Peking accepts as a fact the American intent to disengage from Indo-China. Russia, which had greatly benefited from China's fear of the United States, no longer stands to benefit. American power is being neutralized, so far as the Sino-Soviet conflict is concerned.

In some of its relations with the West over the past 10 years, the Soviet Union has made tentative gestures to reciprocate the benefit it derived from its de facto Asian alliance. But Moscow never behaved remotely like a full-fledged ally.

It did not even settle the worst of its quarrels with the West, though it talked more seriously than before about possible settlements of some.

So the era of East-West detente was, for the West, largely a period of disappointed hopes. By early 1971, there was little reason for the United States to maintain pressure on China for the sake of improved Soviet-American relations. The Russians therefore must now face the consequences of loss of that pressure. Their de facto ally in Asia is making peace with the common enemy.

American power soon can be, and may well be, redeployed from Asia to points where it could confront the Soviet Union — such as the Mediterranean, and Europe. American diplomacy will be strengthened in the Middle East.

The Russians face the possibility — indeed, the likelihood — that Chinese voices will soon be excoriating the Soviet Union from United Nations platforms. The seating of Peking in the world body will be a far greater diplomatic blow to Moscow than it will be to Washington.

All this the Kremlin stands to lose as a result of a Chinese-American rapprochement. If that is what is emerging — and both Washington and Peking appear to wish it — then the Russians have real reason for concern.

What they will do about it is another matter. They could, as some observers have speculated, intensify efforts for friendlier ties with the West — becoming more amenable, for example, at the SALT talks in Vienna and at the Berlin negotiations. Competing with China for western favor would be one logical reaction.

But it would also be logical to compete with the West for favor in Peking (if, as a practical matter, that option is open to the Kremlin). Or, Moscow could accept a two-front cold war and respond with hostility to both Peking and Washington.

Initial signs are ambiguous. In the area where East-West influences are most directly in conflict, the Middle East, the Soviet Union's clients — the Arabs — have recently turned away from peace; but this is more likely to have been a reaction to Israeli diplomacy than to Soviet influence.

In the Pakistani civil war the Kremlin, like India, is backing the left-wing, Maoist rebels, while China ironically is giving its support to the rightist central government.

But in Ceylon the Soviet Union has joined Britain and the United States in aiding a leftist central government against more extreme "Che Guevarist" guerrillas.

The truth unquestionably is that the Soviet Union, like a mistress who suspects her lover is beginning a new affair, is casting about for effective countermeasures. Her dilemma is complicated by the fact that the new girl is a long-time bitter rival.

Hanoi Embarrassment

Still more difficult, in many respects, is the position in which North Vietnam now finds itself. A reconciliation between its battlefield enemy and a nation which supplies much of its war material would be a major blow.

One obvious impulsion for both Hanoi and Peking is in the direction of peace. China, with every logical motive to hasten and render complete the American disengagement from Indo-China, and Hanoi, with a long-range source of supply in doubt, might well now accept what they should long since have embraced: a new Geneva-type peace conference for Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

And the United States, which sought long and fruitlessly for meaningful Soviet help toward a Vietnam peace, might now receive it from a hitherto unlikely quarter: China.

Nothing which involves the Chinese is certain or readily predictable any longer. What has been demonstrated vividly is the truth of the adage U Thant is fond of quoting: that a nation has no permanent friends and no permanent enemies, but only permanent interests.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

To see the drastic change that can take place when man moves in and clears a forest area, go along the new right-of-way that has been made just north of Francis Park off Munn Road, or from Prospect Lake road. Here the land has been logged, cleared and burned over.

Rocky knolls that had been covered with moss and shallow-rooted plants have been swept by the bulldozers. Now one can see how they were rounded and smoothed by the glaciers. Apparent are the uplift and faults left as the land rose from the sea.

Other knolls that the "cat" did not disturb, reveal a vast change. Compare them with the knolls in the shady areas, for you will see that the lichens and mosses are now dried out and are crumbling. Here the little flowering plants that inhabit such spots have advanced in growth and are tall and spindly.

Among these plants are the blue-eyed Marys, sea blush, rusty saxafrage, the bittercress and the montias. Each of these has developed extra large blossoms as they strive to produce seeds.

Examine some of the freshly sawn stumps. On them one can read the growth rings. In most cases the wide rings are on the north side, among those that grew next to the clearing made some 10 or 12 years ago. They were able to get more sunlight than those close together in the old forest.

This area now will be a hunting place for insects. They will attract the little songbirds that like the open sunny places, especially those which nest in the grasses.

Good browsing ground will also be provided for the deer and a place for the whitefooted mouse to live.

Socreds' Go-Easy Pollution Approach Carries Long-Term Risk

VENABLES

The Big Stick . . . Or Soft Shove?

The war of words continues between those who want to use the quick, big stick on industrial polluters and those who prefer the slow, soft shove.

The main result of the battle so far seems to be confusion.

It is well illustrated by the most recent outbreak of pollution concern over the coal-mining operations of Kaiser Resources Ltd. in the Natal-Michel area.

At the height of the publicity over the escape of coal slurry from retaining ponds, B.C. Pollution Control director W. N. Venables was quoted as saying he couldn't take action against Kaiser because it wasn't under a pollution control permit.

Kaiser had applied for a permit but for technical and legal reasons hadn't yet received one — and in the meantime, the implication was that the company was free to pollute at will.

That wasn't quite the case, but it touched off a wave of outcries from environmentalists and citizens alarmed at an apparent loophole in the Pollution Control Act.

Now, however, it seems that the report that Venables was powerless to deal with polluters who haven't yet received permits was the result of a technical misunderstanding in the flow of information between the PCB and the public.

In fact, Venables said this week, the act provides him with powers to order any polluter to "increase the degree of treatment" of effluent or "alter the manner or point of discharge" by a given date.

Failure to comply could result in an order to cease discharging effluent altogether.

Venables also revealed that he used the power about a dozen times last year to improve the quality of discharges by various polluters.

But despite Venables' assurances that the pollution control branch has had good cooperation from polluters — particularly after the branch has shown that it wasn't "bluffing" — there is still no doubt which side of the "big stick — gentle push" argument the provincial government is on.

The most recent confusion over taking action against polluters appears to be linked to the question of legal action through fines.

The government is clearly opposed to the use of harsh methods such as hauling polluters into court.

This attitude is based partly on a belief by the government that business and industry is comprised largely of good citizens who will do the right thing when pushed in the right direction.

It is also an attitude to be expected of a development-oriented government which has an economic and social philosophy based on the business ethic.

But it is basically a symptom of a belief that the pollution situation in B.C. isn't nearly as bad as a lot of people say it is.

The government obviously believes that there is plenty of time available to bring pollution problems under strict control.

That's why the Pollution Control Branch being run by Venables is under-staffed for the job it is supposed to do.

At present, for instance, there are about 1,725 land and water polluters who have registered with the branch as they were required to do by Jan. 1, 1971, under the Pollution Control Act.

New air pollution controls are adding to the already heavy work-load of the understaffed pollution control branch.

The job facing the branch is to investigate each case and prepare standards for a pollution control permit either at the current level or, presumably, at some lower level of effluent discharge.

The branch has legislative approval for 85 employees including 36 engineers and four biologists, a sharp increase from the 45 positions of the year previous.

But there is no indication when the 1,725 polluters who have registered will all be under the control of permits. It will likely take a long, long time.

Adding to the work load is a requirement that all polluters of the air register by the end of this year, prior to being placed under permit at some indefinite time.

Naturally, the branch plans to pick out the most serious pollution sources and concentrate on them as a priority.

But the government's policy is clearly one of avoiding anything that smacks of a crash program. Everything in its time, the government seems to say, and time means the "due course" that all governments follow so well.

The studied under-staffing and the go-easy approach of the politicians isn't a policy unique to the pollution field.

It would be most surprising if a careful study of government agencies such as the Securities Commission didn't show the same tendency to under-staffing and resulting delay in administering regulations.

The register of B.C. companies, for instance, shows innumerable firms that have failed to comply with annual disclosure rules and other regulations but which have suffered no apparent censure.

It all fits in to the same pattern of government regulation of business and industry by short-staffing, with a short-term saving of taxpayers' dollars and a long-term but incalculable risk to the public interest.

Lots of Steam Is Leaking In Pay Talks

There is no glee in union contract negotiations when one party threatens to strike and the other refuses to give in. This is where it's got to between Victoria and about 270 outside workers.

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

THE WEEK IN CITY HALL

The humor is so thin the two sides won't even sit in the same room together. The only way the provincially-appointed mediator could extract an agreement from them Friday to hold a further meeting next week was to pop back and forth between two rooms — to prevent "hysterical" outbursts, said one insider with a sigh.

Why it has to reach this level of turbulence is something the public rarely gets to understand. The statements made to reporters in the corridors never seem to account for the steam leaking from the door jamb.

It seems futile, therefore, to argue the merits of each side's position in detail — even if that were possible. Even the mayor and aldermen have to rely on the negotiating team to bring them a recommendation that contains, built-in, enough good faith to let them make their decision to accept, or not to accept, with confidence.

Basically, the city has offered a two-year 15 per cent contract, with improved holidays and other benefits.

If the strike threatened by the outside workers comes off, it will be the kind that will soon show: garbage will pile up, street cleaning and repairs will fall behind, the famous flower baskets may not be hung, and generally, the city of gardens will begin to get weedy.

Looking at it another way, a strike could take some of the pressure off the city's 1971 budget, which at present promises a sizeable tax increase for property owners.

If these noticeable aspects contributed to an eventual settlement, they would, of course, obscure some of the more basic issues.

The word was out earlier that this year it was Saanich's turn to man the front lines against the onslaught of the powerful Canadian Union of Public Employees on the surrounding municipalities.

In writing work contracts for publicly paid employees, Greater Victoria governments were in a weaker position than the union because the CUPE effort in any one municipality is part of a co-ordinated strategy of pressure applied by a single union negotiator who travels to each place, knowing exactly where he is going.

Bad Blood Won't Be Forgotten

CUPE Buckled In Saanich

The Saanich contracts were negotiated and signed prior to Victoria's, lending belief to the above-stated theory that Saanich was the testing ground for the whole area. But if CUPE had expected to get tough with the whole area by making an example of Saanich, it failed.

After rejecting an offer by Saanich council, CUPE was told the offer was final. After some minor changes, the CUPE local buckled and accepted the offer.

There seemed to be even less militancy in the CUPE local of Victoria city hall's inside workers. A mediated agreement was readily signed by both council and the employees.

Then came the outside workers, with whom we are now concerned. They voted to strike even before mediation was begun, and later rejected a mediation settlement that council accepted. The settlement was virtually the same as that signed by Saanich and inside employees in Victoria.

There are a number of nasty little observations to make about the progress of these negotiations. First, the original vote to strike-if-necessary-but-not-necessarily - strike was a secret ballot, with a hefty 87 per cent approval of the idea. The latest vote, however, was one of those intimidating occasions where all good and strong men were required to stand up before their brothers and be counted.

Meanwhile, the city administration prepared a letter outlining exactly its proposals, as a way of making certain that each employee got the facts straight. It was to the anger of some union members that the letter arrived by mail a their homes, addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. . . ."

The letter itself suggested the city's proposal be discussed rationally with the employee's wife and family, but (just in case) the opportunity was given the wife to decide for herself whether or not a strike was justified — before Dad got home that night.

The disinterested observer by this time is beginning to view proceedings with some cynicism. He is wondering whether these incidents are perhaps playing a dominant role in the conduct of the two parties.

Muscle Flexing Unnecessary?

Is the negotiator for the city seeing across the table (or through the wall) some unnecessary flexing of CUPE muscles, ordered and directed by a distant office?

Is the employee wriggling in the gap between his union brothers and his wife, who has figured for herself exactly what the difference is between accepting the offer and bearing a strike?

There is even pressure within the union. There are 225 CUPE members whose contract is already signed and who are faced with the spectre of a picket line ringing city hall. They are not obliged by the city to cross the line if it forms (though they won't be paid for staying home) but they are unclear about what music they would face from CUPE if they do cross it.

On the issue in dispute, it seems CUPE believes wage parity with similar workers in Port Alberni is a fair request.

Both Sides Favorable

And parity, without defining the geographical boundaries, appears to be a principle that wins favor on both sides. The city's negotiator, Ed Pearlman, bluntly told council when he recommended the inside workers' settlement, that the city's ability to pay was not an issue (raised taxes can always cover it). The only issue that counts is the wage trend in the area.

It was hopeless, if not foolish, according to Pearlman, to try to offer a settlement below the one already established in Saanich.

If this was Pearlman's way of telling council what they needed to gain strength in the future, he seemed to make the point. Council has appeared genuinely frightened at the prospect of continuing to grant wage hikes above increases in productivity, inflation and the price index.

But if this was Pearlman's philosophy of negotiating in strength, his textbook seemed to need rewriting. When the talks with the outside workers came up, the union didn't want to play that old game, and left the city high and dry with a parity that was suddenly outdated.

So whether or not there is a strike, how to avoid the same thing next time contracts are being written is not even being considered. And the bad blood circulating today may not be all forgotten when that day rolls around.

Clam Days Over

HALIFAX (CP) — Gone are the days of carefree clam-digging in Nova Scotia.

Human sewage and industrial pollution have ended the age-old pastime on miles of Nova Scotian coastline. Most clams now are too contaminated to eat.

Odds are that the great Nova Scotian dish, clam chowder, as served in restaurants now, is made from imported canned clams, while the native shellfish wallow in effluent.

The fisheries department lists 111 contaminated areas in schedule G of the Canada Gazette. They stretch through eight tightly printed columns.

The list contains such pleasant seaside names as Puffey-cup Cove and Merigomish, evocative of fresh air, surf and sea, that are unsafe now for the taking of shellfish.

Anybody who dearly wants to dig clams would be advised to telephone the federal fisheries department and find out a safe place.

The type of pollution is coliform bacteria, always associated with human sewage, and its presence in edible food can cause typhus and hepatitis.

Coliform bacteria thrives in shellfish without affecting them, but if human beings eat the shellfish they can become severely ill.

Running Their Own Show

By ART STOTT

British Columbia's current moving picture star, Chief Dan George, has repeated in an Edmonton speech a familiar observation. Indians, he says, have had to make a transition from bows and arrows to the atom bomb without time to adjust to the startling upheavals around them. He has added that before the Indian could accept help from the white man's omnipotent hand, he must find himself and feel needed.

No one should quarrel with the chief's statement. Yet there is a point in the issue of human evolution, it seems to me, which is too often ignored when this transitional issue is discussed. Isn't it possible that a new-born Indian baby is as well equipped to adjust to the world of today as a new-born white baby? Isn't the adjustment problem created by the environment in which each grows up?

Without understanding the genetics of the thing, it seems to me that the babies could be switched and the Indian child, under conventional rearing by white parents, might be quite as well, or better, adjusted to present society than a white child reared by Indians.

If this is a reasonable hypothesis, then the influence of environment would be compelling in the process of transition.

Just possibly Bernard Gillie will have a chance to provide evidence on that point in the next few years. On his visit here this week, the former S. J. Willis principal who now heads Canada's educational agencies in the Northwest Territories, discussed a significant project taking place in the far north.

A year or so ago, the federal authorities approached a Dog Rib Indian community with the suggestion that it select a committee to decide what kind of school it wished for its particular region.

The committee was guaranteed funds to undertake a study, to visit an American Indian centre where a similar project was under way, and to carry on organizational work toward the creation of an Indian-designed, Indian-run school. It would canvas the community, arrive at a consensus on what seemed most suitable for the children concerned, hire its teachers and select its courses. White federal officialdom would be available for advice and for suggestions to overcome specific difficulties, but the show was up to the Indian community.

The community accepted the offer, sought advice, which was not thrust upon it from above, showed a promising capacity for organization and the school should be functioning next term.

In course material the committee asked for, and received help in drafting, a program that would retain the Indian tribal language for instruction among the primary grades. But it wanted to move gradually over to English as the pupils grew older. The Indian committee did not intend to isolate itself from Canada by a language barrier, though it wished to preserve those elements of culture which made Dog Ribs Dog Ribs.

The project is in its very early stages. Anything could happen, though the inclination to self-determination and the desire to run their own show without antagonism toward the white people seems highly promising. Indians have accepted responsibility and appear to be proving their ability to meet its demands.

★ ★ ★

This is possible in part because of a changing environment. Geographically, the community is remote from populated southern Canada. Some may consider it representative of the peoples Dan George sees emerging from bows and arrows into the atomic age. But among them now are increasing numbers of young people trained, in some instances, as teachers, in others as teachers' aids. They speak the language of the little people when they first come to school, understand the feelings of the beginners and are able to overcome to some degree the strangeness of school.

★ ★ ★

Gillie cites a simple example of this understanding and its importance. Conventional teachers, he points out, learn at an early stage in their careers to speak loudly enough to be heard by the students in the back row. But to Indians, the raised voice is a symbol of anger. When the small children hear a teacher shouting, innocently enough and only to be heard, they assume that the teacher is angry with them because they have done something wrong. They become unhappy. So the word of the experienced to the new teachers in such schools is to speak softly. That, plus fair treatment, brings them student respect and trust.

A simple thing this, but nevertheless an element aiding understanding which smooths the transition and amends the environment.

Perhaps the journey from bows and arrows to the atomic age is shorter than we think. After all, some authorities assure us that the human being, from conception to maturity, repeats in one lifetime the evolution which began in primordial times.

Tourist Drive Relies Upon Civic Grants

Tourists promotion in Greater Victoria could not exist without so-called civic grants, Chamber of Commerce directors were told Friday.

Same Lane, newly-elected president of the Visitor's Bureau, said if the $60,000 provided by city council for the bureau's annual operating budget were eliminated, any "voluntary" scheme for supporting tourist promotion would fail.

Lane pointed out the origin of the system, about 1937, was by means of agreement with the business community that the business tax would provide $25,000 for tourist publicity.

VALUE OF WORK

Over the years the amount had risen with increased requirements, but Lane felt the amount is still not as large as it should be considering the value of work done by the bureau.

Besides straight promotion by means of a selected advertising campaign in regional and national publications on both sides of the border, the bureau provides a wide range of detailed information to visitors once they reach Victoria.

In addition, the bureau has been saddled with responsibility for answering mailed inquiries of an even broader nature, on behalf of the chamber and the city, which are frequently asked for economic statistics by prospective residents and business undertakings seeking new sites.

Lane noted recent criticism emanating from city council is nothing new, that in 1937 the publicity bureau was under attack and has been exposed more or less to criticism since.

But it is not correct to say that public money is being spent for promoting an area of activity from which only a few businesses benefit, Lane insisted.

NOT JUST HOTELS

"Tourist business is everybody's business, not just the hotels, motels and restaurants," said Lane, who is an Esquimalt inn-keeper.

Benefit from tourist trade affects all parts of the business community, and that is beneficial to the rest of the region, he said.

In providing the $60,000, council is not taking money away from pensioners and householders via property taxes, Lane said. The money from the local level is matched by provincial grants earmarked specifically for tourist promotion, he said.

Last year the province did a $473 million tourist business, of which an estimated $100 million was spent on Vancouver Island.

If the bureau had to rely on the community chest for funds, it would fail, Lane said.

THE WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies were mainly clear early this morning along the north coast and over western Vancouver Island. Elsewhere in B.C. it was generally cloudy. A few showers were reported over the east coast of Vancouver Island and the lower mainland.

A weak upper level disturbance just east of the coast mountains will drift slowly eastward across the province today and will produce isolated showers in most districts. However an extensive ridge of high pressure offshore will build slowly eastward over B.C. during the next 48 hours. This ridge will cause a clearing trend this afternoon or this evening and sunny and a little warmer weather on Sunday. Skies will remain clear over the north coast.

Federal Study Urged On Dock Widening

The federal government will be urged by Victoria Chamber of Commerce to do an engineering and feasibility study on widening of Esquimalt Graving Dock and construction of a floating drydock.

The recommendation is motivated by a substantial increase in ship repair requirements foreseen as traffic and size of vessels using B.C. ports grows.

George Dawson, of the chamber's harbor committee, said thought should be given to construction of a floating drydock to accommodate ships up to 250,000 deadweight tons.

Already bulk carriers of 100,000 tons are using Roberts Bank superport and larger vessels are in the works. At present, only San Francisco has docking capacity to accommodate such ships, Dawson said.

Pressure on the city of Victoria should be kept up in the hope that a permanent berth may be created for visiting passenger cruise ships, the committee urged.

PORT AGENT

Currently, Canadian National Railways, the port agent at Ogden Point docks, allocates berths with preference to revenue traffic such as lumber and pulp cargo vessels.

But cruise traffic is becoming more important, with about 16 ships expected to make stops at Ogden Point this summer. Dawson said these include four P & O Lines ships, seven from Pacific Far East Lines (formerly Matson), and five from the Princess Cruise Line.

On the Inner Harbor, 41 visits are expected to be made by two lines which will use CP Steamship wharves.

West Line will work its Alaska cruise schedule from Victoria, with 19 northbound and 20 southbound voyages, and the Norwegian Bergen Line's Meteor will make two visits.

Dawson expects about 16,000 passengers will step ashore this season, en route or commencing their cruises.

TWO VISITS

In 1972 P & O will add two visits to its Victoria schedule, replacing the Arcadia with Oronsay, which is of similar size, Dawson said.

The committee also is studying a proposal made last month by MP David Groos for the institution of special oil slick equipment and procedures in specially designated harbors-of-refuge along the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Fisherman Drowns

PORT ALBERNI — Fisherman Tatfuo Hikida, 45, of Richmond, drowned Friday when he fell overboard while apparently trying to remove some debris from his nets, RCMP said today.

Police said Hikida radioed to another fishing boat a few miles away that he had caught something in his net but could not remove it on his own.

The boat radioed back but got no answer. It went to the scene and found the fisherman floating in the water.

'Borrow At Home'

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister E. J. Benson appealed anew Friday to provincial governments and investment dealers to restrict borrowings in foreign markets, thereby easing upward pressure on the value of the Canadian dollar on international exchanges.

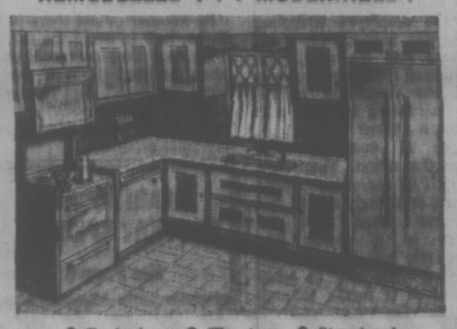

He said in a letter released by his office that foreign borrowings have been reduced since previous appeals last year. But he urged provincial treasurers and big investment dealers to make the maximum possible use of the Canadian capital market instead of foreign markets.

FAULTS FOUND IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five definite faults have been discovered in downtown Vancouver paralleling the city's waterfront and several more are indicated, geologist Roy Blunden says in a report released Friday.

The report, prepared in connection with engineering studies on the proposed second crossing of Burrard Inlet, said the faults —while not necessarily indicating higher earthquake risk—are of major importance to future engineering plans in the city.

Mr. Blunden said the faults—uncovered as a result of test drilling in Burrard Inlet over the past two years — are indications of earlier mountain activity. He said there may be other faults hidden beneath the "paved urban environment."

PORTION OF BASIN

Mr. Blunden said minor earthquakes have been occasionally recorded in the Vancouver area since the end of the last century. From 1930 to 1950 there were several earthquakes of widespread origins.

The downtown peninsula occupies only a portion of the northern rim of the Whatcom sedimentary basin—a 35-mile tract extending from British Columbia's mountains to the Chuckanut Mountains in Washington State, he said.

The area was part of a coastal plain surrounded by low hills that increased in height over millions of years.

Dr. Hubert Gabriels, head of the Cordilleran section of the federal Geological Survey of Canada, said in the report Vancouver is not in danger of experiencing quakes as severe as those sometimes experienced in California.

He said the San Andreas fault which runs through San Francisco, Calif., is more dangerous because it is longer and because it is associated with movements of the Pacific sea floor.

"However, the existence of faults indicates the earth hasn't got its original strength," said Dr. Gabriels.

"Downtown Vancouver might get quite a jar with even a 3 or 4 earthquake (on the Richter scale) on one of the faults, but it would probably last only a couple of seconds."

One of the faults runs through Coal Harbor and is believed to continue through Stanley Park close to the proposed site of the controversial Four Seasons project.

Another fault runs along the waterfront to the Project 200 site. Officials said this week a 35-storey office tower under construction at the site is designed to withstand major quakes of 8.5 on the Richter scale. But the known fault system of the east coast of Vancouver Island—where there was a major earthquake centred at Comox in 1946—is a greater threat to Vancouver than the local faults, Mr. Blunden said.

Park Enjoyment Said of Secondary Importance

VANCOUVER (CP) — Preservation of Canada's four Rocky Mountain national parks in their natural state is of prime importance and development of them for the enjoyment of more people should proceed cautiously, British Columbia conservationists said Friday.

In a brief to the national and historic parks branch, which will hold a public hearing here Monday, the B.C. section of the National and Provincial Parks Association of Canada said people's enjoyment of the parks is of secondary importance.

The two principles expressed in the National Parks Act — to provide enjoyment and education and to preserve the parks for future generations — are divergent and over-emphasis on one will impair the other, the brief said.

"We have to strike a balance. The basic problem is we are dealing with forces and relationships about which we know so little.

CHAIN REACTION?

"We do know that any major interference with the delicate web of ecological inter-relations has a very wide-ranging chain reaction; that changes in it beyond a certain point are not irreversible; that man has not yet learned to change his basic instincts and requirements."

The association said it is "neither possible nor desirable for the national parks to provide for the enjoyment and education of all people; we must therefore be selective." Persons travelling on foot should be given preference.

The brief recommends:

—No new roads in the four parks—Banff, Yoho, Jasper and Kootenay;

—Limitation of the number of visitors;

—No further establishment of campsites, trails or shelters unless they can be properly supervised to prevent garbage accumulation or damage to the land;

—Exclusion of snowmobiles, motorcycles and all-terrain vehicles;

—A significant expansion of programs to evaluate and interpret the parks' natural assets and devise methods of protecting them;

—No developments which attract visitors "for the sake of their own facilities, such as Chateau Lake Louise or Jasper Park Lodge."

The national and historic parks branch starts hearings here on Monday on development proposals for the parks.

The national and historic parks branch starts hearings here on Monday on development proposals for the parks.

Meanwhile, B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston said he is opposed to inclusion of the "Nitinat triangle" on Vancouver Island in the new west coast national park.

Replying to a letter from Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien to the provincial Forest Industries Council asking them to forgo immediate gain to preserve a wilderness area, he said 500 logging jobs would be lost if the area is included. Two B.C. companies hold timber leases there.

If the VW 411 with 4 doors isn't big enough, how about one with 3 doors?

If our 411 4-door sedan doesn't solve your transportation problem, there's still another door open to you: The VW 411 Wagon.

Say your main problem is carrying space. Open up its big back door and put all your problems behind you. Because back there is a gaping 24.7 cu. ft. of room. (Fold down the rear seat and you can add another 24 cu. ft.)

Open up the front hood of a 411 Wagon and what have you got? Nothing. (The engine's in the rear.) But that 14.1 cu. ft. of nothing can swallow a lot of luggage, golf clubs, or what have you.

All in all, 62.8 cubic feet of room to carry things in.

True, there are wagons around that carry more. The only trouble is, you have to carry around more wagon.

The 411 is a good 3 feet shorter than most of the biggies, so you won't have to roam the parking lot looking for a big enough berth.

Besides this impressive luggage story, the 411 comes with an impressive list of extras that we don't ask you extra for: Electronic fuel-injection. Front disc brakes. Steel-belted radial tires. Double-joint rear axle. Contoured bucket seats. Electric rear window defroster. Even an electric clock.

VW 411 WAGON The 411 Wagon. $3,440* loaded.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Pac. N. Gas

R. M. Rutherford, president of Pacific Northern Gas Ltd., reports the company earned a profit of $270,000 in the first quarter of 1970.

After an allowance for one-quarter of the annual preferred dividends due, first-quarter earnings on common shares amounted to 15.5 cents per share.

Total gas sales for the quarter were up 32 per cent over the similar period of 1970. Residental and commercial gas sales were up 96 per cent from the same period in 1970.

Transair

Transair Ltd., Winnipeg-based regional airline, reports consolidated net income of $22,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, vs. a loss of $2 million in 1969.

Operating revenues in 1970 were $14 million compared with $11 million the previous year.

The company said cost reduction programs, the introduction of jet equipment in 1970 and an improved revenue base, account for the improved position.

Networks

Profits of the three major U.S. television networks declined more than 25 per cent in 1970, reports the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC said net broadcast revenues of ABC, CBS, NBC, and their 15-owned and operated television stations totalled $1.46 billion in the year, a decline of seven-tenths of 1 per cent from 1969.

This, coupled with a 3.9 per cent rise in expenses, cut profits before income taxes by 25.9 per cent, to $167.5 million.

AMC

American Motors Corp. slipped back into the red in the January-March quarter but still managed to post a $1.1 million profit for the first half of its 1971 fiscal year.

The fourth-ranking U.S. automaker lost $4.8 million, or 19 cents a share, in the second quarter of its fiscal year.

In the comparable period of 1970, AMC lost $10.1 million (47 cents.).

Goodyear

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. had record sales of $809.27 million for the first quarter of 1970.

Sales topped the previous first-quarter record of $766.14 million set in 1970.

Net income this quarter was $32.2 million or 44 cents a share, compared with $32.29 million (45 cents) for the first quarter last year.

J-M Corp.

Sales for the quarter amounted to $123.47 million compared with $124.78 million for the same period in 1970, while earnings were $5 million or 30 cents a share, compared with $6.26 million (38 cents) in 1970.

Int. Paints

International Paints (Canada) Ltd. of Montreal increased sales in 1970 to $16.4 million from $14.8 million and net income to $267,311 from $252,270.

The meeting was held in Vancouver to honor the 80th birthday of its chairman, Frank M. Ross, former lieutenant-governor of British Columbia who has been associated with International Paints since its founding in Vancouver in 1924.

Earnings per participating preferred and common share, after preferred dividends, were $2.66 compared with $2.47.

Wall Street Week Ends On the Rise

Market indices showed gains for the week. The largest came on the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial blue chip stocks, which climbed 7.58 points to 947.79.

Analysts attributed the upswing to optimism over first-quarter corporate earnings reports and to the feeling that consumer spending is beginning to pick up.

Robert Johnson, analyst with Paine Webber Jackson and Curtis, called the mid-week dip "purely technical," and of no lasting significance.

New York Stock Exchange volume dipped to 92.09 million shares for the week, down from the 102.89 million shares traded the previous week.

Of the 1,837 stocks traded on the big board, 814 advanced and 883 declined. However, the broadly-based New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,300 common stocks climbed 0.26 points to 57.32.

New President For Granby

VANCOUVER (CP) — P. Robert Matthew, 44, was elected president of Granby Mining Co. Ltd. following the company's annual meeting. Previously, Mr. Matthew was vice-president, operations.

Outgoing president Lawrence T. Postle told shareholders the company's net earnings for the first quarter ended March 31 were $906,000 or 63 cents a share, including a non-recurring gain of $465,000 on the sale of shares held in Newmont Mining Corp.

The earnings for the first quarter last year were $1,496,000 or $1.04 a share. Earnings for all 1970 were $4,344,953, equivalent to $3.01 a share.

B.C. Ad Ban Worries Southam

TORONTO (CP) — Southam Press Ltd. estimates profits will decline by about four cents a share if cigarette advertising is banned across Canada and liquor advertising is not allowed in British Columbia.

St. Clair Balfour, president, told shareholders at the annual meeting the potential advertising losses and increased labor and newsprint costs will create problems with maintaining earnings in the second half of this year.

Southam's earnings, previously reported, were $2.53 a share last year compared with $2.60 in 1969.

The B.C. legislature has passed a bill outlawing tobacco and liquor advertising in the province, effective Sept. 1. Federal authorities are studying the possibility of banning cigarette advertising.

BETTER THAN 1970

Mr. Balfour said Southam's first-quarter results will be published in a few days and "will show an improvement over 1970, when the figures were sharply off because of a shutdown by the Vancouver newspapers."

He said second-quarter earnings are also expected to be greater than profits in the comparable period of 1970.

"There has been a slight improvement in the tone of business, but the improvement is hesitant and not uniform across the country."

Mr. Balfour said Southam Printing Co. continues to progress.

"For the next two years at least, we will be making a heavy investment in new equipment, not only to take care of the growing volume of business, but to take advantage, wherever we can, of new developments and faster machines," he said.

REVIEWS PROSPECTS

Gordon N. Fisher, vice-president and managing director, reviewed prospects for the company during this deacde and noted that the 1970 annual report announced establishment of a research and development sub-committee of the board.

"The work of this committee is initially being confined to the search for and review of investment opportunities outside the newspaper business. But this does not mean we intend to neglect our newspapers.

"We will shortly be establishing a second group, drawn from our newspaper divisions, to concentrate its efforts on the specific opportunities for both technical and product improvement related to newspaper publishing."

Mr. Fisher predicted "the company's newspapers will still be the mainstay of its business in terms of both revenue and profit" in 1980.

YOUR TAXES . . .

. . . By I. H. ASPER

Tax Debate Examines Spending Programs

When one observes, at close range, the continuing debate over tax reform in Canada, he tends to assume the issues involve questions of tax technique, administration of the system, the kind of incentives needed to give small business the opportunity to grow, and the like.

But when the argument is viewed from a panorama-granting distance, the tax debate assumes a different perspective. It reveals itself as part of a much larger, though as yet uncrystallized struggle. It appears as part of a still slumbering, but fitful and growing, inarticulate resistance to the direction in which society as a whole is galloping.

Many of the federal government tax plan's strongest critics can't really explain why they oppose it — they just fell intuitively that something is drastically wrong, that resistance is essential if some undefined but fundamental values are to be preserved. They are right.

VAGUE CONCEPTS

On the other hand, those who are the reform plan's staunchest advocates, support it in the name of equally vague and elusive concepts such as "equity," "ability to pay" and the like, though they, too, often cannot define their own terms. And they too are right.

The majority of commentators on tax reform, be they lawyers, editorialists, legislators, accountants or economists, are untrained for this debate for they usually lack training in one seeming unrelated field — philosophy. But the truth is that once the technicians and professionals have made their case, as they now have, the tax reform issue must be fitted into the broader picture and judged in terms of where society as a whole wants to go.

Tax Reform, and here the word "reform" is used in its propoganda rather than philosophical sense, is really part of a larger contest. The theoreticians, analysts and specialists have had their day. They have produced a plethora of opinion and date showing how the new structure will take us closer to the egalitarian society — the state-run economy, the efficient distribution of wealth and services by government, the minimization of individual entrepreneurship in favor of the maximization of group economic sharing and effort.

That may very well be what Canadians want — for even those who favor retention of the present fiscal system in Canada admit that that is where it is taking us, and only resist the federal tax plan because it will hurry up the process.

But across the land, voices of dissent still remain, even though they do not really direct their volume at the fundamental issue.

GROWING PROTEST

In many parts of Canada one can hear a growing protest generated by the fear that the welfare state may lead us to the free-ride society. When one speaks of the economic problems of our senior citizens, he is increasingly confronted with the harsh response: Why didn't they save for their old age? When commentators raise the possibility of a guaranteed annual income plan, he hears more frequently the retort that perhaps Prime Minister Trudeau was correct in 1968 when he casually observed: "We've had enough of this free stuff."

There now exists a danger of social backlash which if mobilized might strike down the good as well as the bad in our system. Perhaps governments have pressed the taxpayer and the economy too hard in order to extract from the private sector the funds required for social action programs. There is evidence, by no means conclusive that the pendulum may again be ready to reverse its swing.

The tax reform debate has been a catalyst. Thousands of Canadians who never gave the tax system serious thought, except to grumble every April 30, have been flooded with tax commentaries for several years now, ever since the publication of the Carter Commission Report in 1967. They now have grasped the fact that the tax system pervades their lives and shapes their destinies more than any other set of laws.

And more important, the general public has discovered the connection between government spending, election promises and taxes. A resentment, though not yet shared by the majority in Canada, is turning into bitterness and anger.

Thus you hear new voices raised in anger when, as recently occurred in Manitoba, the government concedes it is paying welfare to strikers in the mining town of Flin Flon, where a three-month-old dispute is crippling the economic well-being of innocent bystanders in the single industry town. You hear demands for laws to end the right to strike; for an abolition of public welfare systems.

When people of goodwill learn that, in Manitoba, the 18-year-old children of wealthy parents qualify for welfare, they respond with belligerence toward a tax system which makes this possible. Just as the tax rules are held in contempt when people feel that there are others who are beating the system, so it is ridiculed by those who go to work each day feeling that part of their efforts result in supporting the alleged or suspected free-riders.

There are no blacks, no whites and no simple solutions because these issues call into question the whole philosophy of the modern state, the role of government and the responsibility of each individual in a society.

If government is to be a force which unites rather than divides people; if it is to retain the confidence and willingness of citizens to pay taxes to allow it to combat the real and serious social problems which still remain unconquered, such as poverty, and economic development of our native peoples, all governments will do well to reform government spending programs concurrently with the reform of the tax system.

For what has emerged clearly from the tax reform debate is that not only must the public accept the techniques used for raising public funds, it is equally important that it respects and has confidence in the use to which tax revenues are put.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

THE WORLD WE LIVE IN. 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. The world's water supply is in focus tonight, as The World examines various experiments in progress to seek out means of preserving the planet's water and putting it to the best possible use.

ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun.) That pro Jimmy Durante joins Andy and other guests Mike Douglas, Rick Nelson and Linda Ronstadt. Durante and Douglas ring up some nostalgia with "Gone Fishing" (remember when Bing and Satchmo made the record?) and Andy offers "Spanish Harlem," "Happy Together" and "September Song." Miss Ronstadt, a pretty newcomer from Tucson, sings "She's a Lovely Woman." She sure is.

LAWRENCE WELK SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 4. Since nostalgia is "in" these days, who is better equipped to take a trip into yesteryear than the king of a-one-a-two-a-three? Welk pays tribute tonight to the Roaring Twenties, and "No, No Nannette" with guest Mary Lou Metzger and the Hotsy Totsy Boys.

SATURDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "Boom." Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton put their $2,000,000 worth of talent (that's what they got paid) to gether and made "Boom," which was Tennessee Williams' screen adaptation from his own stage work, "The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore." The picture is an artistic fiasco and the last time any producer agreed to Burton and Taylor working together at those prices. The film is a jumble of confusion with Miss Taylor playing a six-times widowed multi-millionairess who becomes enchanted by a deceitful but charming poet, Burton.

MY THREE SONS. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. It's a question of interpretation. When Chip gives Polly Williams a locket for her birthday (18th) are they simply going steady, or are they in fact engaged? It gets a little sticky for Chip, but he works it all out without any emotional distress.

ARNIE. 9 p.m., Channel 7. Arnie (Herschel Bernardi) really becomes one of the gang — the executive branch, that is — when he's invited to join their weekly poker game. But Arnie has plenty of cutthroat poker experience from his earlier days on the loading platform, and the other executives become his weekly lamb. Funny bits as Arnie tries to overcome the sticky situation.

MARY TYLER MOORE. 8 p.m., Channel 8; 9:30 p.m., Channel 7. Former series star Monte Markham (The Second Hundred Years) guests in this episode. He's a big-time war correspondent who returns to the place where he got his start — and discovers Mary, the girl of his dreams. Cute enough episode.

MANNIX. 10 p.m., Channel 7. A very close brush with death for Mannix (Mike Connors) awaits the rising sun. Mannix runs into a plot for a violent takeover of the country by anarchists. Mannix is taken hostage and scheduled to be executed at dawn, but he works himself free and saves the country.

Sunday

GUNSMOKE. 5:30 p.m., Channels 6 and 8. Jon Voight, of Midnight Cowboy fame, plays a larcenous trapper in this episode, filmed in 1967. That, by the way, was before Voight was a star. He and a partner steal $20,000 from a trader who wouldn't buy their furs. That's good money for a trapper.

WONDERFUL WORLD OF DISNEY. 6 p.m., Channel 2; 7:30, Channel 5. "The Ballad of Hector" (Part I). A mean old circus owner dognaps Hector, an airedale who belong to first mate Bill Mantel (Craig Hill) and plans to use the canine in a dog act for the sideshow. But Hector escapes and is befriended by a young seaman.

HOGAN'S HEROES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Rerun.) There's plenty of fun at Colonel Klink's expense. Old Zig Heil. Baldy is told he's terribly out of shape, and unless he shapes up it will be off to the Russian front. Hogan and the boys dream up a few outrageous exercises for Klink.

ED SULLIVAN SHOW. 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12. (Rerun.) A really big entertaining hour for country-Western fans. It's a special about state fairs, and, with Arthur Godfrey sort of co-hosting, Ed presents such top country performers as Sonny James, Loretta Lynn, Archie Campbell, the Stony Mountain cloggers and banjoist Warren Pence.

BILL COSBY SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. (Rerun.) Rupert Crosse guest stars in this episode, which deals with a letter which threatens to become a collector's item. The letter has been willed to Chet Kincaid (Cosby) by an aunt and it supposedly was written by Abraham Lincoln to her grandmother. Crosse is a shady lawyer who saw a chance to profit on the deal, but things don't work out that way.

BONANZA. 9 p.m., Channel 5. An unhappy, drought-plagued town hires a pair of rainmakers in Virginia City and then become downright distressed when they fail to open the skies. It takes a lot of doing from the Cartwrights to prevent the townspeople from exacting their revenge.

SUNDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun.) "Shadow on the Land." The premise is what would it be like if totalitarianism took over in the United States and how a group of freedom lovers fight for its preservation. The cast is good: Gene Hockman, John Forsythe, Jackie Cooper, Janice Rule and Carol Lynley.

FANFARE. 10 p.m., Channel 9. Arlo Guthrie's segment in NET's "Sounds of Summer" originally telecast in August, 1969, has been exerpted for reshowing as part of the Fanfare series. In the relaxed and informal atmosphere of a summer concert, Guthrie sings and plays at the Mississippi River Festival, accompanying himself on 6- and 12-string guitars. He offers many of his own compositions, including "The Motor Cycle Song," "Amazing Grade" and other songs which have made him a star among folk singers.

Heifetz Gets to Public With TV Concert Debut

By FRANCIS ROBINSON
(Assistant Manager, Metropolitan Opera Assn.)

NEW YORK (Special)—When Jascha Heifetz made what he called his concert debut on television, his producer estimated the audience was greater than the total of all the audiences which have heard him in his more than 60 years before the public.

The hour-long production was first telecast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation on April 12. It was repeated by the National Broadcasting Corporation in the United States Friday evening.

Heifetz first played the violin publicly in Kovno in his native Russia at the age of seven. Five years later he moved on to Berlin. He was 16 when he made his historic American debut. His concert tours have carried him more than 2 million miles, almost the distance of five round-trips to the moon. He gave up heavy concertizing about 15 years ago.

His manager, William M. Judd, pulls out a figure of a hundred concerts a year as a generous estimate for the 40 years between that Carnegie Hall debut and the time he began to limit his appearances. Another random figure is 3,000 as the average capacity of the halls he played. The attendance would roughly add up to 12 million. Paul Louis, the producer of the Heifetz special for the Bell System Family Theatre, expected Friday's audience on NBC television to top this.

The special was more than a concert. There were informal shots of Heifetz and for the first time his speaking voice is on film. The musical program was typically Heifetz although the order was unorthodox. This time he began with the encores. First came the rondo from the "Haffner" serenade of Mozart. The transcription is by Fritz Kreisler. One need not be astrologically oriented to get a tingle out of the fact that Kreisler and Heifetz have the same birthday, Dec. 2, one 1875, the other 1901.

The rest of the group included the march from "The Love for Three Oranges" by Prokofieff, arranged by Heifetz; Debussy's "Girl with the Flaxen Hair," arranged by Hartmann; and "It Ain't Necessarily So." Heifetz and Gershwin were friends and Heifetz' transcriptions of half a dozen of the hit numbers from "Porgy and Bess" have been favorites for a long time. Brooks Smith was at the piano.

Instead of opening the program, Bach came in the middle and the Chaconne from the Partita in D minor may set a record of sorts. It is safe to venture that never before has a major TV network opened its cables to 12 minutes and 40 seconds of unaccompanied violin. Even a tone-deaf viewer will find the beauty of Heifetz' left hand irresistible — unique and unforgettable.

HEIFETZ . . . audience of 12 million

The French national orchestra joined Heifetz in the Bruch Scottish Fantasy, another of his dazzling showpieces, before a wonderfully youthful audience at the Champs-Elysees Theatre in Paris.

For some time now Heifetz has performed the major works for violin and orchestra without conductor. True, he indicates tempi and gives certain cues, as you will see, but he doesn't consider himself a conductor. His purpose is simply to bring these works to life in an atmosphere where each musician is a responsible collaborator reacting to one musical concept.

Now, a word about his violin which comes over so gorgeously in living color. It is his favorite, a Guarnerius dated 1742. It is called the "David" Guarnerius, since it belonged to Ferdinand David, who helped Mendelssohn with his violin concerto and gave the first performance of the work on this very instrument in 1845.

Today, Heifetz doesn't stray very far from his Beverly Hills home or his weekend house on Malibu Beach. Most of his time he gives to teaching.

After Paris we saw him again with his pupils. Of teaching he has said: "An artist is entrusted with something for a brief time. It is an artist's duty to hand it on, like those Greek runners who passed on the lighted torch one to another."

To conclude, may I offer my own bit of Heifetz hagiography. A few weeks after we opened the new Metropolitan Opera House, Bill Judd telephoned and asked if I would show Heifetz through the building.

It was a fearful day. Rain was coming down is buckets. Drivers still have difficulty finding our stage door and Heifetz was late. It annoyed him. Woe to him if you are not on time with him; he demands the same of himself.

My usual visitors' route is to go straight to the top floor and walk down. Heifetz stopped me before I could finish the sentence.

"Let's pretend I'm a singer, God forbid," he said. "Take me to the dressing rooms just as your people come in." Not one of those hundreds of grubby cubicles unfit for human occupation of those touring years had gone unforgotten. He wanted to be sure the artists today had a better lot.

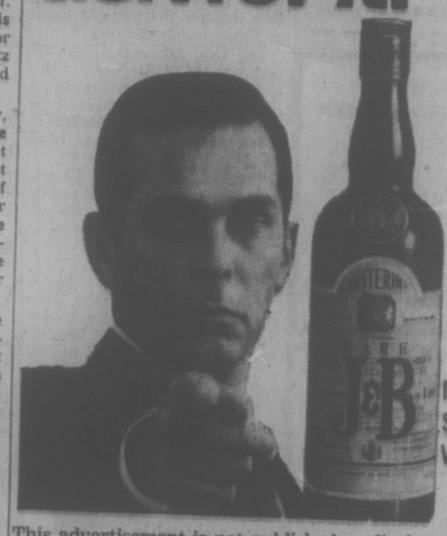

The tour through the house was a royal progress. Rehearsals stopped. I don't think Heifetz was displeased with the accolade. We got to the orchestra pit and he tried one of the new tubular chairs. It squeaked. I was afraid to look at him. I prayed for the floor to swallow me. I knew what I would read in his Tartar eyes: "A $46 million opera house and your musicians' chairs squeak." At another house in Lincoln Centre a section of the wall gave in at his tap. A great wad of something that looked like cotton waste fell out. The house manager said it was "acoustic material." No answer to that either.

He is like a doctor who knows where the infection is and goes straight to it.

He also knows where glory dwells.

Recycled Cash Won't Spend Worth a Darn

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Gloria J. Anderson, 27, contributed $5,000 more than she had planned to an Earth Week paper-recycling drive.

She told drive officials today that when she bundled some newspapers to be picked up, she accidentally wrapped up a plastic bag that contained the $5,000 in cash. The paper was picked up Tuesday and is beyond recall.

"I guess I was kind of stupid not to put the money in a bank," she said. She discovered the money was missing on Wednesday.

Unseated Acquittal

PUEBLO, Colo (AP) — Fifteen-year-old Lawrence Cortez was acquitted when he told the judge that his horse had thrown him before colliding with an automobile.

Cortez, who said he was riding bareback, had been charged with riding a horse through a stop sign at an intersection.

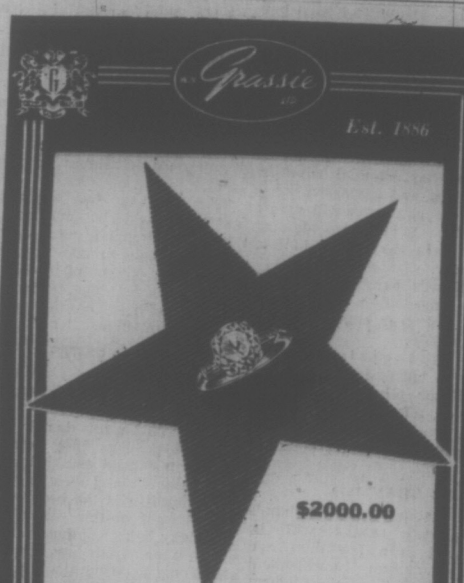

Judge Fred J. Mack of municipal court ruled Friday that a rider not on board was not responsible for his steed's actions. He then advised Cortez to get a saddle.

DANGER FOR STARS . . . . . . IN TIMES ISLAND OPEN

Big Talent in Dark-Horse Flock

In early matches, the greatest attention in the Times Vancouver Island Open gold tournament invariably is directed at the medallist and past champions.

But the flock lurking in the shadows is not without talented players who are capable of upsetting established stars.

The 19-year-old Cedar Hill ace is one of 32 who qualified for Sunday's first-round match-play battles at Colwood. Although it is the first time Girard has qualified for the championship, he has the game and credentials to warrant "dark-horse" rating.

Last year, for example, he topped a professional-studded field to win top honors in the annual Cedar Hill Open.

Girard's qualifying-round feat at Victoria Golf Club last Sunday also rates mention. He scored a five-over-par 74 despite taking a double-bogey seven on the first hole and a fat eight on the par-four 11th.

In other words, he was one under par for the 16 other holes played.

Girard, who faces Colwood's Ron Bell in Sunday's opening round, stands in the "dark-horse flock" with the likes of Keith Burrell, Sid Murdoch, Greg Candlish, Bruce Rands, Rick Kent, Ken Nott, Ron Howard Jr., Dave McCall and Urban Allen.

Allen faces Gorge Vale clubmate Bob Beauchemin, the 16-year-old southpaw who won last Sunday's medal with a one-under-par 68. That's one of the matches that will be watched with interest at Colwood.

Rands, Nott and Glen Meadows' veteran Brian Sluggett draw Sunday's other key assignments. Each will face a pro who has twice reigned as the Island Open champion.

IT'S A DATE

BILL WALKER

Ron Jay was saying that when he played with Peterborough, the Timbermen had a plan that he learned to believe in. And as co-coach of the Victoria Shamrocks of the Western Lacrosse Association, he plans to put the idea into effect here this season.

It is Jay's contention that what made Peterborough great in the old days, was the fact that they promoted their younger players to the senior team from time to time so that they could get the experience needed to compete in senior company.

It wasn't that only one player would be called up. "That doesn't always work," said Jay. "The Timbermen used to take up a whole line from their junior club." Then he explained why.

"When one player comes up, he is forced to play with the seniors, and if he is on the forward line, he can become awfully lonely before the game is over. The regulars just won't pass to him, unless they have to. They look for one another first."

This is natural, Jay explained, because the regular knows where his teammate will be (or should be). And that leaves the junior running around the floor by himself. "However, if you bring up a complete line, then they are on common ground. They will pass to one another." Jay went on to add that, in his opinion, this is absolutely necessary to the future success of any lacrosse club.

For those who weren't around a few seasons ago, the Shamrocks were at one time kings of Canadian lacrosse, or failing that a member of the knightly court where the championships were decided. The club then fell on evil times, and at one time there was a move afoot to boot the Islanders right out of the inter-city league.

Fortunately it didn't come about because there were some in town who didn't want to see the league torn apart.

Last year, for instance, was the start on a rebuilding plan. "It wasn't quite as successful as we had hoped," said club president Chris Randall. "But I feel that the end result was gratifying. The club enthusiasm was much greater than the previous season, and it is better than ever this year.

Or as Randall further explained:

"This year we have had 29 players at practice . . . last year we went with 18 . . . two years ago there were times when we had to draw players from mainland clubs to meet our league commitments.

It was also suggested that if mainland-based clubs appear stronger because of player additions, by the same token so do the Shamrocks. The return of Ed Kowalyk and Ray Beech, and the inclusion of Ivan Thompson in the lineup, are just three of the main considerations.

"We feel we have reason to be very optimistic," Randall emphasized.

And if the Shamrocks didn't do all that well last season, Jay offered a significant explanation: "When you consider we lost eight games by one or two goals . . . which is 16 points . . . and, well, that would have put us in second place."

Jay made another salient point. But then he's a purist from the old school. He remarked that he had seen one member of the team taking extra practice to break in his new stick. This, in itself, may not sound unusual, until it is explained that this extra practice was at an outdoor box, and on the player's own time.

"I haven't seen that happening here ever before," said the coach, who obviously was impressed.

But with New Westminster still the power, and the other mainland clubs reportedly on the make, what about the true extent of the Shamrock position? Will the club be able to improve enough to threaten the others?

"It is going to be tough," but I think it can be done," said Jay. "The interest by the players is at a peak, and I have only one rule, at the moment. It's that a member of this year's club must WANT to play. Otherwise he needn't bother turning out."

●

And how, for example, will Thompson fit in?

Everybody was enthusiastic about the big, good-looking fellow who came west highly recommended by former Shamrock Jack Bionda. Especially Ranjit Dillon, who mentioned one phase of Thompson's talent.

Ranjit (he's the big one) was telling of a play in practice. "I went for this loose ball," he said. "There was a swish of a stick, Thompson had the ball and was streaking down the floor. I took after him, couldn't catch him. Nirmal (that's the small Dillon), passed me, and Ivan was drawing away from both of us."

Which isn't bad when it is considered that Ranjit and Nirmal are usually considered to be as fast as anyone else in the room.

But not any more.

DENNY McLAIN
. . . acts up again

McLain Finds Ump's Hearing Just Too Keen

By The Associated Press

Denny McLain says umpire Art Frantz needs an eye examination. However, there's nothing wrong with the umpire's hearing.

The Washington pitcher chided Frantz once too often for his calls behind the plate in Friday night's game with Milwaukee and had to take an early shower.

"He used abusive language," said Frantz. "I told him to watch his language or I would throw him out. He didn't . . . and I did."

McLain's uneasy exit came in the sixth inning after the Brewers scored all the runs in their 4-0 victory.

Dennis simmered when he thought Frantz missed a strike call on a 3-2 pitch to Mike Hegan that put runners on first and second with two out. Dave May then followed another walk with a two-run double. McLain smoldered after another questioned call on Roberto Pena, who drilled a two-run single.

After the hit, McLain was banished.

WASN'T ONE PITCH

"It wasn't any one pitch that got me mad," said McLain, no stranger to hot water. "Frantz was missing calls from the first inning. The guy is taking money out of my mouth when he misses them in critical situations. If he's a major league umpire, he should be able to bear down when the pressure's on, just like a player does."

The controversial McLain said he "never said anything directly to Mr. Frantz until he threw me out."

What did he say then?

"I remember what I said—and I know it was nothing nasty," said Dennis the Menace.

After their tete-a-tete, the swaggering right-hander strolled off the mound and fired the baseball into the stands.

That last gesture will be included in Frantz' report of the incident to baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, the umpire assured McLain, who's still on probation for other difficulties with Detroit Tigers.

The former Cy Young Award winner was traded to Washington during the winter after suspensions for involvement with gamblers, splashing sportswriters with water and carrying a gun. He was reinstated by Kuhn after psychiatric tests showed McLain was "not ill" but "was subject to emotional stress."

BOSOX WIN

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox bounced Chicago White Sox 7-1; New York Yankees clubbed Minnesota Twins 7-3; Kansas City Royals defeated Cleveland Indians 5-2; Baltimore Orioles walloped California Angels 8-2 and Oakland Athletics stopped Detroit Tigers 9-2.

In the National League, San Francisco Giants' Steve Stone blanked Pittsburgh 2-0 to hand the Pirates their third shoutout in eight games. Elsewhere, New York Mets struggled 12 innings to edge Chicago Cubs 7-6, Philadelphia Phillies topped St. Louis Cardinals 8-6, and Los Angeles Dodgers shut out Cincinnati Reds 3-0. San Diego Padres game at Atlanta was rained out.

McLain, who pitched hitless ball for five innings, got in trouble in the sixth. After he got the heave-ho, it was all Milwaukee's show as rookie Bill Parsons and reliever Ken Sanders combined for a seven-hitter against the Senators.

Parsons twice retired slugger Frank Howard with two on, but after a walk to Mike Epstein and Joe Foy's single in the eighth, Sanders came in to get Howard and Tom McCraw.

CFL BRAIN TRUST TO HUDDLE HERE

General managers of the nine Canadian Football League teams move into Victoria for a two-day meeting next week.

Joining the managers in conference will be CFL commissioner Jake Guadaur and secretary-treasurer Greg Fulton.

Representing the teams will be John (Red) O'Quinn, Montreal Alouettes; Frank Clair, Ottawa Rough Riders; Lew Hayman, Toronto Argonauts; Ralph Sazio, Hamilton Tiger-Cats; Earl Lunsford, Winnipeg Blue Bombers; Ken Preston, Saskatchewan Roughriders; Rogers Lehew, Calgary Stampeders; Norm Kimball, Edmonton Eskimos, and Jackie Parker, B.C. Lions.

The managers, who get together between the CFL's semi-annual and annual meetings, confine their meeting to "discussion of technicalities." Results of the meetings are passed on to the CFL's annual conference in the form of "recommendations."

Perhaps the major item on the agenda will be finalization of the 1972 schedule. Managers also will discuss several CFL bylaw changes, transportation problems and the always-static relationship between clubs and the players' association.

Victoria is the first non-league city to host the managers' meeting.

The meetings start Tuesday and wind up Wednesday.

Ted Naff Takes State Golf Title

TACOMA (AP) — Ted Naff of Bellevue beat Olympia's Duke Matthews 3 and 2 to win the 38th annual Washington State PGA golf title.

In the semi-finals, Naff had to go 20 holes to beat Al Feldman, 59, the 1962 champ from Auburn.

Tim's Work on Defence Rates Raves From Emile

NEW YORK (CP) — Tim Horton, at 41 the second-oldest player in the National Hockey League, has emerged to provide a key contribution for New York Rangers in their Stanley Cup semi-finals against Chicago Black Hawks.

With the Rangers carrying a 2-1 lead over the Hawks in the best-of-seven series, New York coach Emile Francis took time out Friday to laud the veteran defenceman for his role in holding off the high-scoring Hawks.

"Tim has been outstanding, game in and game out," said Francis. "He is as steady as the Rock of Gibraltar. I can't say enough about that guy."

Horton, who came to the Rangers from Toronto Maple Leafs last season, sometimes seems to be overlooked among New York's youthful defencemen such as Brad Park and Rod Seiling.

But Tim, who ranks behind only Gordie Howe in age among current NHL skaters, has drawn raves from Francis for his sturdy checking game against the Hawks.

"Horton is a real pro," the coach said. "He works as hard as any young guy in the league. You'd think he was trying to win a job on our club."

PLAYS MAN FIRST

"He's as strong as a bull," Emile replied. "He plays the man first, the puck second. He's never out of position."

The Rangers, who take on the Black Hawks in the fourth game here Sunday, have also been getting valuable defensive play from Bob Nevin.

Hull produced six goals in the Black Hawks' four-game sweep of Philadelphia Flyers in the quarter-finals.

But Nevin, who also came to the Rangers from Toronto, has held Hull scoreless while checking him in the semi-finals.

REGULAR SHIFT FOR FERGUSON

MINNEAPOLIS — Al MacNeil, coach of Montreal Canadiens, said today that winger John Ferguson, who stormed from the Montreal bench Thursday, will play a regular shift in tonight's third game of the National Hockey League playoff against Minnesota North Stars.

MacNeil said he met Ferguson before the team workout in Montreal Friday and "as far as I'm concerned, the incident which took place Thursday night is considered closed."

★ ★ ★

Ferguson, benched during the third period of the game, stormed from the bench into the team dressing room with 24 seconds of play left in the period. On the way, he rammed his fist into the Canadiens' stick rack.

His premature departure coincided with Minnesota's final goal in their 6-3 triumph over the Canadiens. The win tied the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final 1-1.

Fourth game of the series will be played here Sunday night.

TOM WILKINSON . . . . . . GOES TO LIONS

Trade Not Surprising

TORONTO (CP) — Tom Wilkinson, one of the twin quarterbacks who carried Toronto Argonauts to a second-place finish in the Eastern Football Conference last season, was at work when he heard about his trade Friday to British Columbia Lions of the Western Conference.

"I wasn't surprised," he said. "I knew something was up, but I didn't know when it would happen or where I would be going."

In passing yardage, Wilkinson ranked fifth among EFC quarterbacks last year. His completion percentage, however, was second best in the country.

Wilkinson's future with the Argos had been uncertain this season. There were reports that Toronto was after Greg Barton, the Detroit Lion who went to Philadelphia Eagles of the National League. In addition, Toronto also signed Joe Theisman, the all-American quarterback. And Don Jonas, Wilkinson's partner in the Argos' twin-quarterback system last season, is likely to return.

B.C. will give up a player, as yet unnamed, at a later date.

Besides Wilkinson, Lions will have last year's No. 1 quarterback, Paul Brothers, back-up man Vidal Carlin and rookies Pete Fulton from University of California and Don Moorhead, University of Michigan.

The deal sending Wilkinson to the Lions was one of two Argos made Friday with Western Football Conference clubs.

In the other, they sent Bill Swift, a former Lion fullback who has been a fine operative at centre, to Winnipeg Blue Bombers. In exchange the Argos received two Canadians, centre Paul Desjardins and linebacker Peter Palmer.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: Thumbs down

Defending Pair Misses As Annes Share Medal

The Colwood combination of Anne Shields and Anne Thomson scored 90-19½—70½ to top all qualifiers at Victoria Golf Club.

Friday's low 16 scorers qualified for the championship. Match-play gets under way Monday at Cedar Hill then moves to Glen Meadows for the second round on Tuesday.

Semi-finals will be played next Thursday at Gorge Vale and the finals at Colwood next Friday.

Defending champions Lil Thiriwell and Jean Christie of Uplands were the major casualties of Friday's qualifying round. The Uplands pair scored 98-14½—83½ to miss the cutoff by six strokes.

Scores of 77½ or better were needed to qualify for the championship.

Also missing the cutoff were Shirley Naysmith of Gorge Vale and Uplands' Joan Lawson. The lowest handicapped team in the field, playing to a combined 6½, the two former city champions scored 89-6½—82½.

BARBER, NICKLAUS REMAIN . . . . . IN TIE FOR LEAD

Tough Course Takes Toll

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Veteran Miller Barber rebounded from a triple bogey seven on the first hole and retained a share of the second-round lead in the $165,000 Tournament of Champions Friday.

The 40-year-old Barber had a one-under par 71 for a 36-hole total of 140 and remained tied for the lead with Jack Nicklaus.

Nicklaus also had a 71 on the demanding 7114-yard La Costa Country Club course that continued to frustrate the field of 35 players, all winners of major tour events in the last 12 months.

South African Gary Player had a 71 for 141.

Masters champion Charles Coody had the day's best round, a 68, and was tied at 142 with Australian Bruce Devlin, who had a 70.

Gene Littler, 71, Dave Stockton, 72, and defending champion Frank Beard followed at 143, putting only eight players under par after two rounds.

PALMER SHOOTS 75

Pre-tourney favorite Arnold Palmer had a 75—including a 40 on the front side — and drifted back in the pack at 145.

But he didn't count himself out of it.

"You can come from anywhere on this course and take over, but you've got to have a good round to do it. If the leader starts hitting it a little wild, well, he could shoot anything."

Barber, winner of the Phoenix Open earlier this year, started off as if he couldn't shoot anything.

He pushed his drive into the deep rough, then put his second in a trap in front of the green. He blasted across the green into the rough, chipped too strongly back across the green again, finally got on in five and took two putts for a seven.

Nicklaus had his troubles, too, taking three one-over-pars on the front side. One came from a trap, another was a three-putt and the third was when he drove in the deep rough.

George Knudson of Toronto, the only Canadian in the tournament, was only one stroke back after the first round. But he carded a 76 Friday for 146.

Vollmer Keeping Close to Leader

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Randy Wolff cranked up his confidence from a book of inspirational sayings and shot into the halfway lead in the $60,000 Tallahassee Open Friday, with a nine-under-par 135.

Blustery winds changed the complexion of the satellite tourney from a mass assault on par to an effort to survive among the 50 best scores going into rounds today and Sunday.

Par 144 or better was necessary to stay in the running.

Trevino, who fired a 67, was tied at 136 with Jim Wiechers, Ted Hayes, Bert Yancey and Hubert Green. One stroke further back came Gay Brewer and Steve Reid.

The 26-year-old Wolff, a Texan who attended Louisiana State University, said he takes his inspiration from a book called, As A Man Thinketh, mixed with some aphorisms of his own.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver added a 71 to an opening 67 to remain within three strokes of the leader and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg shot a 73 for 142. Ben Kern of Toronto, who had an opening 67, soared to 77.

Bigger Entry Is Expected For Relays

Bigger and better than ever is the hope of organizers of this year's third annual all-school relays at Centennial Stadium.

Last year's track and field competition for student athletes attracted more than 1,000 contestants from 40 elementary, junior high and senior high schools.

For this year's edition of the relays, being staged on May 3, 5 and 6 by Esquimalt High School and Esquimalt Track Club, officials have added some new events and are hoping the list of entrants will climb close to the 2,000 mark.

L. G. SCOTT & SONS CONSTRUCTION LTD., Kitimat, owns this Caterpillar 950 Wheel Loader and another. They load trucks, charge gravel and asphalt plants, do other loading and carrying duties as required. Scott says the 130 horsepower 950 is a good size machine for his type of work; big enough to handle 120 tons per hour yet small enough to have speed and mobility. He can road the machines from job to job. They are articulated so they can maneuver and cycle quickly in the pit or in tight corners. Scott also likes the ready availability of parts and repair services from Finning in Terrace. He has both machines on Finning's P-M (Preventive Maintenance) Check Plan and says this economical, regular check and adjustment service keeps the loaders working at top efficiency. If you have a loading operation where you want production, mobility and dependability, backed by good dealer support services, talk to your Finning sales representative. He'll show you why the 950, or any other Cat Wheel Loader with buckets from 1½ to 10 cu.yds., will do a better job. Finning, your Caterpillar Dealer.

PROBLEM

BLACK: 4

WHITE: 4

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

HINTS FOR BEGINNERS

A supporting piece should always be placed where least vulnerable to attack, or where, if attacked, he can support while retreating. For this reason, a knight is inferior as a supporting piece. A good player will aim at the supports rather than at the front rank.

AGONIES OF ADJOURNMENT

In a tournament, if the outcome of a particular game is in doubt at the end of the day's play, the game is adjourned. The tournament director hands the player who has made the last move an envelope. The player marks down the position, the time, round and names of the opponents. He then hands the envelope to the other player, who seals within it his next move. The envelope is then handed to the "T.D." and the game is picked up later, usually the next day, where it left off.

Very simple. But not always. Few players can put an adjourned game out of their minds. They will stay up all night agonizing over the ordeal ahead of them. As a "T.D.," I have been awakened several times at 2 or 3 or even 4 in the morning by players who have decided that their position is hopeless and have called me to resign. "Why not wait until I'm up to tell me?" I have asked angrily. To which the reply is always the same: "I've stayed up so late I want to sleep in!"

At the first U.S. Open I ever directed, in Corpus Christi 24 years ago, I had one player wake me at three to tell me that he realized he had sealed a poor move and wanted to substitute another for it!

In another U.S. Open, a player analyzed his game after he had submitted his sealed move and realized to his horror that he had made a gross error, and that another move, R-R8, would win the game for him. So he went to his opponent and said: "Do you realize that with R-R8 I am going to get a rook for nothing and that you will be mated soon afterward? Do you want to go on?"

His downhearted opponent replied: "No, not really. I planned to resign if you sealed R-R8. Now that you tell me that you did, I can sleep later and you can tell the 'T.D.' that I resign."

A day later, the loser came to me, furious, and said that he had been swindled out of the game, that he had heard from someone else that the victor had not sealed R-R8. I agreed that he had been taken — but there was nothing to be done. He had resigned, after all, when he should have checked the sealed move.

But what happened in Boston in the 1960 U.S. Open is, to date, the most curious incident I have run into in my long and generally enjoyable experience as a tournament director.

A game was adjourned at midnight and was scheduled to continue at 10 a.m. One player turned up and waited a full hour, winning by default. He left immediately after the point was awarded to him.

It seemed the two shared the same room at the "Y" but only one had an alarm clock. The one who did not said: "Let me have the clock. I'll wake you up in the morning." Instead, he quickly turned off the alarm in the morning, quietly dressed and left his sleeping friend behind. Again the score stood — but I doubt that that pair roomed together after that night.

War-Shattered El Quantara

Only Israelis Prowl Egyptian Town

EL QANTARA (AP) — El Qantara, on the east bank of the Suez canal in the northern section of the waterway, has been a ghost town since Israeli forces evacuated all Egyptian civilians in January, 1969.

This was a canal crossing point for train travellers before the six-day Arab-Israeli war on June, 1967. El Qantara was occupied when Israeli forces rolled across the Sinai to the canal. It has been a restricted Israeli occupied military area since that time, and before the ceasefire which came into effect last August, was battered in fierce artillery duels between Egyptian and Israeli gunners.

El Qantara's 243 Egyptian families were moved to new homes in El Arish, 80 miles to the east on the Mediterranean, for humanitarian reasons, Israeli spokesmen said at the time. The International Red Cross supervised the evacuation.

A Red Cross representative, Jean Engiman, said the Israelis acted under a section of the Geneva convention providing: "An occupying power may undertake the total evacuation of a given area if the security of the population so demands."

Israeli troops nowadays are virtually the sole inhabitants of the canal town, facing Egyptian forces on the west bank from well dug-in emplacements which are part of the Israeli line along the east bank.

Also in the area are United Nations truce observers, part of the multi-national unarmed force of about 90 officers installed equally on both sides of the waterway to observe maintenance of the 1967 ceasefire.

Since the canal is also the ceasefire line, the observers in the past have frequently come under fire themselves during gun duels between Israeli and Egyptian troops, and have suffered casualties.

Good Grief! Doris Day in the Land of Poets?

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Special to the Times)

The thunder crashed and the lightning flashed and the rain swept the fields like a scythe. The trees were vague threatening monsters by the roadside; then, for one blinding moment, they were friendly black giants grinning and waving their arms against a flaming sky.

The rain whipped my face and the howling wind buffeted me about as if I were an unruly urchin. Who was this that dared invade the Land of the Poets without introduction?

And, precociously enough, I had left a friendly inn on a stormy night to walk alone in the Lake District of Westmorland, once inhabited by such literary giants as Wordsworth, Southey, Coleridge, Ruskin and that delightful creator of childhood whimsy, Beatrix Potter.

* * *

Only lightning relieved the miles of darkness on every side, but a little farther on I discovered a wayside pub and, in the snug bar with its red curtains drawn, beheld a strange sight.

A bluish glare came from one corner of the low-ceilinged room and there, surrounding a television screen, were two elderly ladies, hands folded sedately on their laps; an ageing man smoking a corn-cob pipe; a mini-skirted girl and her attendant — a lanky, long-haired male.

Outside the wind howled and rain peppered the windows. Inside, from across the miles of emptiness, came pictures of an old Hollywood movie that was being broadcast from the BBC studios in London.

Great heavens! Had I travelled 6,000 miles from Victoria, B.C., to watch Doris Day cavorting around in a super sports car? Not quite — there was still the local touch. The door opened and a cat walked in.

* * *

"It's a woild noight," said the old man with the corn-cob pipe, shifting his clear grey eyes from the TV screen to the stranger in the bar. There was a crack of thunder outside and Doris Day dissolved into flickering diagonal lines for perhaps a quarter of a minute.

* * *

Ignoring her, I walked over to the bar counter and ordered some soothing refreshment. But the barman was engrossed with Doris and served me like a man in a dream. We waited to the end of the film before discussing the weather, the new decimal money, the budget and the latest tax on beer.

The storm passed and I strode back through the sweet, rainwashed air to the country inn at Grasmere where I was quartered for the night. Joy cometh in the morning, as the psalmist says, and I woke to a view of a splendid church spire peeping over a grassy hill, black cattle dotting the sunny skyline and the soft sweet smell of a hayrick, just across the road.

So I joined the thousands of visitors from Canada, the United States, and many other countries who visit the English lake district every year.

* * *

They may come to enjoy the scenery, to climb the mountains and fells, to walk the hills and dales, to fish the rivers and streams, to camp or caravan or simply to walk and wonder and laze or dream. But invariably they are attracted to places associated with William Wordsworth, greatest of the Lakeland poets, and in particular Dove Cottage at Town End, Grasmere, where he lived from 1799 to 1808.

Wordsworth and his devoted sister, Dorothy, rented this pretty rose-bowered dwelling for about $20 a year and lived mainly on bread, porridge, potatoes and milk. But from the trim garden behind came peas, beans, apples, plums, turnips, radishes and broccoli and, since tea was then too expensive for them, they considered themseves fortunate in having a well of pure water.

* * *

Local historians say Wordsworth composed much of his poetry walking in the open air, sometimes in heavy rain, pacing back and forth over the same patch of ground for hours on end.

"While so engaged he seldom knows how the time slips by or if it is rain or fine," wrote sister Dorothy in her journal.

It was in 1802 that Wordsworth married his childhood playmate, Mary Hutchison. Sister Dorothy shared their household until the poet's death in 1850 and there is no record of any disharmony or jealousy in their domain. Both women, it seems, were devoted to him.

* * *

With the birth of a son and a daughter, the Wordsworths found Dove Cottage too small and moved to Allan Bank, a larger house nearby, which they rented from a Liverpool lawyer for the much increased price of $37 a year.

They lived here until 1813 when at the suggestion of the local clergyman they took over Rydal Mount, a 16th-century farmhouse converted into a spacious 10-roomed residence, and lived there for the remaining 37 years of Wordsworth's life.

The house and garden are now a museum owned and operated by Wordsworth's great-great-granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Henderson. It is expensive to maintain despite the high tourist revenue and Mrs. Henderson has considered renting Rydal Mount, during winter, to an aspiring English poet or writer. The rent would be fairly high — and there is another consideration:

What contemporary poet would have the "face" to take over Wordsworth's desk?

This Town Sits On a Volcano

By ERIC NEWBY and DIANA PETRY
(The London Observer)

Santorin, southernmost island of the Cyclades.

The way to it is through a fantastic bay, the crater of a volcano, formed by the islands of Aspronisi, Therasia, and the cliffs of Santorin itself. The water is over 1,000 feet deep in places, with other smoking islands rising from it, around which exotically colored pumice floats to the surface and the water seethes. The little town of Thera, dazzingly white, stands on the edge of a huge cliff, one of the crater walls, and is reached by 800 steps, preferably on mule-back. At sunset the cliffs of Santorin are tinged with the most improbable colors.

There are other villages on the island: Merovigli, Oia and Pyrgos, each in its way unique, and Skaros, which was the capital. Beyond Pyrgos are the remains of ancient Thera, city of the Dorians.

Monasteries of the Meteora, a kalabaka in Thessaly. Literally "the monasteries of the air."

Here, where the River Peneus flows out of the Pindus gorges, there is a strange region filled with giant rocks in the form of bastions, towers and pinnacles, some of them inclined at extraordinary angles, on which, in the 14th century, large numbers of monasteries were built to protect the monks from robbers and temptation.

The only way up to these habitations was by hinged ladders; provisions were drawn up in baskets and women were totally excluded.

Only about four monasteries are now occupied by monks, and the treasures which they may have contained have mostly been flogged or stolen. The architecture of the monastries, with their umbrella-like roofs, their wooden galleries and their upper storeys projecting crazily over the void, is most remarkable; and so is the view from them of the Pindus range.

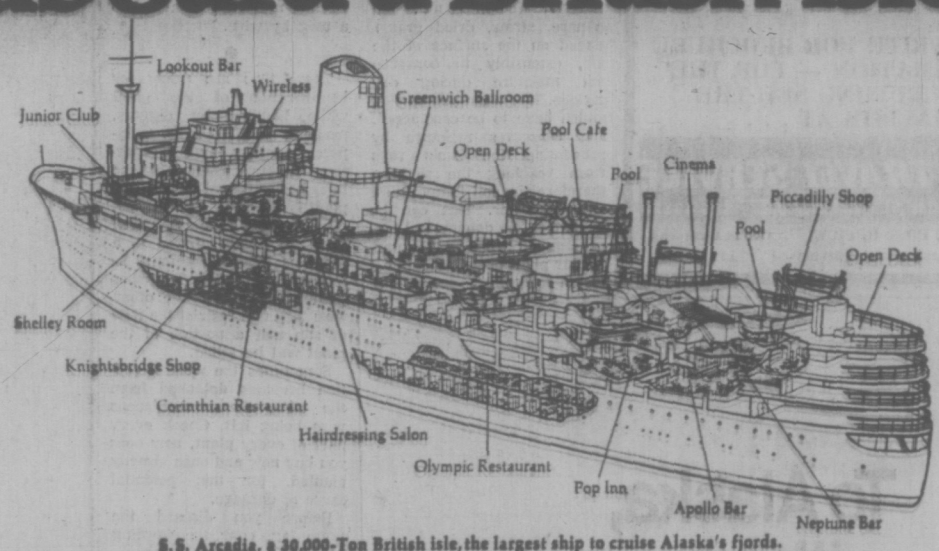

Today they can be reached by steps cut in the rock and an asphalt road runs at the root of them, which detracts from their remoteness, so fascinating to Victorian travellers.

Cruise to Alaska aboard a British isle.

Four times this summer, a self-contained British isle, P&O's S.S. Arcadia, will sail up the smooth Inside Passage to the fjord-and-forest beauty of Alaska: Glacier Bay, Juneau (and Mendenhall Glacier), Ketchikan, Sitka — on a cruise where the ship is as intriguing as her destination.

British seamanship, British service.

Arcadia is British, from pub to poop deck, with brass fittings, teak railings and a tea service for every passenger. Among her population—officers, crew, service staff, you'll spot accents right out of J. Arthur Rank movies and Beatle albums. While relaxing in the calm reliability of traditional British seamanship and service, you can live it up with non-stop shipboard entertainment: dance bands, movies, four nightclubs and—of course, an English pub.

A genuine British value

A P&O Alaska Cruise fits comfortably within the two-week span of an ordinary vacation. Accommodations range from a berth in a three-berth cabin for as low as US $345. A typical two-berth cabin is priced from US $410. If you're wondering where to go on your summer vacation, plan to come along on the cruise to Alaska that includes Britain, too.

Four Wednesday Sailings

S.S. Arcadia leaves Vancouver on May 26, June 9, June 23, July 7. Via the Inside Passage to Ketchikan, Juneau. Complimentary tour of Mendenhall Glacier. Then through Lynn Canal and a full day in Glacier Bay. Return via Sitka to Victoria. Transportation between Victoria and Vancouver will be by British Columbia Ferry.

Typical entertainment.

Our June 9 Alaska Cruise will include photography instruction, bridge with the author of the Blackwood Convention, lectures on ports and fashion, and music by the Tony Austin trio and the Barbary Coasters. A complete range of accommodations is still available through your travel agent or P&O.

All P&O ships are of British registry.

Don't Coddle Those Plants —Just Be Judicious

NEW
APARTMENTS
2000 White Birch Rd., Sidney
656-1614 or 477-5581

By JACK BEASTALL

One can safely state that hundreds of new plants have been added to local gardens since planting time started last September. How many of these will be thriving by next September?

With thoughtful care 99 per cent should survive, the other one per cent being victims of the unavoidable hazards of moving.

Everything is set for a good start when planting holes have been properly prepared: larger and deeper than appear necessary, soil carefully placed in close contact with the roots, and stakes used for temporary support until the roots have a firm hold in the soil.

The tricky period now lies ahead; wind, low humidity, summer temperatures, and weeks without rain are problems the plants must face, and they will need judicious assistance from their new owners.

Judicious is the key word here, for it takes keen judgment to sense a plant's needs and provide those needs without coddling and melodramatic sentiment.

To make new and healthy roots requires moisture, warmth, and air.

Moisture will have to be provided by the gardener. The amount that will remain in the root area for the plant to draw on as needed will be proportional to the amount of humus in the soil. Humus is a vital factor.

●

Frequent watering has two detrimental effects: first it reduces soil temperature thereby eliminating the needed warmth; secondly, it excludes the essential air. In other words, the moisture must be applied judiciously.

While soil moisture can be retained for longer periods by providing a mulch over the root area of new plants, here again the gardener must use judgment.

A mulch is a layer of material (compost, old manure, straw, dried grass) placed on the surface of the soil, ostensibly to conserve soil moisture during dry periods. But other effects of a mulch have to be considered.

It conserves moisture by preventing the sun's rays from reaching the surface, therefore the soil temperature will be lower. This can be beneficial or detrimental depending on whether the particular plant needs a cool or a warm soil for its root system.

Tips For The Home Gardener

Tomatoes are an excellent example; mulch around a tomato plant can delay fruit ripening by three weeks, and a comparable effect is noticed on ornamental plants that require warm soil for optimum growth.

The much-needed air movement in the soil is also hampered by a mulch resulting in a weaker root system. Mulched orchard trees have been toppled in a wind that had no effect on unmulched trees. Therefore a mulch is not an unmitigated blessing.

Low relative humidity (the amount of moisture vapor in the air compared with the same air fully saturated) and its detrimental effect on plants is something few gardeners appreciate.

Especially susceptible are the broadleaved and coniferous evergreens used so much in garden planting here today.

Being evergreen (having foliage summer and winter) these plants are constantly giving off moisture from their foliage, and the drier the air the greater the rate of evaporation.

The point with evergreens is that this dehydration can take place in winter, the resultant damage not appearing until late spring or early summer. Not that the soil was dry at the time, but the roots were not active and failed to replace the lost moisture.

A newly planted deciduous (leaf-losing) tree or shrub can be affected the same way in spring, summer, or fall, if a good root system has not been formed before the period of low humidity.

The gardener has to follow the daily weather broadcasts noting prevailing relative humidity and use a light misting of clear water over the plants several times a day while dry air persists.

Last week a relative humidity of 48 per cent was recorded in the Victoria area, while in January it reached a low of 29 per cent and several times in February and March ranged between 35 and 50 per cent.

These tags are solely for identification of the plant while handled by diggers, packers, order clerks, shippers, retailers and prospective buyers. Their purpose has been served when the plant is set into its new home.

Of necessity, these wired tags are firmly affixed to a stem or twig. They must be loosened or removed when planting is completed otherwise they will restrict the flow of sap and a portion of the plant will be killed.

Sometimes the wooden portion becomes detached from the wire, the inconspicuous wire being left. Check every part of every plant, new ones you buy now and ones already planted, for this potential cause of damage.

Unemployment Worries Public

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION
(World Copyright Reserved)

That the Canadian nation is deeply troubled over problems of the jobless, is highlighted by the belief among the great majority of its citizens (83 per cent), that unemployment is not, as yet, under control.

This sense of alarm is highest in Western Canada, where the level rises to almost nine-in-ten (87 per cent) who feel that unemployment is still an unchecked menace. Elsewhere it runs at about an eight-in-ten level.

Those in skilled and unskilled labor are the most convinced that the problem is still uncontrolled (87 per cent). In other occupational segments, the ratio is the same as that regionally — about eight-in-ten.

The public's worry about unemployment is higher than that for inflation, as 66 per cent of the people think this twin threat is not under control, and 23 per cent that it is. This compares to only 10 per cent who hold that unemployment is checked.

The question: "What do you think about the problem of unemployment — do you think it is now under control or not?"

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Notice the broad green leaves of fall colchicums now expanding. These too must be allowed to mature naturally before removal.

If raising own annuals from seed, keep up with pricking out, and transferring flats to sheltered coldframes for gradual hardening off. The early sown snapdragons now in flats will be almost ready for transplanting outdoors.

Fuchsias which have wintered outdoors, can be cut back, repotted and watered to get them started again. Set in sunny, but wind-sheltered place to make their early growth. Young rooted cuttings must be kept growing in a light cool place free from frost.

Vegetable sowings can be thinned. Hold off sowing warm soil crops until nights are warmer, unless coldframes or cloches are being used.

All plants being raised indoors must have strongest daylight possible, and as little water as required to keep them sturdy.

Alleged Victims Sought for Arrest

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Carol Virginia Williams, 22, one of two women who allegedly were beaten by actor Jim Brown in February, failed to appear at the actor's battery trial Thursday and a warrant was issued for her arrest.

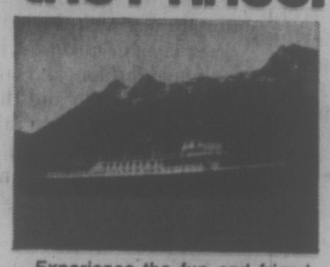

The other woman, Claudia Anne Lemay, 22, failed to appear in court Wednesday and a warrant also was out for her arrest.

The day before the misdemeanor battery trial began, Brown and the two potential witnesses appeared in court and indicated all was forgiven. However, the city pressed the charges.

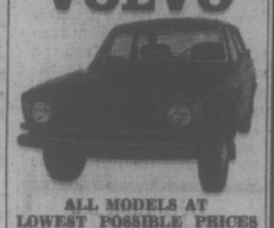

Miss Williams testified briefly Wednesday and said her fall down a flight of stairs was accidental and the former football great was not responsible.

Ceylon Expels British Newsman

LONDON (UPI) — UPI correspondent Robert Taylor was ordered expelled from Ceylon Thursday for what the government called "evading censorship" but was permitted to remain until Saturday to catch a plane to Singapore.

Despite the expulsion order he was permitted by censors Friday to file this report:

"Russian MIG fighters are already flying over this country. Today at least two were seen in formation flying along the Coral Reef Island in the first flight-testing since the aircraft were uncrated from the giant eight-engine Russian military transport Antonovs."

Taylor, a Briton, originally was ordered to leave Thursday but no planes were available. Government authorities insisted he remain in the airport lounge until one was available but relented under intercession of the British high commissioner.

Today he was informed his expulsion was effective as from Sunday, April 25.

Machines Get Boot

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — In the battle of man and machine, humans occasionally can win — if they refuse to co-operate.

The state of California announced Thursday it is junking new automatic toll collecting machines on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge because they couldn't deal with "inexperienced drivers."

On April 30, uniformed toll takers will return to duty in the lanes manned by machines for the past three months.

James Moe, the state public works director, said drivers were pouring 50 pennies or coins wrapped in cellophane into the maw of the automated collectors just to watch the machines digest them.

HUDSON'S BAY POINT BLANKETS

In 1771 the Points (indigo mar... indicated the number of beaver skins required in trade for a blanket

In 1971 the Points indicate that these superb blankets are of genuine original quality. They've been made in England to the same exacting standards for 200 years. More than 15 separate processes are required in the manufacture. The blankets are loomed one-half larger than required, then pre-shrunk by a special process. Further shrinkage by rough handling is impossible. The final hand brushing produces a lustrous fur-like surface that sheds water for a long time. The quality of these blankets is so extraordinary that we make them into coats, such as the Canadian Olympic Team wore.

Native Rights Weapon Used To Fight Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition seized on the issue of native rights Friday in an intensified struggle to force major changes in a government bill designed to set out the rules for mining developments in the Yukon.

The measure, now at second-reading stage, would replace the Yukon Quartz Act, imposing new rules and higher royalties on mineral development in the territory. The debate continues Monday.

The bill also contains a provision forcing at least 50-per-cent Canadian ownership of future mining developments in the Yukon.

The opposition, led by Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon), originally attacked the bill as a weak economic device which would destroy private initiative in the north.

Added to this Friday, was Conservative and New Democrat insistence that some assurance be given by the government that Indians and Eskimos in the Yukon would receive a just share of royalties collected.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris), a former northern affairs minister, moved an amendment calling on the government to publicly recognize the rights of Indians and Eskimos in the north. The motion was ruled out of order.

Robert Simpson (PC—Churchill) then moved an amendment which would have killed the bill. The amendment was defeated 63 to 31, with Liberals and New Democrats voting against Conservatives and Creditistes.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 150, Conservative 72, New Democrat 23, Creditiste 13, Independent 1, vacant 5.

RIGHTS IGNORED

Mr. Nielsen said the government has paid no attention whatever to the rights and privileges of native people in the Yukon. Nor would the government listen to opposition to the bill from virtually every resident of the Yukon.

Was this participatory democracy? asked Mr. Nielsen.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West), the only Negro MP, said he felt a certain closeness to the Indians and Eskimos of the north. They had been disregarded by the government and were totally disillusioned.

Grant Deachman (L—Vancouver-Quadra) said the bill should receive thorough study after it receives second reading and is referred to the Commons northern development committee.

Mr. Simpson called the bill an exceptionally bad piece of legislation. It gave no indication of what over-all government policy would be for mineral development.

Mr. Nielsen said the government's aim appears to be the accumulation of as much arbitrary power as possible.

Pollution 'Starting To Decline'

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — Pollution by the forest industry in Canada has probably reached its peak and is starting to decline, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Friday night.

Most of Canada's pulp mills will be modernized or completely replaced to reduce effluent, he told the annual meeting of the Cariboo Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

In the 1980s the majority of pulp mills in the country will be like the one in nearby Kamloops, said Mr. Davis

"There where we have a large fish run, there is no harmful effect by that mill's effluent."

B.C.'s pulp mills are the cleanest in Canada, excepting some built in the 1950s, Mr. Davis said.

"While the older mills, both here and in other parts of the country, are a problem it is unrealistic to shut them down," he said.

FORCE ACTION

Provincial resources minister Ray Williston told the meeting that pressure groups like the Sierra Club will force forest companies to "participate in the multiple use concept of forests."

He also said the government will take a harder look at companies in the future before granting timber leases.

"I am being quite open and blunt, but in the future we will take an interest in what you put into a plant, its operating costs and what you return from the publicly-owned forest," said Mr. Williston.

"In the '60s we have learned how to build some monstrosities in B.C. that will never return tax. I am now having to answer some embarrassing questions about how come some people with all the wood are paying nothing back (in taxes) when some with little or hardly any wood at all are paying lots back."

He said that unless companies ensure recreational areas are built in their best sustained-yield forests and make them accessible, pressure from conservation groups will come to bear.

'Honest Abe's' Finger On City Pulse

Abe Wise — and after five minutes' conversation you want to start calling him Honest Abe — firmly believes that one of the best measures of a city's economic pulse is its pawn shops.

He should know. He's been in the business for going on 10 years.

By STEVE HUME

At 57 he's a little bit confusing. He looks a lot younger than his years, but he talks a lot older.

OUT ON OWN

In the nine months he's been in business, Abe says he's noticed that "this year it's been quite a bit rougher for money in Victoria."

"For the last half of 1970 and the early part of 1971 people have been taking much longer to pick up their pawns — and a higher percentage of them have been losing their pawns."

LOTS OF GUITARS

For those inexperienced in the ways of the venerable profession of pawnbroking, a person who needs cash takes an item and borrows money against it. He has a stipulated period of time in which to return the loan after which the broker is free to sell the item.

The time periods, ranging from a month to a year, are worked out in individual contracts, says Abe.

Recently, he says, up to 25 per cent of his customers have not been returning to claim their pawned belongings.

His spacious two-room store on the corner of Johnson and Broad is cluttered with merchandise — lots of guitars and musical instruments, rifles, skates, used records, radios, gum boots, even a small motorcycle.

They come largely from youngsters, he says, who give him a good deal of business.

Different people, he says, pawn different things, almost in a kind of sociological categorizing.

"Parents will pawn more expensive things — tools, guns, diamond rings. Bigger things.

"Their kids almost always pawn musical instruments, radios, stuff like that."

And then there are hippies.

"I like hippies. I consider them real nice kids. If they want to dress weird that's their business. They mind their own business and they don't get rough with you like some of the other people do."

That's a basic difference, he says. There are people who pawn things and people who buy — they seldom change their pattern.

"A guy who pawns things will do it when he's earning $100 a week, and he'll still do it when he's earning $150 a week. I think his cost of living goes up with his pay cheque.

"But a guy who buys things always seems to have money, even when times are tough."

FAST TURNOVER

Consequently a diamond ring or an expensive watch will pawn for considerably less percentage wise than a $100 record player.

POLICE REPORT

As a pawnbroker Abe makes a daily police report on all merchandise that passes through his hands.

"If something stolen comes in you lose your money usually," he says.

"You fall in once in a while, but I don't get much hot stuff — less than half of one per cent."

The funniest transaction he's had in the last nine months came about when a little old man walked into the store, tottered up to the counter and removed his false teeth.

He wanted to pawn them for $2.

"I needed them like you would take a hole in the head," says Abe, "but I gave him the $2. He redeemed his teeth next pension day.

Born in Montreal in 1914, Abe says he was "in the needle trade" until he was 38. Then he moved to California where he worked "for a state institution" for five years before returning to Canada.

Lots of kids buy their diamond rings in regular jewellery stores and then bring them to Abe when the romance breaks up.

RESCUE BOAT FUND TOPPED

The Percy Brown Trust Fund, formed to provide a rescue boat for the Beechey Head area, has reached its target of $4,700 — with a boost from the provincial government.

Percy Brown, the man who single-handed set out to do something about inadequate rescue facilities in the area, said Friday that a $500 cheque from the provincial secretary's office put the fund over the top.

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black said in the accompanying letter: "... In recognition of the sacrifice made by Mr. Brown and his heroism on March 13 . . . (the cheque) is to be used to provide a rescue vessel for the Beechey Head area."

Brown has been recommended for a Royal Humane Society Medal for bravery by the Rescue Co-ordination Centre, which asked for his help when the 40-foot troller Janola capsized in heavy seas March 13, throwing its four occupants overboard.

★ ★ ★

Then, single-handed, he hauled the four into his small boat.

But Wick's wife, Marjorie, and Mrs. Parris' husband, John, perished. All four had been in the icy water for more than an hour.

Brown, who operates the Beechey Bay Marina, was so shaken by the experience he took matters into his own hands, borrowed money, and bought a suitable rescue boat.

Named Respect, she is a 17-foot Fiberglas craft and is being equipped with gear needed to meet rescue emergencies.

Relieved that the community has rallied to provide a boat for an area so often the scene of trouble, Brown said:

"It's been a long haul but it was worth it.

"Now I can settle down and start working for myself again — start getting my floats in shape and other chores."

Door Not Closed On Nitinat Lakes For Pacific Park

Lands and Forest Minister Ray Williston said he hasn't closed the door to a Victoria Sierra Club proposal to include three lakes in the national west coast park, now named Pacific Rim National Park.

The lakes — Tsusiat, Squaliecum and Hobiton — are the last three lakes of any size which have not been logged off on the southern half of Vancouver Island.

But the minister said before a decision is made to include the lakes, the government would have to carefully consider what effects the loss of forest lands would have on employment.

He noted that plants have been built to certain capacities on the basis of the assured supply of lumber from tree forest licences.

"Any reduction of this supply must be considered for its effect on the economy, and particularly its effect on employment opportunities," he said.

Williston was replying in a letter to a brief submitted by the club requesting the government to preserve the virgin forest around the lakes.

The area is known as the Nitinat triangle and is adjacent to the west coast trail which runs from Bamfield to Port Renfrew.

The club also requested that the half-mile buffer zone along the trail be enlarged to preserve the quality and the wilderness aspects to the 50-mile footpath.

Rick Careless, president, said he could not see how inclusion of the lakes and watersheds would affect employment.

"We are not asking for too much when you consider that most lakes have been logged off and ruined by roads running around their water fronts," he said.

He said tourism is now an important industry and the government should carefully consider preserving the esthetic values of certain areas of the Island.

CLARKSON FORCED OUT

Strife Spreads Among Poor

A bitter conflict between mothers on welfare and the Victoria Low Income Group surfaced Friday with the firing of social worker Reg Clarkson, one of the founders of the group.

Twenty-two of the 29 women in the Housecleaning Rehabilitation Association signed a petition supporting Clarkson as director of the association prior to his removal as secretary of the Low Income Group.

The association, which operated from the Low Income office, has now moved to a separate office at 2584 Graham, and on Friday alone it sent 13 women out on jobs.

According to Low Income president Walter Olszewski, the executive fired Clarkson on Tuesday and again on Thursday after he failed to submit his resignation in writing. Clarkson's failure to abide by executive decisions is one of the main reasons given for the firing.

●

Olszewski also charged today that Clarkson had "manipulated" the Low Income Group and the women who do the housework.

Mrs. Norma Sprague, 26, of 663 East Burnside, said women who do part-time housework jobs through the Housecleaning Rehabilitiation Association are fed up with Olszewski's rudeness and unwillingness to discuss fiscal details of the project with them.

"The power-play was not between Walter and Reg Clarkson," Mrs. Sprague said. "It was between me and Walter."

"I tell you, the mothers would not work for Walter if Mr. Clarkson decided to quit."

The Housecleaning Rehabilitiation Association was set up last December with a $10,000 federal grant. The project, headed by Clarkson, was designed to supplement the incomes of welfare mothers through part-time housework. The grant covered operating expenses of an office and transportation, and paid salaries for Olszewski and Clarkson.

●

The grant ran out at the end of March, but the women felt details of how they would fit in if the grant is renewed were being deliberately withheld by the Low Income Group executive.

Elaine Olszewski, Low Income vice-president and wife of Olszewski, said today the financial details are "none of their business."

The women also expressed dissatisfaction with what they considered to be cavalier treatment from Olszewski.

The next morning an emergency executive meeting was called and it was unanimously decided to fire Clarkson and dissolve the association.

●

However, he offered to resign, and his verbal resignation as director was accepted, effective immediately. It was also decided he could continue to work in the project if the grant came through, but that the project would be under the Low Income group's youth division headed by Dennis Tottenham. Clarkson agreed on condition that the women would go along with that arrangement. But they did not, and the decision to separate from the Low Income Group was made.

Mrs. Sprague explained why the women did not want to be under the youth division.

"Some of these mothers have kids as old as the kids in the youth division — we don't want to be bossed around by a bunch of teeny-boppers."

Clarkson says his verbal resignation, recorded in the minutes of the Wednesday morning executive meeting, did not require a written resignation.

Olszewski says it did, and that's why the executive voted again Thursday to fire him.

●

The real issue, Clarkson said today, is the fact that the welfare mothers have decided to break away from the Low Income Group.

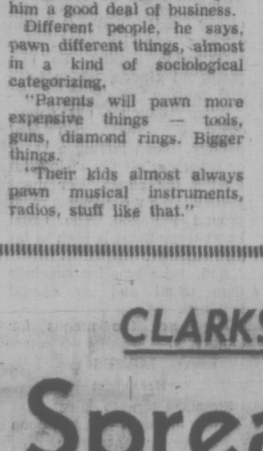

"The power play is between Olszewski and the women, and I got caught in the middle," Clarkson said.

A question which now arises: if the federal grant is renewed, will it go to the association or to the Low Income Group?

Clarkson helped found the Low Income Group in 1966. He was employed as Vancouver Island director for the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. from 1964 until last August, when he was fired. The reasons for the firing were never disclosed.

Cliff Falling Down

Unless something is done to check the erosion within the next few years, a row of firs and maples, plus the steel fence, may slip down to the beach below, Cliff Bates, city park administrator, said today.

He showed a group of city and Saanich aldermen evidence of the erosion. Huge chunks of clay and sand had tumbled down to the beach and a cedar lay on its side.

About 600 feet of waterfront is involved.

Bates said about 20 feet of the cliff had eroded away in the past six years. It actually slides down, taking with it deciduous trees, such as alder, which help check the erosion. The sea in winter washes the earth away.

Aldermen said action would probably have to be done in stages in view of the high costs to put up a wall.

Heavy Vote Seen

About a third of the eligible voters by noon today had cast their ballots in the $900,000 Central Saanich sewer referendum.

A total of 936 electors are entitled to vote.

Fred Durrant, municipal clerk, said he expects voting to pick up towards the end of the day.

"Everything points to a heavy vote," he said.

$3.4M EXPANSION FOR UVIC LIBRARY

Construction will begin in December on a $3.4 million expansion of the University of Victoria's McPherson Library.

J. T. Kyle, vice-president of administration, announced the project Friday. It's expected to be completed by the summer of 1973.

The present four-storey building was completed in 1964 and now contains close to half a million volumes, considerably in excess of its design capacity.

The project will be financed out of Uvic's $4 million provincial capital grant.

Ask The Times

Q: Is that raw sewage that's being poured into McNeill (Shoal) Bay through those two concrete outfalls?—D.H.

A: An Oak Bay spokesman says there is an overflow when raw sewage can get into one of them but this doesn't occur in the summer. The municipality is working on a scheme this year to end this. There shouldn't be any sewage in other pipes—there are more than two, the spokesman said. It was added that similar-looking pipes at Willows Beach carry only storm water.

BACK WHEN SATURDAY Evening Post flourished at a proud address — Independence Square, Philadelphia — one of its editors dispatched me on a sentimental journey.

We had finished our story business before lunch. During lunch, we fell to discussing the symbols of our respective countries. I cited the Maple Leaf, our emblem dear. Erd Brandt, an American of a sort produced by his country in reassuring numbers, countered with the Liberty Bell.

Then, since I'd never seen that cracked reminder of a nation's beginnings, he sent me off to Independence Hall for a look at it.

Enshrined there, this silent partner of the American Revolution made an impressive sight. But how did it acquire the crack?

History fumbles that point. One version is that the Liberty Bell rang on great occasions until 1835, when the metal gave way while it was tolling a knell for a chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. But the English foundry that cast it, and is still in the bell business, insists that it cracked at the first stroke of the clapper in 1753.

Be that as it may, London's Whitechapel Foundry plans to ship a further 2400 liberty bells across the Atlantic. These 15-inch-high replicas, minus the crack, constitute a $2 million "limited edition." The moulds will be broken when the final bell is cast in time for the United States bicentennial in 1976.

Like the original each is embossed with words from Leviticus 25:10 . . . "Proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Edward C. Bursk, Harvard Business Review editor who passed the story on to me this week, finds it ironical that Americans should be snapping up British-made copies of their symbol of independence from Britain.

"But the American purchasers are motivated by patriotism, too," his letter continues, "and that's heartening. Somehow, stories like this take a little of the sting out of Vietnam and the other big problems of today."

Commemorative bicentenary Liberty Bell No. 1, fittingly enough, was a gift to Philadelphia by Whitechapel's present master founders, William and Douglas Hughes. The accompanying scroll, to which the lord mayor of London and the mayor of Philadelphia added their signatures, runs in part like this:

"WHEREAS by a Mystery the said Bell suffered an Injury whereby it was rendered Unfit by reason that it did crack upon the first Stroke:

"NOW THEREFORE it is declared and set down that in Recognition of the many Services which it has been their Honour to render to each other, and to History, that the ancient Contract between the Whitechapel Bell Foundry and the Citizens and People of Philadelphia is hereby fulfilled. . . ."

The makers also depose that "save for a diminution in size" their gift is "a like bell in all particulars, and by the Grace of God is sound."

High-flown nonsense in aid of trade? Partly so. But it is also a gracious exchange between a city and a firm that have both witnessed history in the making.

Douglas Hughes claims that the Liberty Bell, cast under the direction of then master founder Thomas Lister, is the only one to develop a flaw since the foundry was established in 1570 at the sign of the three bells in Whitechapel road.

The firm has crossed the road to new premises since then, but it still looks after the bells of Westminster Abbey which it cast. Two of these date back to 1583 and 1598 respectively.

Big Ben, made in 1858 and a mere youngster, was also shaped at the foundry. Like the others, its bronze is 23 per cent tin and 77 per cent copper, cast in moulds consisting of yellow clay, horse manure and cow hair.

One employee belongs to a family that has had a man in the foundry since 1738 . . . years before the Liberty Bell was cast. But his son isn't interested in bells. He means to break with tradition and go into electronics.

How Do You Forge a Ripe Tomato?

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON — For the first 2 million years of our species' existence, there was one, universal, shared definition of what food is. The different branches of the human family ate different kinds, but we all knew that the berries came from the bushes, the milk from the cows, the fish from the waters, the grain from the fields and the beef from the steers.

Each kind of food had its own taste, color, texture and other characteristics. We still think of food that way and are so encouraged by the people who sell it to us.

Witness the text of this ad from a recent issue of Family Circle: "we pick our mushrooms at a tender age. Campbell's chooses mushrooms that are young and plump. Then, we slice them and dice them and simmer them with sweet real cream. M'm! M'm! Good!"

The texts of the ads that appear in food industry publications are something else. After reading a few of them you can only conclude that the immemorially ancient definition of food is obsolete.

What follows below comes from three trade journals, Food Product Development, Food Technology, and Cereal Science Today.

No longer if food grown or raised. It is developed in much the same way that Bethlehem Steel develops a metal formula for the particular needs of a customer.

"You do the dreaming, we'll do the rest," says The Durkee Industrial Foods groups.

"Most of the foods of the future haven't been dreamed of yet. But we're already figuring out how they'll be made . . . ingredient systems of fats, emulsifiers, flavors, etc., will be 'totally engineered' for low cost volume production."

But there's competion. "Dream of a new food. Anything. The wilder the better," says Atlas Chemical Industries. "Then ask us for creative formulating help to make your dream food possible."

Oh! and, mom, if that doesn't solve your problem, call Kraft. They are selling "a two-inch cube (which) can withstand 300 degrees Farenheit for 10 minutes and still retain its good cheese flavor and still have well-defined edges."

But what's in this "customized' food? Corn Industrial replies, "only bossie knows for sure . . . it's getting more difficult to tell the difference between nature and formulated dairy products."

Unless Bossie had a Ph.D in chemistry she might have trouble with this one: "no color! No taste! No sweetness . . . Mor-Rex is a unique edible carbohydrate . . . a nutritive bulking agent."

Ah, for amber waves of edible carbohydrates!

In case that's not to your taste, Eastman Kodak, those famous Rochester, N.Y., epicureans, may have a message for you: "exit the glob — gummy globs are a thing of the past when you put Eastman monoesters to work . . . that means cereals don't clump during manufacture, spaghetti doesn't stick together, and rehydrated mashed potatoes taste homemade."

So remember, ladies, to add a pinch of monoester.

But a well-seasoned, piping hot ragout of monesters and Mor-Rex needs a bit of color to satisfy that he-man of yours, girls.

For that the word from The Kalamazoo Spice Extraction Company is, "color it Vegetone — Vegetone imparts color to foods in a complete range of shades from yellow-green, through yellow-orange, all the way to red."

To make our dish just yummy perfect, it needs a little bit more of this and that. "So why not add TVP — Textured Vegetable Protein?"

Or better yet, straight from Miles Laboratories, the Alka-Seltzer people, you can have "the automatic enzyme . . . our fungeal protease releases dough. Makes it more machinable. Reduces a baker's mixing time by as much as one third. A unique enzyme, it shuts itself off when the job is done. Just one of hundreds of enzymes and additives . . ."

Well, now dinner is almost ready. There's just one little detail. What should it taste like?

Warner-Jenkinson developed nice meal time suggestion: "the sardine-flavored candy bar . . . most people would say that the combination was not in good taste. However, if Warner-Jenkinson developed the flavor, everyone would know that the taste was at least authentic."

But authentic what?

With these industrial chefs, taste, color, texture, consistency, none of the old gustatory experiences of man is connected to each other.

H. Kohnstamm and Co. brags it can make what looks like a glass of water taste like tomato juice: "Kohnstamm's sophisticated second generation of flavors doesn't stop at a convicing forgery of vine-ripened tomato. It includes mushroom, bell pepper, chives, cucumber and potato and hordes of other fool-the-tongue tastes.

If it's true, as they say, that we are what we eat, then what the hell are we?

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

Stock Market 'Killing' Was a Costly Mistake

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Mrs. Julia Rosemeier made a killing in the stock market, but she will have to put it back.

Mrs. Rosemeier some time ago bought 500 shares in a Colorado drilling company named Santa Fe, Inc. She paid 10 cents a share.

When she decided to sell her stock, she went to the Ohio Company, a brokerage firm in Columbus. They gave her $18,000, multiplying her original investment 360 times.

Three months later the firm found its mistake. They had thought her stock was in Santa Fe Corp. of California. They asked for their money back.

Mrs. Rosemeier refused. She had in the meantime paid off the mortgage on her house here.

Common pleas Court Judge Robert V. Wood ended the dispute Thursday by ordering the woman to return the $18,000 and he awarded $500 for her expenses.

Wood said Mrs. Rosemeier was not guilty of trying to defraud the Ohio Company. He said the transaction was an honest mistake all around.

Reducing Success Depends On Food

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Why not make time work for you instead of against you? In order to do this you must watch out for Father Time because he is a sneaky customer. As the years pass we look older because of many small changes; a line here, a bulge there, a droop or two and a few extra pounds. It is the accumulation of these rather than any one of them individually which makes the difference.

Aging happens so gradually that it gives us an opportunity to fight each small defect as it appears. Even if you have neglected yourself in the past, you can discover a new you during the next eight weeks. This is the sixth day of my Eight Week Beauty Improvement Plan. Many thousands of women are taking this course to see how much more attractive they can become in just a few weeks.

If you have been following Bip, you have weighed and measured yourself. I have also given you menus for five days and five exercises to do. If necessary you can substitute foods in the menus I have published.

However, be sure that you substiture with one in the same category, like greens for greens or lean meat for lean meat. Do not increase your intake of carbohydrates (sugars and starches) or fats (mainly butter, margarine, pastries, salad dressings other than reducing ones, cream, cream sauces, gravy and ice cream).

It is not only how much you eat but what you eat that leads to successful reducing. By successful I mean not only that you lose pounds but that you look younger and prettier at the end of your slimming trek. You will if you eat properly, exercise regularly and lubricate your skin generously. Today, I want to bring you information which will be helpful to you when dieting and meal planning.

Most important, be certain to include foods from the four food groups. To refresh your memory, these are (1) dairy products, (2) meat, eggs, cheese, fish, seafood and poultry, (3) cereals and bread and (4) fruits and vegetables. Also remember the following simple rules.

Broil, bake or boil foods. Do not fry. Forget desserts for the duration. Instead, have fresh fruit or water-packed canned fruit. Once in a while enjoy a couple of lemon drops or sour balls for the sake of your sweet tooth. Have these at the end of a meal. They only have about 15 calories each. Cut your intake of margarine and butter.

For calf slimming: Stand away from a chair and place your hands on top of the back of the chair. Step forward with your right foot. Keep both heels on the floor as you bend your right knee. Left leg should be straight. Straighten knee. Continue bending and straightening the right knee, holding each bend for a count of eight. Step back to place. This time step forward with your left foot and bend your left knee.

You will find that herbs are excellent when using as seasoning. Garlic, onion and celery salt and tarragon vinegar can be used with pleasurable results. So can powdered ginger, lemon juice and paprika.

When reducing eat generously of veal, fish and poultry. When having a steak or roast cut off the visible fat around the edges. For meat patties have lean meat ground for you. The usual hamburger meat is high in fat and calories.

Type-Casting Creates Myths

OTTAWA (CP) — "The male does, and the female is done to."

That message is driven into Canadian children enough to help create psychologically crippled women that our society regards as normal, a study released Thursday by the royal commission on the status of women maintains.

The study, called Sex Role Imagery in Children: Social Origins of Mind, was prepared by Ronald D. Lambert, associate professor of sociology and psychology at the University of Waterloo.

Based on a survey of 7,500 Canadian children, it assesses how structured behavior in the home and within peer groups perpetuates myths about the so-called natural role and personality of the male and the female.

The author's premise is that these type-castings have to be destroyed for women to achieve an enriched self-image.

Suede-Life

What the NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF DRYCLEANING says about the Suede-Life Process:

- "The conventional process of cleaning leather — removes an excessive quantity of oil from suede.
- The Suede-Life Process does maintain the oil content of the suede at or above the level put in at the tannery.
- This study indicates that the quality of the finished product, (i.e. Suede-Life) is also superior to that produced by the older method."

THE SIMPLE LIFE

Young Farmers Hoe Traditional Row

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

"Come gather eggs with me," said a French king to his mistress in the 18th century.

His name was Louis and he put great faith in the pastoral approach as he led Madame Pompadour down the garden path to the palace poultry yard.

It is interesting to speculate, as serious journalists say, whether or not today's young people leaping on the back-to-the-land bandwagon realize they are following a trend set by the Establishment through the centuries.

DUFFUS

The youth communes of the 1970s have at least one thing in common with Louis XV and his ladies in the Versailles hen house: An instinctive desire to escape from the over-civilized materialism of their times.

A few years later his granddaughter-in-law, Marie Antoinette, brought the role of royal milkmaid to national attention.

It is unlikely that she ever approached a cow with the intention of milking it, but she did insist on "a little place in the country." The Petit Trianon became her bolt hole from the artificiality of the Versailles court, and perhaps from her husband, the ill-fated Louis XVI.

Then there was an English contemporary of the milkmaid queen.

Across the channel a royal personage was writing authoritative articles for an agricultural magazine under the pseudonym of Mr. Brown.

His farms around Windsor were models for the future, and he was by all accounts far happier discussing cattle breeding than dealing with affairs of state or the problems of his deliquent children.

Mr. Brown, alias Farmer George, alias King George the Third of England, might have kept his sanity if he had been left to oversee his model farms.

Unfortunately his children behaved scandalously, the American colonials dumped a lot of tea into Boston harbor, and the French became tiresome, what with working the guillotine overtime and allowing a Corsican to take over the country.

Farmer George was not allowed to pursue his pastoral dream, and went mad. Louis Seize lost his head.

A century later industrial barons, including the Rothschilds, were indulging in their extravagant versions of the simple country life.

Large, but hardly noticeable, portions of their fortunes were spent on colossal country mansions and parks, in flattering imitation of their aristocratic friends ... all very Establishment indeed.

No way.

Nor, for that matter, were the farms of that early Mafia clan, the Medici.

A lot of banking and pawnbroking ventures provided the capital for the market gardens before Lorenzo and the family cornered the lucrative Florentine market for fresh produce.

Contemporary examples of this citified dream include Lyndon Johnson's Texas ranch on one end of the scale, and countless futility farms of the lesser gentry on the other.

But there is one irreconcilable difference between the rich man's country life style and the idealistic dream of the young people in today's communes.

The aristocracy, the industrialists and now the exurbanites have always been too practical to believe that five acres means independence.

Country life, to be pleasant, must be subsidized, mechanized, incorporated or tax-exempt.

Organic eggs may be selling well in health food shops, but it takes a lot of egg money to care for independent hens once they're out on the range with the roosters. They go broody and raise babies, which is touching but unprofitable.

They are buying a place in the country. They are raising pigs which they have discovered are dirty, smelly, troublesome and unprofitable.

They have two dogs, three cats and a large horse which is eating through its barn: It is known as the thousand pound termite.

They also have jobs.

Very few dreamers in the 1970s would want the opulence of a millionaires country mansion. But it's doubtfull of many would really enjoy the standard of living of true pioneers either.

The commune dwellers may make a go of living off the land, if they retain their happy farmer mentality and enjoy living on welfare.

When the hens go on strike and blight strikes the vegetable gardens, the young dreamers will need help.

A week of nostalgia and fun for everyone who has ever had a lump in his throat hearing "Sweet Adeline" or gone misty-eyed looking through yellowed photos of people in frock coats and ruffled skirts. It's a week of dressing up in the dignified fashions of yesteryear while you trip the light fantastic at the street dances, take in "Deadwood Dick" at McPherson Theatre or the concert in Beacon Hill Park. Eaton's gets right into the spirit of things, (after all we've been around for a hundred or so years too,) by stocking our store with some of the most charming turn-of-the-century fashions you'll see during the festivities.

Be the Belle of the Ball

In this elegant ensemble. It consists of a silky waist (now we call it a blouse) with a ruffled dress skirt. You'll find your footwear gives comfort to the most slender feet; these are black lace-up boots of fine 20th century material. Of course, these stylish clothes for particular ladies are available now in Eaton's Ladies' Wear Departments . . . and you'll thank your lucky stars you live in good old 1971 when fabrics and leathers are light in weight and easy-care!

DEAR ABBY . . .

Copycat House

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The lot adjoining ours was sold, and now we find that the people who bought it are putting up a house identical to ours! We are extremely unhappy about it because ours is a very expensive home and this is not the kind of neighborhood where all the houses look alike.

We can't understand why the builder would do this, and we are also wondering what kind of people would want a house exactly like the one next door when there were so many beautiful plans to pick from.

I do not consider this a compliment, and I feel a strong resentment every time I look at the house going up.

Any major revisions in our home would be out of the question, and so is moving. Can you offer some advice to ease our heartache?—Portage, Pa.

DEAR PORTAGE: You can't keep people from copying you, but you can change the appearance of your home so drastically that no one would ever recognize it as the same plan.

First, plant a high hedge between your home and the copycats'. Then landscape your property as individually as you can. You can add much warmth and cosiness to your home by using Boston ivy in abundance. The end result may so delight you that being copied may turn out to be a blessing in disguise. (P.S. Get acquainted with your new neighbors as soon as possible, and let them know why you are changing the appearance of your home, or they might copy your charming camouflage, too.)

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will not think my question is too dumb to answer. Can a virgin have a baby? Needs To Know.

DEAR NEEDS: No question, asked in sincerity, is too "dumb" to answer. And the answer to your question is YES!

DEAR ABBY: There is a woman who works where I work. She's about 50. She's not a bad looking woman, but she wears a bra that gives her a shape like you wouldn't believe! It pushes her way up high and makes her protrude about a foot straight out in front. It's just like a shelf! She works with young men and women, and no one can look at her without wondering what is the matter with her. She wears sweaters and knits and clinging-type clothes which accentuate that deformity of hers even more. I can't understand it. She is an intelligent woman, not cheap or on the make or anything.

Can you tell me why a woman would want to look like that? Believe me, she doesn't have to.—Amazed

DEAR AMAZED: It's all a matter of perspective. She thinks she looks nice.

DEAR ABBY: I work for a TV station. I take calls from the general public with regard to program information. What burns me is this: Parents who instruct a small child to call for information! The information I give them usually has to be written down. This takes a lot of time as I have to spell every word for them. Many times I can hear the parent telling the child what to say, so we have a three-way conversation going. Kids sometimes don't get it right the first time, so they keep calling back.

It would make my job a lot easier if parents would call for information themselves if their kids are not old enough to use the phone properly and take down a message. One mother told me after her child had called me four times with the same question that she wanted her child to learn how to use the telephone and calling me was good training! I told her to have the kid call his Aunt Martha.—"Had It" At KNXT

DEAR HAD IT: Other information-dispensing phone operators have "had it" for the same reason, and have written to say so. In the absence of an Aunt Martha, a grandmother will do.

New Safety Tops Prevent Poisoning

WINNIPEG (CP) — The doctor in charge of the Greater Winnipeg poison control centre says many cases of child poisoning could be prevented if parents would pay a penny extra for some medicines.

Dr. Vera Gellman, a pediatrician who has directed the poison control centre since 1959, says the cent is the extra cost of safety palm-and-twist vials for dry medicines that require a combination of strength and co-ordination to open.

The doctor says that since most cases handled by the centre at Winnipeg Children's Hospital involve medicines and children, many could be avoided if children couldn't get at the assorted pills found in everyday use in the home.

Dr. Gellman and other physicians would like to see pharmacists and drug manufacturers take a greater interest in poison prevention by making safety containers universal in use.

That stand is supported by the Manitoba Medical Association, the professional association for the province's 1,100 doctors. The federal food and drug directorate recently asked the drug industry to use safety packaging as a means of reducing the estimated 50,000 poison cases involving children last year in Canada.

Most common cause of poisoning, says Dr. Gellman, is headache tablets, usually of the children's variety, colored and flavored to resemble candy. About one-fifth of the patients using the centre involve an overdose, either because children got into containers or because parents didn't consult a doctor and gave too many pills to their children.

The poison control centre in the last 10 years has had four deaths involving headache tablets. Three of those have been due to parents giving children doses that were too great for the child's size and weight.

Second most common origin of child poisoning used to be sleeping pills, but now it is tranquillizers, says Dr. Gellman. The doctor says small children should never see their parents taking pills because it gives the curious child an example to follow.

The children's hospital centre is regarded as one of the best in the country, although it works with but two part-time people, Dr. Gellman and her secretary. The key to success is volunteer help, doctors on staff, police officers and the 999 emergency telephone number.

Design Centre Opens

The new Plumbing and Heating Planning Centre which opened this weekend at 614 Johnson will provide Victorians with advice on the latest in bathroom and kitchen design. Hostess Kathy Runer, shown above in the Bath Boutique, will show customers the many displays and help them choose the best overall design for kitchen or bath.

fashion flashes

Peasant-influenced prints will be used in reverse treatments for borders and bands, often sprig florals on navy or black, or small paisleys.

Look for combinations of solid colors done in sections, such as a beige coat with sleeves and yoke of brown, a dress with yellow body, red sleeves.

The new shorts look will come to sleepwear, real shorts, not the "baby doll" look, under a tucked shirt-dress or as a short pajama with wrap skirt.

Fabrics as basic as denim often turn out to be a blend or even a knit, just as linen is usually an easy-care blend.

Costumery is settling down to becoming basics, as in simple evening dresses, patio clothes countrified in a nice-un-kooky manner.

Two Babies Mixed

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — When a nurse at City Hospital brought Mrs. Patricia Miner her 2-day-old son for his afternoon feeding, Mrs. Miner knew something was wrong.

"I knew they didn't have my baby and I was about to call police."

"The baby they brought me had a scratch on the nose and was red in the face; he hadn't been that way a few hours before," she said Thursday.

"I told the nurse the baby wasn't mine, but she didn't listen. Then I found a name bracket on the baby's leg that said 'Finch'."

The nurse then returned and took the baby away. Meanwhile, Mrs. Miner said she was furious.

"I was about to hit the ceiling," she said. "I knew they didn't have my baby and I was about to call the police."

Carl and Alma Finch, meanwhile, were introducing the two-day-old boy they had picked up from City Hospital to their home when the telephone rang.

"Somebody from the hospital called, said there had been a mix-up in the bracelets and asked us to return to the hospital," Finch said.

"We had no idea that we had the wrong baby."

Paul Alcott, assistant hospital administrator, said the two babies had minor surgery earlier in the day and inadvertently were placed in wrong cribs afterward. Discharge personnel in the maternity section did not check the wrist bands before permitting Mrs. Finch to leave the hospital, Alcott said.

We have bold Puppies for walking out in style. Quiet Puppies for quiet clothes. Dashing Puppies. Colourful Puppies. Happy Puppies and sober Puppies. Puppies for the kids. And pretty Puppies for pretty ladies.

Hush Puppies all. A litter of Hush Puppies.

In breathin' brushed pigskin. Light and gentle. Cool and comfortable. In leather grained or leather smooth; leathers so soft.

Buy yourself a litter of Hush Puppies. The real thing. And pad around in barefoot comfort whatever you wear. Wherever you go.

BEAT THE KIDS AT THEIR OWN GAME

Greb, the Hush Puppies people, announce the First Canadian Coast-to-Coast Colouring Contest for Adults

THE PRIZES

What a concept! A chance for artistic expression in a cold world. Colour. Warmth. Excitement. Fun!

And the reward. Nothing mercenary like $25,000. Or an island in the Bahamas. Or a new home.

There are five puppies in the litter. Five winners.

Think of the possibilities. You can beat the kids at their own game. And then salve their injured pride by giving them a puppy. (That's if you can convince us that you and the kids are really mad keen to have a puppy. And can give it the kind of home it deserves. Otherwise, we'll give you the cash. $125. Okay?)

And please, don't get the idea it's easy.

Our First Canadian Coast-to-Coast Colouring Contest for Adults will be judged by kids. Twelve-year-olds from the art class of the Kitchener Parks and Recreation Commission.

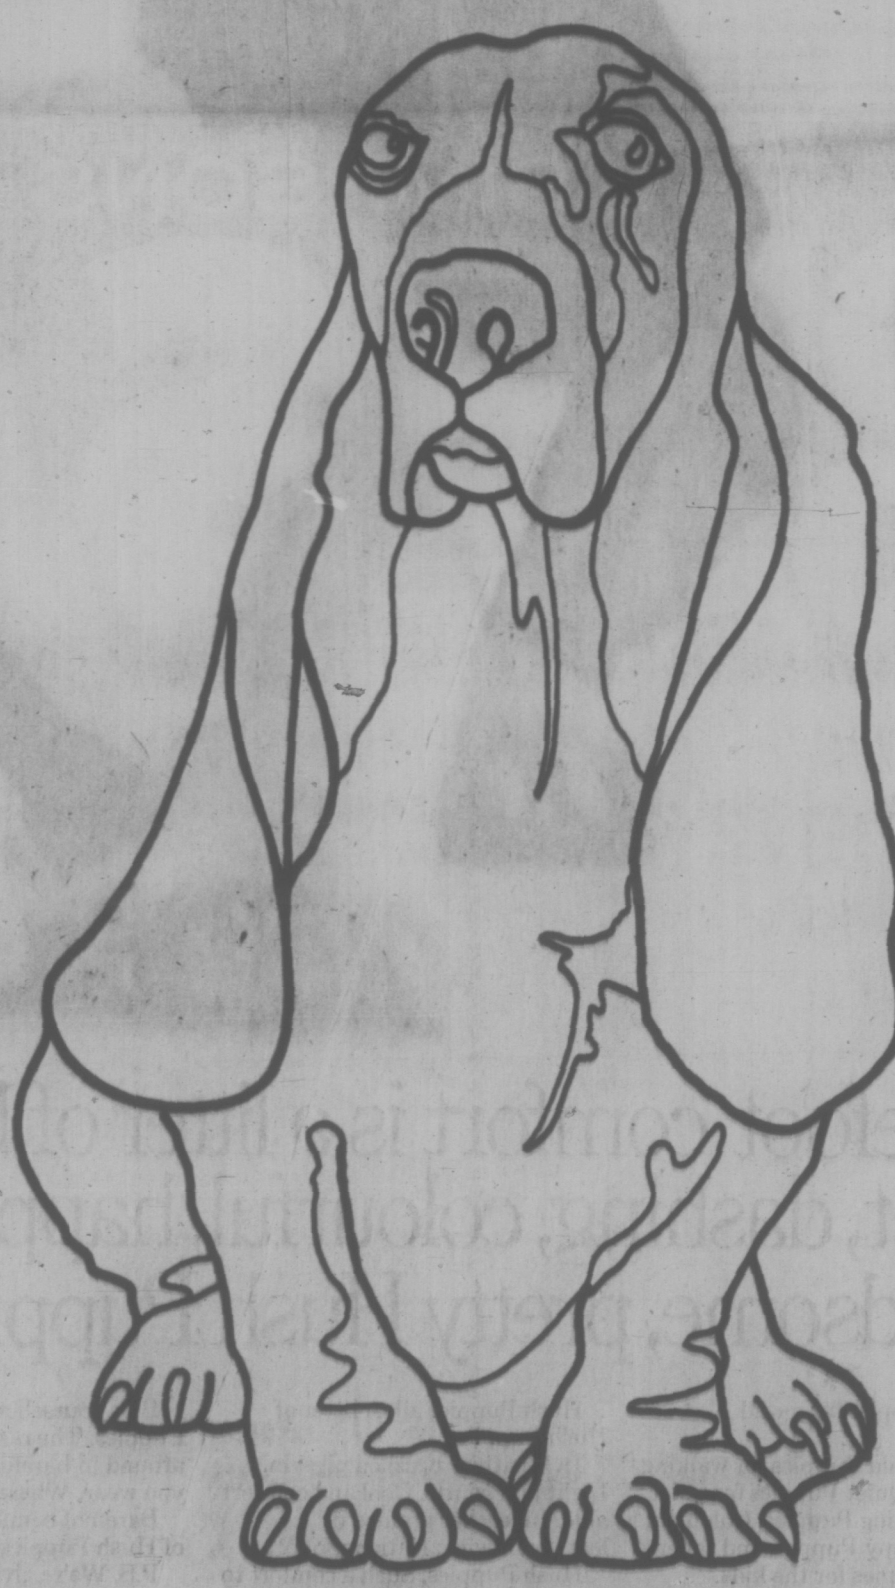

Kid power. It had to come some time.

And if you have kids in the home, no cheating. Their job is to supervise. Choose the colours. Keep you inside the lines. Nag. Deride. Stuff like that. But you do the work.

ENTRY FORM AND DECLARATION OF AUTHORSHIP

I am over 21. The attached entry is my own work. My kid/kids kept their little paws off it.

My dad/mum did the work all by him/herself. I exercised general supervision.

Jangling Bell Demolished By Rampaging Prisoners

By GERALD McNEIL

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — After the prisoners at Kingston penitentiary took control April 14, they demolished the bell that jangled 32 times to open or close the 32 rows of cells radiating from the dome—central control area.

"Instead of ringing a bell for breakfast, we'll have to go around and knock on the doors," John Moloney, regional director of penitentiaries, said Friday.

The 599 prisoners who controlled the institution and held six guards hostage for four days left their philosophy on the walls and their frustrations in the wreckage.

They left the three chapels in shambles, hauling out the Roman Catholic altar as a barricade, ripping down the Jewish tapestry, bashing chalices, ripping hymn books, scattering files, overturning pews, smashing two organs to pieces.

In cell block 1-D, on the ground floor where the men classified as undesirables—rapists, child molesters and stool pigeons — were herded, bloody mattresses and sheets were mute evidence of mayhem.

SMELL RANCID

A rancid stench rose from the sticky floor Friday, five days after the prison was brought under the control of authorities, despite the chill wind that has blown through the smashed windows for a week.

The body of Brian Ensor, who was beaten to death, was found either in a service duct just outside 1-D or in the mop room, formerly cell No. 1, just inside.

"To all who participated in this riot: Our sincere thanks," proclaimed a hand-written sign.

Others proclaimed the epitaph of Kingston, the grey father of Canadian prisons. Although the $300,000 in damages was mostly superficial, it was the end of Kingston as a maximum security penitentiary.

Most of the 500 involved in the outburst have been transferred to other, newer prisons, among them Millhaven, 17 miles away, which was suppposed to replace Kingston later this year.

Mr. Maloney told a group of reporters who toured the prison Friday that only about 150 of the close to 600 cells will be restored.

The psychiatric wing, the prison hospital, the kitchen and the dissociation unit—better known as the hole—weren't affected by the riot and still are in operation.

WARNS REPORTERS

Mr. Maloney warned the reporters about wandering along the upper tiers through ribbons of torn-out electric wiring.

"It may be booby-trapped," he said. "We don't know what's up there. Go at your own risk."

He also warned television cameramen against using electrical outlets, which also hadn't been checked.

Nothing had been moved, awaiting the visit earlier Friday of a board of inquiry, except Ensor's body and the prisoners.

The three-man board of inquiry is led by Toronto lawyer J. William Swackhamer. The other members are H. E. Popp, federal director of custody, and W. T. McGrath, executive director of the Canadian Criminology and Corrections Association.

The board of inquiry will report to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer on "the immediate causes and on the assessment of responsibilities" for the outburst.

PRISON PUNISHMENT was inflicted on 12 persons classified as undesirable — rapists, child molesters, stool pigeons—in the area of the dome at centre of cell ranges. Guard stands among the chairs used in the beatings given the 12 men. In centre of photo is a steam heating rad on which was placed the bell that was used to move prisoners through their normal routine. (CP Wirephoto.)

79-YEAR-OLD SHOWS PIONEER SPIRIT

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Two young toughs tried to grab a purse from Maude Williams, 79, but they picked the wrong victim.

She held on to the purse with one hand and beat her two attackers with the other until they gave up and ran off.

Police officer Oscar Hoffman commented admiringly after investigating the incident that "the pioneer spirit still lives."

Summer Music Schools Flourishing

AUDREY JOHNSON'S

sounding board

All over Vancouver Island this summer, music schools will pop up like toadstools on a peaty lawn.

They are a highly nutritious form of growth and they will make a glorious ring of music, encircling the Island from Courtenay to the southerly tip.

One can only hope that there will be no clashing sounds as the new and the established rub elbows.

The established is represented to the north by the five-year-old Courtenay Youth Music Camp. Sponsored by the Vancouver Junior Symphony Society, the camp director, Robert Creech, has announced plans for expansion this year.

●

In Victoria for the past several years instrumental workshops have been made available through the music department of the University of Victoria, and this project also is expanding this summer.

On a much smaller scale is the piano, strings and orchestral summer school which Clayton Hare and Dorothy Swetnam instituted here a number of years ago.

The husband and wife team plan to be back again in Victoria from July 5 to Aug. 6 this year.

Uvic's department of music will conduct three instrumental workshops of the campus — for clarinet under Donald De Roche, principal clarinet of the Victoria Symphony and university instructor; for brass with Boyde Hood, trumpet and director, Richard Ely, French horn and Howard Woodland, trombone, all of symphony and university faculty; and for piano, with Robin Wood, Conservatory of Music principal.

●

In addition there will be a voice workshop directed by Catherine Young of the Conservatory of Music and with Victor Martens, tenor, of Waterloo Lutheran University.

Each workshop will have a duration of two weeks and will take place in July.

The wholly new in this panorama of holiday music study, comes to Vancouver Island from a mainland organizer and under the financial sponsorship of the B.C. cultural aid fund.

It is announced by its director, J. J. Johnannesen, (well known through his connection with Jeunesses Musicales), as the "First B.C. International Summer School and Festival of Music."

Can it strictly claim that title as a first? I think it's debatable.

●

It is to be held from Aug. 1 to 22 on the campus of the Shawnigan Lake School and is heralded as a "major-scale" arrangement in that it will bring to the Island as instructors Janos Starker, the Hungarian-American cellist who replaced ailing Rostropovitch as a Victoria Symphony guest a couple of seasons ago; the Spanish, Brussells-based pianist, Eduardo del Pueyo, American violinist Ruggiero Rieci, and English composer, Malcolm Arnold. (He composed the Bridge Over the River Kwai score).

●

There will also be Sebastian Maroto, Spanish guitarist and the Czech Foerstrovo Trio.

This is doubtless all to the good if the undertaking can fulfill expectations by drawing students to Vancouver Island from all over the world, and send down roots and become fully established. It is the long-term effect that will prove its value.

Exception could be taken to the Vancouver Sun statement from Max Wyman that "Its launching gives B.C. music students for the first time a choice of resident music-making sessions for the summer ..." continuing with reference to the Courtenay camp.

This ignores the fact tht music students have had a "choice" for at least four years, the internationally staffed summer workshops at Uvic having been continuous for some eight summers.

Vancouver music writers, it seems, don't do their home work very thoroughly; especially when it comes to what is going on in the capital and second largest city of the province.

●

Contrary to the thinking that seems to obtain in certain mainland quarters, Victoria is far from being a backwater culturally, but rather, outside of Toronto, the best student music standard in Canada is to be found right here.

And that I have on the authority of more than one expert who knows the Canadian music scene from coast to coast.

STARKER
. . . at Shawnigan

While on the subject of music study, and while the Victoria Music Festival is still current, it is pertinent to comment on a vexing question — time allowance for certain important classes.

The festival committees which put in such long hours with unflagging dedication in preparing the program and all detailed arrangements, have to contend with serious problems, not the least of which is the control of spiralling costs.

Keeping an adjudicator for an extra day, for example, means a considerably rise in operating expenditure.

But on the other hand, the essential core of the festival idea is the communication from adjudicator to entrant. Not the marks announced or the coming of first, second and third, but what one can learn, what fresh viewpoints can be gained from the analysis of a different authority.

If that's not what the festival is all about, why have adjudicators at all?

It appears essential, therefore, that a way be found to spread the classes in the most rapidly growing areas of the festival so that the adjudicators are not forced to cut down their remarks to the bare minimum, as has happened at times this week.

FOR EVERYONE WHO LOVES ANIMALS . . .
THE BEARS AND I is an adventure story filled with humor, crisis and drama which will appeal to every city-bound reader who dreams of life in nature's unspoiled wilderness.
THE BEARS AND I is an extraordinary story of a young man who uses his full intellect and all of his wits to teach three small bears to survive on their own. As a young college student, Robert Franklin Leslie interrupted his studies to prospect for gold in the mountain wilderness of Canada's north woods. He was soon "adopted" by three helpless bear cubs whose mother had been shot by hunters. For the next three years, he struggled to teach the young cubs to live in the wild — to dig for food, to be aware of their predators and the dangers of the forest, and to exist in their environment. By avoiding the reward-and-punishment imposed routines and dog-master type roles usually employed with animals, he gained a trust and companionship rarely shared between man and animal.

Soon to Be a Church Again

The building housing Nashville's famed Grand Ole Opry, conducted nearly 80 years ago for prayin', not fiddlin', is being reconverted to its original purpose. The wood and brick building, raised in 1892 as a gospel hall, will be town down and then shipped to the Opry's new suburban site. There it will be resurrected in the form of a chapel at the new location of America's most famous country music centre, to be known as Opryland, U.S.A.

LOOKING AT ART

Saturated in Studio

By GLENN HOWARTH

Peter Daglish leaves Victoria this May. His teaching contract with the University of Victoria will not be renewed when it comes due in the spring of 1972. Peter will forego the coming moratorium year and returns to his house and studio in London, England.

Leaving at the same time as Peter is Dana Aichley, to whom last week's art column was devoted. Both artists are to be congratulated on their receipt of $4,000 Canada Council Awards.

What the difficulty has been with their relationship to the University remains unsaid. The administration is tight-lipped and the two artists, who can see advantages in leaving, are saying nothing. It's over and there are better sounds to make than noises of complaint.

I wanted to see a large body of Peter Daglish's work and talk to him before his departure. I had missed his show of wall hangings last year at the Print Gallery, having just arrived in Victoria at the beginning of the new year.

However, visiting an artist's studio outdoes the gallery experience; such visits are one of the joys of art criticism. Rather than finding work glazed and arranged in perfect rows, it is possible to sort through prints and drawings and touch them. The artist's sketchbooks are available and his collection of slides; all is tied together with history and commentary by the person who knows most about it.

At Peter's, I outdid myself. There was so much to see that I became saturated, forced to retreat in need of a rest. Looking, like anything one tries to do well, is hard work. And prints, drawings and ideas that were years in conception are not to be comprehended in one afternoon.

I asked Peter what he would do on his return to London. He replied that he would do the same thing he was doing here, with a few advantages. In the metropolitan centre there is a constant barrage of images imposed on him in the course of daily living. This is important food for his work which makes use of varied images brought together.

Peter enjoys the freedom of multiple images and in his coloring book, designed in the manner of a child's, many images are strung out across the ten large prints which comprise the pages, sailboats, underwear, houses, cows, etc.

And there is the availability of museums. There is one devoted to old toys that is high on his list. This is a natural source for the small object images found in his prints.

Peter is facinated by feminine styles of personality and dress. He has made a series of prints and tapestries dealing with this subject. There will be an army of women to study on the streets of London.

Near completion is Peter's latest tapestry entitled She, a name shared by other pieces in his collection. She is a figure whose clothes and feminine style come from Vogue magazine, but She is burlesqued beyond the perfect feminine surface that could only exist in glossy magazine reproduction.

Rendered in strong-color wool tufts on canvas five feet high, the result is an irridescent strength usually found in painting. The tapestry is imposing, more so than the coy sophisticates of Vogue would dare be; a successful exaggeration of an image already conveying exaggerated femininity. The result borders on a cartoon-like, surreal idea of women.

Tired of the physical act of pulling a brush across the surface of a canvas, Peter gave up painting a few years ago. But his tapestries are still large visual images hung on the wall; they are made in the same manner as painting. Petter still considers himself a painter.

He stretches canvas on a frame and with only some forethought draws directly on the canvas with colored flow pens. His wife, Marion, works into these partially colored drawings with wool and kneedle. Co-operating closely they decide on colors as the work progresses.

If for some reason the effect is not precise, much laborious work is unstitched to be done again. Sometimes areas of the tuft-like stitching has to be done over once to often, taxing even the incredible patience of Marion. Being adjusted in the process of realization, these tapestries have a definete correspondence with painterly methods.

Another work in progress of Peter's is a series of five lithographs being made in cooperation with poet Robert Sward of the University of Victoria's creative writing department. These are large lithos that attempt a cryptic marriage of word and image.

One of the most interesting facets of Peter's graphic work is his use of stencils. He has a set of letters and assorted favorite images, palm trees, hammers, cows, geometric designs.

All artists have favorite techniques or images in their vocabulary. It is intriguing that Peter should have hid organized at his fingertips in an envelope, ready to appear again with delightful efficiency.

FILM NOTES

Heston's Back With the Bard

By A. H. WEILER

NEW YORK (NYT) — Charlton Heston, who recently starred as Mark Antony in "Julius Caesar," will soon be back with the Bard. Once again, he'll be playing Antony, but this time it'll be "Antony and Cleopatra." And, for the first time, Heston will also direct. His cast will include Hildegard Neil, of the Royal Shakespeare Company, as Cleopatra, John Castle as Caesar, and Eric Porter as Enobarbus. Peter Snell will produce the film, which begins rehearsals in London in May. The actual shooting will be done in Spain.

Heston is no stranger to "Antony and Cleopatra," having made his Broadway debut as Proculeius in Katharine Cornell's 1947 production of the play. "I've done more than my fair share of Shakespeare," the brawny actor said the other day. "'Julius Caesar,' 'Macbeth,' 'The Taming of the Shrew,' 'The Tempest.' But my love affair continues."

If you haven't seen James Coburn lately, it's probably because he's been boning up on his foreign languages. Arabic, Mandarin, Thai, Hini and Japanese, to be specific. He will speak them all in his next film, "The Silent Flute," says Stirling Silliphant and Coburn will co-produce the move for Warner Brothers, starting next October in India.

★ ★ ★

What's "The Silent Flute" all about? Silliphant puts it this way: "It deals with an American who becomes involved in a lengthy search for the book, which might be compared to the Holy Grail or the impossible dream. Even though he has achieved the pinnacle of success in his chosen field, he is driven to find spiritual peace. Of course, there will be lots of physical adventures, too, since the hero is an expert in Jeet Kune Do, which is Cantonese for 'the way of the intercepting fist,' a practice that carries street fighting to the highest scientific level."

Shakespeare Smutty Stuff?

LONDON (AP) — Looking for a sexy book? Ignore the current rash of pornography and turn to the works of Shakespeare.

That's the advice of two literary pundits, who say the Bard's sonnets contain smut galore. The Times published the opinions of the drama experts today and proclaimed Shakespeare the sexiest writer in the English language.

Shakespeare's mind, said the Bard's biographer, Dr. A. L. Rowse of Oxford University, "dripped sex at every pore."

And he quoted Eric Partridge, author of Shakespeare's Bawdy, that the Bard "was an exceedingly knowledgeable amorist, a versatile connoisseur, and a highly artistic, ingeniously skilful practitioner of love-making, who could have taught Ovid a thing or two."

College Submits 28 Work Ideas

Twenty-eight make-work proposals to cost about $139,300 have been submitted to the secretary of state's department from Malaspina College.

Projects include a study of financial aid and student budgeting, a summer community theatre and a plan to clear the lifesaving trail in the new West Coast National Park.

If all the proposals were approved and funded by the secretary of state's department under the Opportunities for Youth program, they would employ 105 students full-time and 10 part-time.

In True Blue Colors, He Paints Simple Picture

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

The party's over for Jim Johnston, but he kept his crayons and cardboard to draw us a picture of it.

Johnston, national director at Progressive Conservative headquarters for John Diefenbaker's last two years as leader, works in primary colors only. Naturally, his hero is true blue.

Diefenbaker comes on as "the conscience of the party that tried to forget him," and as "the old lion of Prince Albert" tossed into the arena for disposal by thoroughly un-Christian conspirators. Only a bedazzled admirer could have made the story so simple.

THE PARTY'S OVER, by James Johnston. Longman. $10.

There's no doubt where Johnston's heart lies. As for his head . . . well, he was once called the only PhD in economics who subscribes to Diefenbaker's monetary theories.

Canada's 13th Prime Minister won fanatical loyalty. Such recent apologists-in-print as Bob Coates and Tom Van Dusen proved that it still exists. Like his latest titbit biographer, though, they failed to indicate that frustration was understandable among those who followed John.

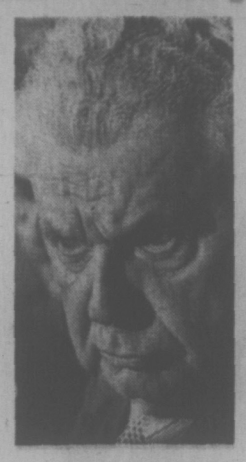

JOHNSTON
. . . servility

How could a leader, in only four years, fritter away the largest parliamentary majority since Confederation? His party was led up into the Celestial Mountains of power and straight down the other side. O what a fall was there, my fellow-Canadians!

Johnston melodramatically blames others of jealousy, lust for control, and sheer joy in double-dealing. A little shading would be more persuasive.

My own experience with the Tories — I arrived on Parliament Hill as a squire to the white knights of 1957, and left as a battered flack in 1963 — gave me many reasons to admire John Diefenbaker.

DIEFENBAKER
. . . hatred

Only his model, Sir John A. Macdonald, matched his zeal in the promotion of national unity. It all helped: northern development, the Bill of Rights, aid for isolated and depressed areas, simultaneous translation of MPs' speeches. Policies on nuclear arms and the pegging of the exchange rate were ridiculed, yet they stuck. (Remember the Liberal campaign promise to "bring back the 100-cent dollar"?)

But his single-mindedness left him open to charges of arrogance. His temperament led him to see personal slights behind the thinning of party ranks, and he responded with counter-attacks instead of conciliation. He set himself up and he cut himself down.

Johnston is too civil, too servile to look at the qualities that prompted Diefenbaker's humiliating exit from the leadership in 1967. In fact, he illuminates the problem with comments that are more revealing than he seems to have intended:

"In battle, John Diefenbaker is every inch the Chief. He was always interested in the most minute detail . . ."

Quite so.

Indiscretions abound. "The Chief" is quoted as saying in the last stages of the leadership convention, "Stanfield, eh? He'll never be Prime Minister." From a man still in the House of Commons and nominally under Stanfield's leadership, that's heavy.

The book shows again and again that Diefenbaker had a nose for disloyalty and a hard-edged hatred for those who offended him.

Dalton Camp, the party president who sharpened the long knives, is depicted as a blunderer as well as a rogue. His part in convention fights over the agenda and delegate seating is hardly creditable, but Johnston's constant yammer makes the story barely credible. And after all, Johnston lost.

▣

Did the party win? Clearly, most of its voting delegates felt that the leader had become an embarrassment by refusing to act out the Grand Old Man script that had been drafted for him. A majority of Conservative MPs held a more sympathetic view, with results that linger today.

At one point Johnston says wistfully that "our messages were not getting through" to convention organizers. The message of his book is too clear for comfort. It's a big justification game, and this shows.

Loyalists are rewarded by having their names entered in the honor roll. Sinners are consigned to the flames — a suitable fate for those who "spent their time talking in quiet conspiratorial tones over glasses of Scotch or well-chilled Martinis from a Commons filing cabinet." Their decadence contrasts with the ways of "dependable party men," who punched each other on the shoulder a lot — out of friendship, of course.

The author took more whacks than he gave, from his foes at least. His surface-skimming approach to the record is a reflection of the poor judgment he showed while he was being swept along by the events themselves.

He even recalls his convention-eve prediction that his idol would not stay around to be smashed. Wrong again.

After the Loss of an Empire, A Frantic Hunt for Certainty

By REG TERRY

One of the interesting phenomena of the 1960s in Britain was the rise and fall of a Saturday night television show called That Was The Week That Was, a program of songs, sketches and pungent comment on the week's news.

Among its talented company was a gladiatorial journalist named Bernard Levin, whose first book The Pendulum Years, Britain and the Sixties, I have just been reading.

Levin mentions the program briefly and fondly, as well he might, for it made his name. It is also a very clear example of the contrary strains which are the theme of Levin's book.

TW3, as it became known, reflected the schizophrenic nature of the sixties, dividing the nation between those who saw it as an honest attempt to awaken the country to the realities of the modern world and those who saw it weakening the moral fibre of the people, rather in the manner of the underwear advertisements on the London subways. One Anglican clergyman scarcely overstated the case when he denounced it as a "poisonous conspiracy against all that was best in British life." Similar cries were heard in the land, not least from Westminster, particularly when the program drew attention to those Members of Parliament who held the record for not speaking in the House on any single issue then facing the nation.

Levin's masterly recapitulation of men and events emphasizes such polarities. Little Britain at the end of the pendulum swings back and forth between its instinctive and ingrained conservatism and a tentative but pronounced desire for change. "Certainty had vanished," says Levin early on, "conviction was vanishing, will itself was crumbling, as those behind cried 'Forward!' and those before cried 'Back!', and both cries were constantly drowned by mysterious mutterings of 'Sideways! Sideways!' which came none knew whence."

In politics particularly "Forward" and "Back" seem to amount to the same thing. Consider the two Harolds, Macmillan and Wilson, characterized by Levin as the Walrus and the Carpenter. Macmillan's claim "You've never had it so good" was certainly no more relevant to actual circumstances than Wilson's insistence on the undiminished vitality of "the pound in your pocket" after his government's decision to devalue.

In a moving description at the end of the book Levin shows how the death of Sir Winston Churchill symbolized the still point between two eras, between one Britain which had virtually lost its confidence and another paralysed by uncertainty. "The point about the Sixties in Britain after all, was that the country existed in a state of historical symbiosis, with the past and future living off each other while contending for mastery, and the resultant strain having a deplorable effect on almost everybody, with the result that anything that could postpone the inevitable moment of separation, when we should finally know which of the siamese twins, if either, would survive, was welcomed."

As the late Dean Acheson had observed, Britain had lost an Empire and not yet found a role, and therefore what occurred in the sixties was "a frantic hunt for certainty."

Charting this dilemma The Pendulum Years offers a kaleidoscope of events indicating flux and confusion. It is a journalist's tour de force in which personalities and news items are brilliantly recreated and woven together: skin heads and student revolt, Mr. Teasy-Weasy and Mary Quant, flying saucers and the Great Train Robbery, Beatlemania and the Lady Chatterley trial. Levin avoids close analysis of issues such as labor relations and economic problems in favor of a general panorama supporting his thesis of the bewildering clash between the old order and the new.

One of his detailed accounts concerns the Profumo scandal, which according to Levin was one of the last significant manifestations of the Victorian spirit, unwilling to let go of the sixties without a struggle. As the storm broke over Profumo's head, Lord Hailsham tremblingly denounced the case in terms which suggested a national moral decline without parallel.

Art, music and plays all seemed to testify to the uncertainties of the decade. The contrary tendencies could be seen in two television serials: The Power Game, which exhibited the ruthless modernism of an industrial tycoon, Sir John Wilder, and The Forsyte Saga, which represented stability and orthodoxy. "Even by the end of the decade," Levin adds, "it was not entirely clear whether Britain would go forward with Wilder or back with the Forsytes, and the argument had got bogged down in a discussion of which would be better, if there was any choice."

Levin's comments on personalities in the news are maliciously accurate, notably those on Malcolm Muggeridge — St. Mugg, as he calls him, Enoch Powell and other members of the Conservative hierarchy. To Harold Macmillan he is implacable: "the stag at bay with the mentality of a fox at large," a phrase perhaps a shade less deadly than Muggeridge's description of Macmillan as "a faded, attitudinizing, Turf Club bummaree."

▣

Already the seventies have produced no fewer inconsistencies than the sixties: crippling strikes and dogged resistance to trades union reform, a go-ahead on the third airport and a disastrous set-back to the British aircraft industry, a change to decimal currency with the same old fall in the value of money. Levin may not therefore attempt a survey of the seventies, for although the players may have changed, the story stays essentially the same. O tempora, o mores.

In any case you can read Levin, the celebrity but still the iconoclast, in the London Times, to which he is now a regular contributor. Perhaps there is a certain inconsistency in that, too.

BOOKS FOR YOUNG READERS

Adventure With West Coast Flavor

By JUDITH YEMEN

Cabin boy Jim Ormiston tells of modern-day piracy in Voyage into Danger, a voyage which begins in Vancouver's Canton Alley and spreads up the coast to the Queen Charlotte Islands.

fore the tug gets under way. Then, while the Gabriola ambles north past Texada Island, Bliss Landing, Forbes Bay and on to Graham Island, a stowaway and his luggage — a bomb — are found in the hold. From then on the crew is involved in a mystery of pirates and strange loot.

The plot is strong and the color of the coast and its people is continually refreshing. But why does seaman-cum-author Ted Ashlee insist on revealing the action through conversation? A two-page monologue from normally taciturn Johnson Charlie and a pre-collision dissertation from the captain only hinder the drama.

Despite its faults, the book is entertaining, and topical. Ashlee knows his sea lore, gracing the tale with credibility. We need more fiction like this on the West Coast.

LITTLE BLACK SWAN, by Joan Woodberry. Illustrated by Carol Lawson. Macmillan. $3.95. Ages 9 to 12.

Little Black Swan is the story of a young boy and his discovery of a family of swans in a nearby creek. Mark watches the parent birds rear their young through a long Tasmanian summer while we watch Mark's parents as they guide the boy to a solid understanding of nature.

Although the book is slender, the tale is absorbing. Readers won't find the same lyrical humor as in E. B. White's The Trumpet of the Swan, but they will discover a thoughtful, tender approach to the same subject.

ALLSORTS 3. Edited by Ann Thwaite. Macmillan. $2.75. Age 11 and under.

Annual books for girls used to be a bore. The stories were stuffy, the games weren't any fun, and, besides, the annual for boys was more exciting. But then a number of children's books 15 years ago were like that.

Since then, story books have been jazzed up and it's pleasing to see that the annual keeps pace.

Allsorts 3 has "all sorts of things for all sorts of children."

In addition to being diverting the material is intelligent and lively. Editor Mrs. Thwaite has chosen the best from a variety of poets and authors, and illustrated it with quality.

HENRY REED'S BIG SHOW, by Keith Robertson. Illustrated by Robert McCloskey. Macmillan. $4.50. Ages 9 to 12.

Henry Reed has the most amazing events happen around him, as readers of previous Henry books know.

This time Henry decides to be a theatrical producer, with the help of ever-faithful Midge. The scene is Grover's Corner, New Jersey, but the act is farther than that from Broadway.

How Henry's big show grows from summer stock to a Wild West Stampede is told in the familiar dead-pan style of Henry's diary. It's funny and worth reading.

A LAUGH ON EVERY PAGE, WITH DASH OF CYNICISM

By WALTER McKINNON

New York Times drama critic Clive Barnes has in his hands a terrifying power.

He can, it is said, with a single glance or flick of a finger on a Broadway opening night reduce even the strongest of playwrights to helpless, quivering jelly.

"Good old Clive Barnes. He's a great man, a kind man, a truthful man.

"May he live a long and happy life in the theatre, and COUNTING SHEEP, by Art Buchwald. Longman. $7.50.

A grateful, emotionally restored Art Buchwald wrote those lines in his log the day after his play, Sheep on the Runway, opened in New York Jan. 31, 1970.

Barnes earned the benediction by including in his review of the production the line "I wholeheartedly recommend 'Sheep on the Runway' warts and all. It may not be perfect, but who is perfect?"

Buchwald's day-by-day log of the writing and production of the play, plus the full text of it, make up Counting Sheep, a book that's sometimes witty, sometimes cynical, and funny on every page.

It's typical Buchwald satire, and he chose a fertile field in which to work, the United States' diplomatic-military-industrial complex.

The show played 105 performances on Broadway, a good record for any playwright and an amazing record for a first play, as it was.

The book seems destined to do as well because it is everything the play was, plus an entertaining inside peek at the business of stage production.

Its one shortcoming, from the reviewer's point of view, is its brutal exposure of the intellectual incest members of the press have for too long harbored and encouraged within their ranks.

One of the key characters in the play was Joe Mayflower, an arrogant, witch-hunting foe of international communism reminiscent of the McCarthy era in U.S. politics.

Washington political columnist Joseph Alsop, not unexpectedly, took exception to the characterization. So did his brother Stewart, who reviewed the play for the Washington Post.

"Buchwald's Mayflower is not only stupid," brother Stewart wrote. "He is a hissing villain, a buffoon with blood on his hands. He wholly lacks the qualities that have made a vast collection of friends — including both John and Robert Kennedy — for the real Mayflower. He also lacks the qualities — notably the courage to be unfashionable — that have made Joe Mayflower a great reporter. It is not surprising that Joe Mayflower should emerge, in Buchwald's fashionable farce, as a caricature. It is surprising, for Art Buchwald has always seemed an amiable fellow, that the caricature should be so bitchy."

After the review appeared Buchwald wrote Stewart Alsop a brief note:

"If you say it isn't Joe and I say it isn't Joe — then let's get the son of a bitch who says it is Joe."

If Buchwald had been content to dismiss his feud with Joseph Alsop with the relating of that little exchange, Counting Sheep would have been a better book. He was not, however.

But it still merits reading.

Common Sense of an Optimist

By PETER MURRAY

According to Edward Hoagland, there are two kinds of writers — those who deal with things "they deplore and wish to savage with ironies," and the others who "prefer subject matter that they rejoice in."

Anyone in touch with contemporary writing, fiction and non-fiction, feels

That's why it's refreshing to read someone like Hoagland who is still able to affirm the confusions, joys and pain of life.

He's saddled with some of the burdens we're all packing in one form or another — the usual catalogue of anxieties, neuroses or sexual hang-ups — as well as his particular cross, a painful stutter.

What makes this collection of essays so special is the way in which Hoagland confronts life head-on, not in any inspirational sense, but with a matter-of-fact honesty graced by humor. His common sense makes him an optimist.

HOAGLAND
. . . oddball interests

The word "essay" doesn't have much currency these days, most likely because it scares hell out of most adults since their schoolroom days. But there is no other term to describe these casual, indulgent writings on a wide variety of subjects.

Hoagland is curious about the ways of people and animals. He's fascinated by the bizarre and exotic, which can often be found close to home if you have the eye for it. His fine descriptive talent was displayed in the unique "Notes from the Century Before," a journal of travel and interviews in the northern hinterland of B.C.

In this book he ranges close to his home in New York — including a fascinating day spent aboard a tug shunting ships and barges around the harbor — and a newly-acquired country place in Vermont where there's still wildlife to be observed.

Hoagland's feeling for animals is warm, but not sentimental. He's pained by the plight of store-bound turtles, but is able to enjoy the exhilaration of harrying and treeing a bear with a pack of dogs (though obviously relieved when it's allowed to lumber off to freedom). And he's intrigued by the gory operations of a taxidermist.

He's drawn by the contest between man and beast in the rodeo, at the same time being repelled by the "superfluous brutality."

There's an engaging piece about his passion for the circus, where he worked for a time and wrote about in an earlier novel, Cat Man. He appreciates the big animal acts and high-wire artistry, but is disdainful of jugglers and magicians, and chimp trainers who "look like failed dancing-school teachers."

A week spent mingling with the sweaty crowds of a small-town summer fair provides one of the most colorful essays.

Anyone who saw the tumbling Manuel Brothers here this winter during the Harlem Globetrotters' half-time show will agree that they "look like the President of Mexico photographed twice."

And Hoagland describes the barker outside the midway tent with a pair of strippers beside him "like two leashed mink, dancing in the heat and cold."

Mingled with these observations he tells us about the breakup of his first marriage and waiting the arrival of a baby, as well as some memories of growing up. It's this unusual blend of personal confession and description of his slightly oddball interests that makes Hoagland such an arresting writer.

This sort of thing may be an acquired taste, but once you're hooked he has a fan forever.

Harried Londoners Wondering If Tourism Worth the Effort

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) —London, currently swamped with tourists and bracing for even larger droves of visitors in future, is wondering whether the ostensibly lucrative business of playing host to the world is really worthwhile.

This doesn't mean that the British capital plans to turn its back on tourism since, among other things, the armies of foreign sightseers contribute some $500 million annually to the commercial coffers here.

The problem is how to walk the tricky thin line between, on the one hand, turning the metropolis into a vast tourist centre at the expense of local residents and, on the other, losing great and badly needed earnings as a result of inferior accommodation for visitors.

The latest development in this continuing debate is an outspoken "green paper," or discussion document, prepared anonymously for the Greater London Council and dealing specifically with the question of tourism and hotels.

FEAR TRAFFIC JAMS

The new document gives voice to the fear that the coming avalanche of overseas visitors will set off the construction of too many hotels in central London, cause giant traffic jams and generate job opportunities of the sort not favored by municipal authorities.

"If current forecasts are fulfilled, there may be by the end of the decade and on any one day a million visitors to London," the discussion paper says.

The report foresees 300 jumbo jets arriving daily at nearby Heathrow airport, each carrying up to 400 tourists.

Even now, from the traffic point of view, tourism is adding to the discomforts of everyday life here as slow-moving vehicles with dozens of foreigners aboard help clog streets with their stop-go rounds of London's historic attractions.

One possible way of reducing the central London congestion would be an attempt to divert future hotel construction from downtown boroughs to outlying areas.

TAX SUGGESTED

The GLC discussion paper suggests that a tax added to the bills paid by hotel guests might dissuade developers from building future accommodation in central areas, where a rash of such projects is already a cause of complaint among local residents.

Anything up to $1.25 a night was proposed by the "green paper" as an appropriate tax rate.

But one spokesman for the tourist industry branded the idea ridiculous, and a hotel official said it would be a disaster for tourism.

"We feel that it is the least desirable way of controlling hotel development," said a spokesman for a group of such establishments.

Opinion was divided on whether a $1.25 tax would discourage visitors from coming here, with some authorities arguing that the market would stand the extra strain and others insisting it would cut down substantially on the number of Britons as well as foreigners coming to London to spend their money.

Opponents of the projected levy say there are easier methods of relieving the hotel crush in midtown London.

The best way of achieving this end, in their eyes, is for the GLC to stop allowing such downtown building programs.

Many Londoners feel that if the present construction trend continues there will be precious little prime living space left for them, with most of the capital's gracious amenities being sacrificed to the great god tourism.

"If we are not careful, London will indeed have 200,000 hotel beds by 1980 — but 100,000 fewer houses than we want," the discussion paper said.

The 200,000-bed figure has been mentioned as the level of hotel expansion needed to cope with the expected numerical doubling by 1980 of the 6.8 million visitors who came to all parts of Britain from overseas in 1970.

Thousands of Londoners wince at the idea that their city should be transformed into a centre catering almost exclusively for tourists.

JOBS AT LOW LEVEL

That kind of development "would destroy the nature of the present townscape which ... is not a museum piece but a centre of life and work," said the report filed with the GLC.

But the document also argues that it would be "unrealistic" to try halting the rising tide of tourism.

"Undue restraint of hotel building would not only force up prices in existing hotels but would increase the amount of furnished and unfurnished accommodation which would be diverted from residential to tourist use."

Yet tourism as an industry carries still another disadvantage in that the employment it generates calls for unskilled or seasonal work at low pay and with poor prospects.

This is precisely the pattern of labor the capital can do without at a time of continuing housing shortages.

But if tourism goes on growing at its present rate and along the current lines, it will produce 100,000 extra low-level jobs in congested central areas hard-pressed already in their attempts to find living space for residents in straitened circumstances.

NO MINISKIRTS ON THE STEWARDESSES

Chinese Airline—A Flight to Remember

The following dispatch by Associated Press correspondent John Roderick was written during his recent 10-day visit to China. It was his first visit to the Chinese mainland in 23 years.

By MARK RODERICK

CANTON (AP) — The pig-tailed stewardess asking "coffee, tea or . . . ?" works for possibly the world's least glamorous airline: CAAC.

The initials stand for General Administration of Civil Aviation of China, the airline of the Chinese People's Republic.

It got me to Peking, Shanghai and Canton on time and in satisfactory condition. But if girl-watching is your game, you will be disappointed by the stewardesses.

They are pert, pleasant and formless inside their olive grey pantaloon uniforms. If one ever showed up in hot pants or a miniskirt I shudder to think what might be her fate. Or what it would do to the passengers.

This said, let it be added that CAAC not only gets you there but looks after you with splendid Chinese savoir-faire.

USE RUSSIAN PLANES

We travelled on four-engined turboprop Ilyushins—British Viscounts also are in service—which covered the distance from Canton to Peking in roughly three hours and slightly more than two hours each for the return Peking-Shanghai, Shanghai-Canton legs.

It likely is the only airline anywhere which would delay its scheduled 2 p.m. departure for Peking to accommodate some American reporters en route to cover a table tennis match.

There are seldom any air congestion problems over the Canton, Shanghai or Peking airports. Daily flights between the major cities can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

Canton airport had all the hustle of London on a bank holiday. A few diplomats, a dozen officials and military men and we Americans rattled around inside the echoing confines of the terminal building.

There was plenty of room to lie around in the partly-filled 80-passenger plane. Portraits of Chairman Mao Tse-tung looked down with calm reassurance from the front.

Armed with a fly-swatter, one of the apple-cheeked stewardesses—they are called simply "tungchih," or comrade—let fly behind my ear, liberating a small fly forever.

TABLECLOTH HELPS

In flight, she showed up with a package of Tien An Men cigarettes which she placed on the folding table in front of me, its bareness concealed by an embroidered cloth. These were succeeded by a glass of orange juice, a plate containing a large slice of white bread, three kinds of cake, a meat dumpling and a cup of fragrant tea.

The gourmet flight was between Shanghai and Canton. Trundling a cart up the aisle, the lady comrade served hors d'ouevres followed by jumbo shrimp coated with mayonnaise, dry cakes, small bananas, fried fish, sweet mandarins, peas, beets, potatoes and lichee washed down by a staggering assortment of beer, fiery maotai, white and red wines, coffee or tea.

"Wait till this airline bursts on the international scene," said one of the Americans.

In fact, CAAC already is international. Flying its own planes or connecting through the airlines of other countries, it carries its flag from Peking to Mukden to Pyongyang in North Korea, from Shanghai and Canton to Dacca, East Pakistan, from Kunming to Rangoon, from Shanghai to Karachi, Cairo, Athens and Paris, and from Peking to Irkutsk and Moscow.

FASTEST IN THE AIR SLOWEST ON GROUND

No pilot knows this better than Major Donald "Doc" O'Connor, who captained the Canadian armed forces' entry in the 1969 London-Sidney race.

LOST CHANCE

On the ground it was a different matter.

O'Connor spent so much time getting his plane serviced and refueled he lost his lead position and chance to win the coveted silverware.

The problem — lack of communication.

Laughingly asserting if he'd "known a little Swahili" he'd have fared better, O'Connor tells of a typical fuelling stop.

"There were two chaps there who both wanted the job. They were almost fighing each other to get it.

"Finally, they decided to toss for it. We lost! The guy who won had fuel spilling all over the place. We all had to hang on to the pipe, applying enough pressure to prevent the fuel spilling."

When the race was over, O'Connor found that such delays had cost him the prize — which went to a Quantas air line jet.

"I should have known better than choose a Quantas route!

He's Col. Bob Hallowell, the original Red Knight of Golden Hawks' fame.

O'Connor will be "grounded" this time, helping with the race's organization.

He says that Hallowell is hoping for a little service competition from other countries.

"We're hoping there'll be a plane from the Royal Air Force and we've thrown down the gauntlet to the Royal Australian Air Force, hoping they'll pick it up."

No such invitation has gone to Air Canada.

Alberta Drug Substitution Plan Interests Other Areas

By GLENNIS ZILM

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta is the only province that permits its pharmacists to give an equivalent drug to one prescribed by a doctor—and after nine years it seems to be working out well.

Recently, other provinces, including Manitoba, Ontario and British Columbia, have shown interest in bringing in similar legislation.

Alberta's legislation, introduced in 1962, is aimed at reducing costs to the consumer.

"I don't think in actual fact it has made much difference," said Dr. Rod Reiffenstein, a pharmacology professor at the University of Alberta. So far, it hasn't been widely used.

But he does believe it is valid legislation and, if properly used, would mean savings.

When a prescription refers to a drug by brand name, a pharmacist may use a drug or drug combination that is the equivalent unless the doctor indicates otherwise. The doctor must either write in the name of the manufacturer or indicate "no equivalent to be dispensed."

REPORTS ON MERITS

Recent happenings in medicine and health could make legislation like Alberta's more important.

For example, the federal food and drug directorate now issues a pharmaceutical newsletter reporting on the relative merits of equivalent drugs considering price as well as other factors.

The Canadian Medical Association is publishing more information about drugs, and the Alberta Medical Association is planning to publish a drug letter as well.

Donald Cameron, registrar-treasurer of the Alberta Pharmaceutical Association, said many pharmacists have been hesitant to give an equivalent drug until recently because there hadn't been any comparative analysis of equivalents. But now these newsletters would be guides to reliability.

And Ontario's health department recently introduced a plan called Parcost—standing for prescriptions at reduced cost—which produces regular reports showing equivalent drugs approved by the department to meet standards of therapeutic action, but scaled according to price.

COST RANGE WIDE

For example, of 12 brands of tetracycline, an antibiotic used to treat infections, tested and ruled chemically and physically equal by Parcost, costs varied from a high of 15 cents a tablet to a low of 3.5 cents a tablet.

Six tablets used in the treatment of diabetes also were ruled equivalent by Parcost. But prices ranged from a high of 6.8 cents a tablet to 1.8 cents.

The first test by the federal government showed even greater price ranges for acceptable drugs, Mr. Cameron said. One brand-name product that sold for $10 for 1,000 tablets by one company was ruled equivalent to another sold for $138 for 1,000 tablets.

Such reports, he said, are a help to all pharmacists and doctors in Canada—but especially to Alberta pharmacists who legally can substitute lower-cost drugs and save money for the consumer.

Since the legislation was passed, Alberta pharmacists

'Cost Plus Professional Fee' Basis Benefit To Customer

have switched to a "cost-plus-professional-fee" basis rather than charging a percentage on the cost of the prescription, Mr. Cameron said. This means the pharmacist charges a $2 maximum professional fee for the filling of the prescription plus what he paid for the drug from the manufacturer.

So, if he has two kinds of penicillin on his shelf, one costing him $30 for 100 tablets and another costing $22 for 100 tablets, he gets no advantage from giving the higher-priced medication.

However, consumers may still benefit from shopping around. A large pharmacy might be able to get a better price from a manufacturer because of mass buying—a saving he can pass on to the customer.

A small pharmacy that is in a building where a large number of specialists send patients for a relatively rarely-used drug may buy it in large quantities and thus offer a better price than a larger drug store that stocks it only for special orders.

The Alberta Pharmaceutical Association is trying to overcome this by approaching manufacturers on behalf of all members and placing drug orders on a contract basis.

STUDY SUCH SAVINGS

"So far we've made three attempts to secure tenders, and have been ignored," said Eli Ambrosie, administrative assistant for the association. "This would permit our members to offer a favorable price to all consumers, whether they live in downtown Edmonton or Milk River."

He said the association had done a study on such savings. If only six drugs could have been purchased at the same price as they are offered on a contract basis to hospitals, the province's pharmacists could have passed on to the consumers a saving of $1 million.

He added that one manufacturer last year gave one drug to hospitals free, but charged pharmacies $6.44 for 100 tablets.

The idea was that if the patient was put on the drug in the hospital, it would be ordered for him by his doctors when he was discharged. As well, it was a method of introducing the drug to doctors.

In Ontario, pharmacists who are taking part in Parcost have agreed to the "professional-fee-plus-cost" plan, with a maximum fee of $2 for each prescription. Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said that in the first six months of the Parcost program, the average cost of prescriptions at participating pharmacies has dropped almost eight per cent.

However, Ontario pharmacists cannot substitute. A government-appointed three-man commission is studying such legislation prospects now.

And in Saskatchewan, the government passed legislation during the final legislature sitting in mid-April permitting pharmacists to dispense drugs by generic instead of brand name. In effect, this permits the pharmacist to substitute a lower-cost item that is the same as an equivalent item at higher cost.

Tomorrow: Brand names said to make little difference.

Ottawa Auction Aids Tot Fund

OTTAWA (CP) — A hockey stick signed by Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League brought $150 in an auction Friday to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Save the Children Fund.

K. R. Marshall of Toronto set the record for the gala evening at the French embassy, paying $300 for a copy of the Canadian Bill of Rights signed by former prime minister John Diefenbaker.

Mr. Marshall also paid $275 for personal passes to three international conferences donated by another former prime minister, Lester B. Pearson.

In all the 18 articles auctioned drew $1,955.

The surprises of the auction were the low bids submitted for the wings and ribbons of

PICKFORD
. . . compact sold

First World War air ace Billy Bishop and a miniature compact donated by silent screen star Mary Pickford.

AMBASSADOR BUYS

Miss Pickford's compact, accompanied by an authenticating letter in her own handwriting, was picked off by Adolf Schmidt, United States ambassador to Canada.

An original comic strip by Charles Schultz had a final bid of $280—which auctioneer Marcel Prudhomme described as "peanuts."

Before the auction got under way the 400 formally-dressed invited guests—described by some as the flower of Ottawa society—danced to the music of a seven-man orchestra in the foyer of the elegantly-decorated embassy.

Tuxedoed stewards, wearing flowered blue aprons, dispensed refreshments while the capital's debutantes graciously served hors d'oeuvres. In their long frilly gowns they looked as if they had stepped from the pages of Vanity Fair.

New Idea For Park Entrance

VANCOUVER (CP) — This city could settle the controversial Four Seasons apartment development proposal by a land trade moving half the project away from the shoreline, says Dr. Bill Gibson, one-time Vancouver mayoral candidate.

The swap would turn the block owned by the developers at the entrance to Stanley Park into a neighborhood waterfront park, Dr. Gibson said, and "would preserve in perpetuity the view of the north shore mountains from the entrance to Stanley Park."

He suggested the city exchange the waterfront property for a block in the residential west end peninsula where the Department of Veterans' Affairs offices now are located.

Power Hike Requested

Victoria radio station CKDA will apply for permission to increase its power from 25,000 to 50,000 watts at a Canadian Radio-TV Commission public hearing to open in Vancouver on May 18.

The increase is sought to strengthen the signal in areas already being served by CKDA, an CRTC official said Friday.

CJVI and C-FAX operate on 10,000 watts each here.

Victoria Cablevision Ltd. will ask permission to add programs from CFMI-FM in Vancouver to its FM service and change the reception point on FM for the Victoria radio station CFMS.

Langford-Sooke Cablevision Ltd. will request permission to increase its monthy service charge from $4.50 to $5.

CAPITAL SCENE

The Kiwanis Club of Victoria meets Tuesday at 12:10 p.m. at the Empress Hotel. G. M. Morris, general manager of the Vancouver Board of Trade, will speak on The Pacific Wind.

LAWYER DISBARRED

NANAIMO (CP) — The British Columbia Bar Association said Friday that Nanaimo lawyer Arthur William Verchere has been disbarred for misappropriation of trust funds.

An association spokesman said the funds were replaced, but he would disclose no further details of the incident.

Pinto

Three reasons why . . .
Pinto is no ordinary small car.
Reason No. 1 — It's engines are made in Germany and England by Ford of Europe. Over 4,000,000 of these engines have been produced. A modified version powers the famous Lola and Lotus racing cars. These engines give you outstanding reliability and performance.
Reason No. 2 — The steering is great. It's called rack and pinion. No other North American car has it — but some imports — like Jaguar, Ferrari and Porsche. Rack and pinion steering gives you excellent handling, quick turning.
But that's not all. Reason No. 3 — Pinto also has the widest track in the small car field: this means its wheels are wider apart for much better stability when passing, turning or in strong wind.

Here's where a little thinking can save you a backache... weeks from now.

There are two basic ways to fertilize a lawn. The standard heavy-weight, short-term method, or the long-term Lawn Green method.
Lawn Green contains a balanced formula with special UF nitrogen that releases slowly into your grass. That way it keeps on feeding your lawn for weeks after initial application. You get a greener, better nourished lawn. And you get to spend more sunny afternoons with a caddy cart than your fertilizer spreader.
Another thing to remember is that 22 lbs. of concentrated Lawn Green equals 40-80 lbs. of conventional fertilizer. And one 22 lb. bag of Lawn Green covers a full 5000 square feet. So Lawn Green makes light work of things.
It's your summer. Enjoy it.

LAWN AND PLANT CARE

Why a lightweight fertilizer?
If you were to put a "pure" fertilizer on your plants or grass, it would burn them badly. So all dry fertilizers are thinned out with a carrier or "extender". The choice of thinner is pretty important.
Sand vs. vermiculite
Sand is cheap. And it is used in many heavyweight fertilizers to provide bulk—at about 80 lbs. per bag. If you have the muscles for it, fine. On the other hand, fillers such as vermiculite do the same job (or better) at 20-25 lbs. a bag.
Easier to spread
In fact, most lightweight fertilizers are highly concentrated, with analyses like 20-10-5, and contain up to three times more nutrient than ordinary heavyweights. The reason is that lightweight fertilizers are easier to spread over larger areas.
Buy coverage
It's all very simple. Weight is not a good yardstick to use when buying fertilizers. Instead, go by convenience and the "coverage area" of the fertilizer.
Buy results, not dead weight.
For Flower Beds
After transplanting annuals, wait 2 weeks until they become well established. Hoe to remove any weeds, then treat with Granular Weed Preventer containing Trifluralin.

Standing Ovation Given Performer

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A thrilling evening of vocal and piano music Friday topped off the first week of the Victoria Music Festival.

The standard of performance was not merely impressive as a festival standard — it was impressive by any standard.

And the crown of the evening for the large audience at Fellowship Hall was the moving, pulse-tingling performance of Chopin's G minor Ballade, by 19-year-old Kwok May-Ling.

In point of fact, this was the first occassion in a long memory of festivals, upon which a competitior has been given a standing ovation.

This was the piece she chose, together with the first Concerto, for her appearance in the British Columbia Centennial open piano competition.

Later, in the City of Victoria Medallion contest, she played the first movement of Chopin's F minor Concerto, with her teacher, Robin Wood, at the second piano.

Inevitably she was awarded both first place in the Centennial competition and the Medallion, the festival's top prize of pianists.

Still, it was not a one-girl evening, for outstanding musicality Intelligence and technical accomplishment was markedly present throughout.

CLEAR TONE

Delightful teenage soprano, Jennifer Angus, singing Come Unto Him from Handel's Messiah, revealing poignantly clear tone and fine, smooth shapely phrases, won the Centennial 16 and under vocal competition.

Making the choice difficult were Debra Crozier - Smith, singing a Welsh folk song in Welsh, accompanied on the harp by Annabel Burrows, and Helen Wilson singing a Scottish folk song.

Jocelyn Abbot was declared winner of the Centennial 16 and under piano competition. This young pianist who possesses authority and insight to a marked degree, played the Bartok Concerto No. 3, first movement in a vivid and imaginative style.

Ron Kilian, Miranda Wong and Mary Chard provided her with worthy and interesting competition.

SENSITIVE PIANIST

A fine, sensitive young pianist, Frances Crampton, was runner up to Medallion winner Kwok May-Ling and she and highly-gifted Becky Jay competed in the Centennial open.

The only other event, Friday evening, was the speech arts honor concert. Performers were chosen by adjudicator Mrs. Leona Peterson from among outstanding entrants in the week's classes.

There was one competition for senior winners selected by the adjudicators. The bursary award was won by Rosalind Scott who had been a consistent winner with high marks in various classes.

GREAT CARE

Speech teachers in Victoria are doing excellent work, Mrs. Paterson commented as she wound up her adjudications, Friday afternoon.

"The material chosen is consistently right for the students at their various levels and there is plenty of evidence of great care being given to interpretation," she said.

Remarking on the somewhat lengthy honor performance program she admitted to having been in a real quandary with so many "really delightful performances" to choose from.

12 HOURS A DAY

Part two of the 22nd annual Victoria Music Festival begins Monday and continues with approximately 12 hours a day of performance and adjudication until Friday, when competition ends.

There is still however, the big, beautiful festival highlights concert at which winners of the CBC Choir Award, Congress of Strings competition, Rose Bowl and Medallion and other selected outstanding performers appear at McPherson Playhouse.

This has been re-scheduled from May 3, as announced in the official program, to May 4, in order not to clash with the Queen's visit to Centennial Square.

Waiting In Wings

Young musicians who squeeze, bow, blow, perform in ensemble as singers or instrumentalists, as well as dancers of many kinds are waiting in the wings this weekend, to pour onto Victoria Music Festival stages, beginning Sunday.

Four centres will see activity start at 9 a.m., Monday. Strings, except for the cello classes at Victoria Conservatory of Music, Sunday, will be held at Sir James Douglas School auditorium.

Dance sessions will be carried on at Central Junior Secondar School as usual. Oak Bay Junior will be the scene of accordion classes and Blanshard Street Elementary, brass and woodwind.

The strings evening session, Monday, will be at Victoria Senior Secondary, senior bans in evening sessions at Central Junior and school choral classes, beginning Wednesday, at Oak Bay.

Lead Poisons Roadsides

TORONTO (UPI)—Disturbingly high lead contamination levels have been found in soil and vegetation adjacent to high density traffic streets in downtown Toronto, a University of Toronto scientist reported Friday.

Samples of soil taken at Queen's Park, the downtown seat of the Ontario legislature, showed 2,000 parts per million of lead, said Prof. Tom Hutchinson, of the university's botany department.

Lead is poisonous if taken in certain concentrations, though scientists are not agreed on the precise amounts. Lead poisoning affects the nervous system, interfering particularly with the ability to think.

Hutchinson said abnormally high concentrations of cadmium, another poisonous metal, have also been found in downtown soil.

Trio Guilty, Face Prison

MONTREAL (CP) — Rosevelt Douglas, Ann Cools and Brenda Dickonson-Dash have been found guilty and face up to five years in prison for wilful obstruction of the use of the Sir George Williams University computer centre during a 1969 sit-in.

Sentence will be passed April 30.

Douglas, a 29-year-old Dominican, has been on bail of $14,000. Miss Cools, 27, of Barbados and Canadian-born Miss Dickonson-Dash, 25, were on $3,000 bonds.

All three still have to face 11 counts arising out of the 13-day occupation of the computer centre which ended with the arrest of 95 persons Feb. 11, 1969 after fires and a computer-smashing spree left $1.5 million in damage.

PREJUDICES AND PERSPECTIVES

The Danger of Worrying: A Fixed Level of Misery

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Like you and me, Jesus' disciples were worriers. They fretted and fussed over many things, a few of which may have been of some real significance. Their worrying led them to quarreling and dissension. One day Jesus tackled them on this: you can read what he said to them in Luke's twelfth chapter, verses 22 to 31. The key statement here is at verse 29, "You are not to worry": that is the way it is given in the New English Bible.

●

The Greek word rendered there as "worry" originally meant "in suspense" or "in mid-air", and it is tempting to put the text as "You shouldn't become hung-up."

A clear distinction cannot be drawn between "anxiety" and "worry," but it seems to me convenient to use "worry" for something more tentative than anxiety and not as disabling. The Gospel setting suggests that it was this kind of thing, not neurotic anxiety, that Jesus had in mind when he said to his disciples, "You are not to worry."

●

Jesus was concerned about the self-oriented worrying of these men. When we consider his teaching as a whole we see that he did not consider all concern about the future to be worrying: after all, he did have a short parable in which he commended a man who counted the cost before beginning to build a tower. And he was not telling the disciples that they should not worry about others: it is clear from his teaching that worrying about the welfare of others is a dimension of love, providing it is not a mere wallowing in pity as a substitute for compassionate action.

●

Jesus made it clear that worry is often an exercise in futility. "Is there a man among you," he asked, "who by anxious thought can add a foot to his height?" So many of our worries are about things we cannot change. Worry will not stop time passing for you at the rate of 24 hours a day. Worry will not prevent today's vital and vibrant young person becoming in twenty or so years a not-so-vital and not-so-vibrant middle-aged person: Worry will not bring back yesterday so that you can do things differently — the way you know now you should have done them. Two and two will continue to equal four, no matter how much you worry about it.

Worry, self-oriented worry, often presents itself as a virtue and not as the vice that it is. We often fool ourselves with our worries.

Worry cannot change the hard facts of life for us. And worry is doubly dangerous because it can keep us from changing our perspectives on the hard facts. Often the only difference between happiness and unhappiness is the perspective one has on oneself and one's relationships with others. Worry tends to fix one's general life-perspective at a misery-producing angle.

If you must worry, try to switch your concern about your own little problems to concern about the well-being of others. The worrying that stimulates you to action for the good of others, the outreaching kind, helps crowd out the other kind, the desolating inward-looking kind. Purposive activity on behalf of others is protection against the ravages of personal worry: worries often evaporate in compassionate service.

HEALTH LEADER Rev. H. C. M. Taudin-Chabot will speak on The Church's Ministry of Healing Thursday at 2 p.m. in the lower hall of St. John's Church, Quadra and Mason. Taudin-Chabot is president of the B.C. Council of the Canadian Guild of Health and rector of St. Chad's Church in Vancouver.

Liturgical Display Scheduled

A public liturgical demonstration will be held in St. Barnabas Church and hall Sunday from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

On display in the hall will be seasonal pictures leading through the year from Advent to Trinity, ending with the commemorations of All Saints 'tide.

Also displayed around the room will be various instruments of worship. An altar will be featured on the south wall, showing how the liturgy (service offered to God in church) relates to everyday Christian living.

A series of slides will show activities of servers and sanctuary guilds.

A display of chasubles and copes will be arranged along the north aisle of the church.

At 2 p.m. the preparation of the altar will be shown, followed by the preparation of the ministers at 2:25 p.m. At 2:55 p.m. there will be a procession, showing the symbolic carrying of the altar.

At 3:45 p.m. the work of a server will be shown. The program will end with solemn evensong at 4:30 p.m.

Bishops to Announce Position on Celibacy

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian bishops will announce their position on priestly celibacy before the Synod of Bishops' meets in Rome next September, says Msgr. Joseph-Aurele Plourde, president of the Canadian Catholic Conference.

Plourde told a news conference that while recent consultations with nearly all Canada's priests have not produced a definite stand, it is urgent that bishops decide whether priests should marry or married men be ordained.

Bishops from across Canada meeting here this week have also discussed the possibility of granting absolution to groups "in certain circumstances" and the problems of university chaplains.

While he could give no details of how large numbers of people at religious ceremonies, such as Christmas and Easter mass confessions, would be absolved, Plourde said it would definitely not change the sacrament as such.

'IN CRISIS'

Absolution now is granted only to individuals privately after confession, though a form of general absolution is given to soldiers, he said.

Most Rev. Philip Pocock, archbishop of Toronto, told reporters that university chaplains are concerned about their role at institutions "in crisis" where "new social and political schemes take shape without any reference to Christian values."

The chaplains told the meeting of bishops they wanted to be integrated more closely into the work of the dioceses in which they are located and establish a more ecumenical approach to their work, greater mobility between dioceses and national structures, he said.

MAN COLLECTS CHURCHES FOR HOBBY

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. H. A. Gleason, a professor of linguistics at the University of Toronto, collects churches and religions the way some people collect stamps and coins.

Since he came here three years ago from Hartford, Conn., Dr. Gleason, 53, has discovered the location of almost every church in Metropolitan Toronto, how they are distributed and something about their background.

"It takes my mind off my regular work and besides it gives me great personal satisfaction," he said in an interview.

Potash Deal

REGINA (CP) — A large potash sale to Europe is being negotiated and may be completed within weeks, Premier Ross Thatcher said Thursday. He did not divulge details.

California Choral Group To Perform in Victoria

A 30-member choral group from Lodi Academy in Lodi, Calif. will be in Victoria next week to give two concerts.

On Tuesday they will give a secular concert in the North Saanich high school on McDonald Park Road in Sidney. A concert of sacred music will be given Wednesday at the same time in the Seventh Day Adventist Church, Pandora and Vancouver.

Both concerts are open to the public and are being sponsored by the Home and School Association of the Vancouver Island Junior Academy, a Seventh Day Adventist church school.

The group is directed by Hugh Winn, a graduate of Walla Walla College in Washington, who has done postgraduate work at both the University of Hawaii and Pacific Union College.

They will also appear in Vancouver and have been designated California Ambassadors of Goodwill by California's Governor Ronald Reagan.

Zen Authority To Visit Here

Paul Reps, an authority on Zen Buddhism, and an author, poet and lecturer, will be in Victoria Monday.

Reps, a western-oriented meditation advocate, comes from Honolulu and has received wide acclaim for his books on Zen including a book of picture poems, Zen Telegram and a book of prose, Gold and Fish Signatures.

Reps will appear Monday at 9:30 p.m. on the Cable 10 show, Connections.

DUNCAN'S TWIN AUNTIES Maria (left) and Anna Milino display double-barrelled lung power as they blow out 14 candles marking their 7th birthday on Wednesday. The mini-aunts have six nephews, the oldest being their age, from three older sisters from the eight-member family of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Milino. The twins are the youngest in the family, with the eldest being brother David, 27, who is old enough to be their father, (Donna Clements Photo)

ON IVY PLACE

Third Rezoning Try

Victoria council is again being asked to rezone a portion of land on Ivy Place near Hillside and Cedar Hill Road for construction of an apartment building.

It is the third time in 14 months the owners of the property, the J. W. Dickie family, have asked for the rezoning.

After a public hearing Feb. 26 last year, council refused the rezoning. On July 8 after a further request by the owners, council dumped the project by receiving and filing the bylaw.

The latest application was made in a letter April 14 by former alderman Ian Stewart, solicitor for the Dickies. The application asks council to designate the land a special development area under new provincial legislation, in order to include an adjacent city-owned plot which Dickie has been attempting unsuccessfully to buy.

The earlier applications were turned down despite recommendations from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission to allow construction of the apartment.

Under the new legislation which Stewart wants applied, the land can be declared a special development area without a public hearing. The city in turn could write building specifications into the new land title if the public land was sold to the developer.

Council has not yet received a recommendation from the planning commission on the new application.

HARRY UNDERWOOD EAST SAANICH CHIEF

Harry Underwood has been elected to a two-year term as chief of the East Saanich Indian Reserve. He succeeds Harold Pelkey.

Claremont School Donates 54 Pints

Clairmont senior secondary wound up its Red Cross blood clinic Friday adding 54 points to Victoria's total for the week of 795 pints.

The next clinic will be held in Sidney at Sanscha Hall, May 3 from 2 to 5 p.m. and from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

BLACK WILL MEET ON TWO ROAD ISSUES

Highways Minister Wesley Black has agreed to meet a Victoria Chamber of Commerce delegation to discuss the future development of Rose-Blanshard artery and improved airport access.

Kenneth Murphy, of the chamber transportation committee, said the minister had written in reply to the chamber's urging and that a meeting would be held by the committee and others interested at noon, May 4, when it would be decided who would comprise the delegation.

Previous attempts to have the matters resolved — dating back some three years — have bogged down, partly due to the absence of clear policy and to denial of responsibility by local, provincial or federal authorities in the case of the airport road.

Mrs. McRae Winner At Flower Show

A late spring cut down on entries in the Sidney and North Saanich Garden Club show in Sanscha community hall Friday.

Only 190 displays vied for judges' attention, and for the trophies which have become a tradition in the garden club's 17 annual shows. Many entries came from children who exhibited spring flowers in egg cups and sugar bowls.

Grand aggregate winner was Mrs. E. G. McRae who won the Mitchell and Anderson trophy, the Kirby Cup and the Beaumaris Trophy.

Other winners were Mrs. Hazel Knowles, Mrs. E. Madsen, A. R. Mockford and Mrs. W. Hemens.

Deborah Larsen won the highest points in the under-seven age group, Steven Hitchen topped the 8 to 12 class and Christen Fido, the 13-to-18 age group.

About 300 people attended the show which was opened by A. R. McMinn, vice-president of Victoria Horticulture Society.

Camosun Cost Share Less Than Expected

The provincial education department seems intent on paying a slightly smaller-than-expected share of Camosun College operating costs, college council chairman Carron Jameson said Friday.

It had been expected the government and the Greater Victoria school board would share the cost of operating the college on a 60-40 basis, Jameson said.

But Wednesday's announcement of grants to school boards showed the government will pay only 57 per cent of the college's first 15-month budget of $250,000.

The matter isn't critical, Jameson said, but Ernie Shaw, the board's secretary-treasurer, is to discuss it with E. S. Espley, the department of education comptroller, early next week.

The difference to ratepayers would mean a mill rate increase on the college of less than a tenth of a mill, Jameson said. (A mill is $350,000.)

While the provincial average mill rate for school taxes increased only slightly, according to the Wednesday announcement, the mill rate in Greater Victoria increased by 1.4, from 30.58 to 31.98.

One reason for this, said school board chairman Allan McKinnon, is property assessments did not increase at the rate expected. The school board budget is up $2 million to $22 million.

Weddings

Chalmers — Joanisse

A double ring ceremony was solemnized on April 3, 1971 at 7 p.m. in Centennial United Church, when Heather Elaine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Joanisse, 878 Colville Road, exchanged vows with Paul Daniel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Chalmers 604 Cornwall Street. Reverend John Travis officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a floor length empire-waisted gown of ligoda silk crepe with matching train falling softly from her shoulders. Her chapel veil was "something borrowed" from Mrs. Tom Anderson. The bride carried a cascade of yellow roses and stephanotis. The bride was attended by her six sisters. Mrs. Norman Perry, matron of honour, the Misses Kathleen and Diana Joanisse, bridesmaids, and the junior bridesmaid, Miss Lorna Joanisse wore floor-length gowns of green nylon sheer over matching peau de soie with white lace banding the empire waists. They carried cascades of yellow and white mums. The two flower girls, the Misses Phyllis and Kim Joanisse wore matching gowns in yellow and carried baskets of yellow and white mums. Best man was Mr. Tom Anderson, and Messrs. Lynn Chalmers, and Danny and Bruce Joanisse ushered the guests.

A reception followed at the Strawberry Vale Hall. Mrs. Danny Joanisse acted as hostess. Mr. Jack Ferguson of Nanaimo proposed the toast to the bride. The wedding cake was made by the groom's father and decorated by Miss Dee Rogers. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers left on a motor trip to Harrison Hot Springs.

Gee — Jubb

A pretty spring wedding took place March 20th, 1971 at 10:30 a.m. in Christ Church Cathedral, when Reverend Roy Hault united in marriage Doreen Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jubb, to Mr. Rodger Gee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Gee of Rocky Bay, B.C.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was radiant in a gown of white organza. Her chapel veil of silk illusion misted from a coronet of sequins. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and daisies. Her attendants, Miss Sylvia Jubb, Maid of Honour, and Miss Frances Chapman, bridesmaid were lovely in long gowns of mauve and pink dotted swiss with high necks and short puffed sleeves trimmed with lace. They wore mauve and pink daisies in their hair and carried similar bouquets. STUDY ORDERED ON PARK INDIANS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government Friday officially approved a $63,000 study to determine the effects of Pacific Rim National Park on Indian bands and their reserve lands.
Consultants C. D. Schultz and Co. of Vancouver were selected from nine companies which submitted proposals for the study last August.
They have already started work within the 400-square-mile park on the west coast of Vancouver Island which includes about 22 parcels of reserve land, and their final report is expected within six months.

Kraft Market Slump Hitting B.C. Firms

A slack market in B.C. kraft pulp has two senior forestry firms talking in terms of production cutbacks while three other leaders of the industry continue to assess their positions.
Layoffs are expected in June at the Crofton mill of B.C. Forest Products Ltd., and at the Port Mellon mill of Canadian Forest Products Ltd. Both will try to schedule employees' summer vacations into the period to minimize loss of wages.
McMillan Bloedel Ltd. — giant of the industry in B.C. — and Crown Zellerback Canada Ltd. say they have no plans for similar action at the moment.

NOTHING SCHEDULED

Rayonier Canada .B.C., Ltd. said it can see the possibility of a cutback in kraft pulp manufacture, but it has nothing scheduled.
Stocks of kraft pulp at present are large and world market conditions are soft. Most B.C. production is exported.
E. H. Woodruff, director of operations in Rayonier's cellulose division, said his company can look ahead no more than about six weeks and that companies generally are in a "built-up condition."
This could mean that some would suddenly get orders to take care of the backlog of inventory, since sales often are at short notice.
But Woodruff noted softer economies in the U.S. and Japan had produced a condition of less paper consumption for packaging and packing, and both these markets are traditional customers of mills in this area.
"It is difficult to say how much curtailment the industry would have to make to meet this condition," Woodruff said.

OVERSEAS MARKETS

There is "ample bleached kraft pulp available to meet customer's needs," Woodruff reiterated.
A spokesman for another company noted there may be significance in the fact that U.S. northwestern companies are in labor negotiations with pulp workers, with some effect exerted on the domestic scene.
Canadian Forest Products, referring to its Howe Sound pulp division, said reduced European and Far East demand was a factor in its decision to plan a three-week shutdown from June 14 to July 5.
Its Port Mellon mill has about 450 employees and a capacity of 540 tons of bleached pulp per day.
BCFP, which will make a firm decision next month, expects to reduce capacity by 50 per cent for four weeks from June 13.
According to market specialists, the outlook beyond July 5 is little brighter than at present, which may mean no improvement in mill selling prices the rest of this year.

Chase Increases Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Chase Manhattan bank has raised its prime lending rate, the interest charged its largest corporate borrowers, to 5½ from 5¼ per cent.
The increase, a turnaround after a series of cuts from the record 8½ per cent in March, 1970, will become effective today.
Chase Manhattan said its increase in the prime rate was a reflection of the recent advance in short-term interest rates.
Three other major New York banks quickly followed Chase Manhattan's move. They are Irving Trust, Chemical and Marine Midland.
Chase Manhattan made its announcement shortly after the stock market closed.
"We feel it is worth emphasizing that this move is a reaction to developments of the recent past rather than an attempt to foresee the future pattern of short-term rates," the bank said.

American House Starts Up 11.3%

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest statistics on consumer prices and housing starts in the United States raised hopes this week for an upturn in the economy but a decline in new orders for durable goods tempered the news.
President Nixon hailed the 11.3-per-cent jump in housing starts as evidence that consumers are regaining confidence in the economy.
"The consumers in America now have confidence," Nixon said. "We believe we can make that confidence grow in April, May and June."
Nixon cited the recent rapid rate of auto sales, strong increases in retail sales and the stock market recovery as other signs of a more confident mood among consumers.
The moderate rate of increase in the government's consumer-price-index last month also was welcomed as good news by the administration.
The consumer price-index rose 0.2 per cent on a seasonally-adjusted basis. This gave the consumer price-index an annual rate of increase in the first quarter of 2.7 per cent, the smallest increase since the first quarter of 1967.

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Because we had a great deal of trouble getting our bitch bred the last time we tried it, we would like to do it right this time using the best laboratory method. Some tell us vaginal smears are the best way to do this. Others say using a tape to test for fertility is the best. Can you tell us what is the best, please? —J.E.

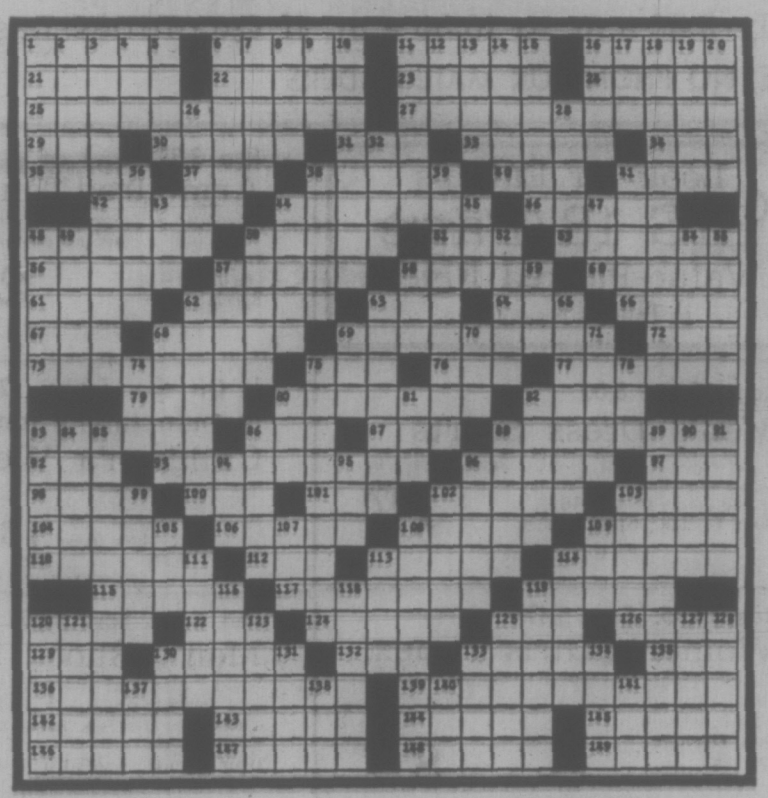

DEAR J.E.: In choosing between the tape and the smear, the vaginal smear is the more accurate. However, neither of these laboratory procedures is the best method for determining your bitch's most fertile period. There is a reliable system that has proven effective for thousands of years (in an amazing variety of species). It is called the period of acceptance. Most frequently the bitch herself is the best judge of when to breed. If given the opportunity, she will leave no doubt as to when this period has arrived.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have one of the green lovebirds and I want to get a mate for it. The trouble is I don't know whether it is a peach faced lovebird or Fischer's lovebird. How do you tell the difference? —S.E.

DEAR S.E.: Along with his green body the peach-face has, not surprisingly, a peach-colored face. The forehead is bright red, the beak is coral-colored. Fisher's lovebird has a deeper red on the head, though on the throat this becomes rosy-hued. The bill is darker red and there are fleshy rings around the eyes.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

U.K. Soccer Title On Razor's Edge

LONDON (AP) — West Bromwich held Arsenal, English League First Division leaders, to a 2-2 draw today and left the soccer championship on a razor's edge as Leeds United closed to within a point on a 3-0 victory at Southampton.

Arsenal now has 61 points from 29 games with only three matches still to be played. Leeds, leaders for almost the whole season, has 60 points from 40 games.

That means Arsenal has a game in hand on Leeds, but one of its remaining games is against Leeds at United's home ground Monday night — and that could be the vital one.

Bucks Lead In WHL Final

PORTLAND (AP) — Portland Buckaroos went two-up on Phoenix Roadrunners with a 4-2 victory Friday night in the championship series for the Western Hockey League's Lester Patrick Cup.

The best-of-seven series resumes in Phoenix tonight and Sunday for the third and fourth games.

Portland drew opening goals in the second period from Oscar Gaudet and Ken Campbell to take a 2-1 lead going into the final period.

China Leaves Tennis Group

LONDON (Reuter) — Communist China has withdrawn from the International Lawn Tennis Federation because the federation allowed Nationalist China to be a member, the federation's honorary secretary has announced.

Basil Reay said the ILTF received a letter from the All-China Sports Federation saying it was severing all links with the international organization.

He quoted the letter as saying the reason was that, "under the manipulation of U.S. imperialism, the ILTF has openly accepted the so-called tennis association of Chaing Kai-shek as full members of the ILTF, therefore creating two Chinas."

Austin, Spuzich Share Early Lead

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Debbie Austin and veteran Sandra Spuzich fired two-under-par 72s Friday to share a one-stroke lead in the first round of the 54-hole $30,000 Burdines ladies' invitational golf tournament.

Clustered at 73 was a group including Carol Mann, who won the tournament last year in a sudden-death playoff with Sandra Haynie. Others were Sharon Miller, Donna Caponi and Marilyn Smith.

Chako Higuchi, one of three Japanese girls on the tour this year, was tied at 74 with Cynthia Sullivan, JoAnne Gunderson Carner and Miss Haynie.

CBC Schedules Soccer Telecasts

The Saturday night games will include five home games for Toronto Metros, and three home encounters for Montreal Olympics. The 10th game will be Montreal at Dallas.

Shot Cools Hot Debate

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A hotly-contested matter in the Alaska house of representatives was cooled by a jet of water Friday as a lawmaker blasted the chairman of the judiciary committee with a water gun.

The house voted, after long argument, to withdraw an amendment it had added to a senate bill.

After the vote, Representative Dick McVeigh (D—Anchorage) reached beneath his desk, whipped out a water squirter resembling a submachine gun, ran up the centre aisle and sprayed Representative William Moran (D—Anchorage).

The two legislators had argued vehemently on the question.

Kidnap Rumor Squelched

CHANDLER, Que. (CP) — Alexandre Cyr, Liberal member of Parliament for Gaspe, Friday night left a meeting of about 100 persons protesting a planned shift of the Unemployment Insurance Office here to Rimouski, Que., after assuring them that the UIC facilities would remain in this Gaspe town.

Cyr today squelched earlier reports that he had been taken hostage by the protesters when he said he went to the UIC office with the protesters "voluntarily."

He said he had talked with Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey and unemployment department officials in Ottawa and has been assured the office would not be transferred.

'Charge Tourists B.C. Entry Fee'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Camping tourists should be charged an entry fee into British Columbia, Jim Bensley, general manager of Greater Vancouver Visitors Bureau, said Friday.

"We have to become selective in who comes here," he told a luncheon meeting of the Vancouver Electric Club at the Hotel Vancouver.

Test Kills Baboon

DETROIT (AP) — A baboon used in experiments with auto airbag safety device tests at Detroit's Wayne State University was accidentally killed during a test. Researchers said the animal, anesthetized to prevent any pain, sustained liver damage when an airbag inflated and pressed the baboon against taut cords supporting its limp body. The airbag is intended to inflate in a collision and protect auto passengers.

Custody Battle

Before the Judge

A 20-year-old Saanich woman on probation for an attempted theft conviction in February was sentenced to 45 days in jail Friday by Judge William Ostler when she pleaded guilty to shoplifting four packages of wool yarn.

Dawn Elizabeth Fulthorp, 6602 West Saanich Road, court was told, was seen taking the wool about 12:10 p.m. Friday from The Bay and leave the store without paying for it.

The accused with a co-defendant pleaded guilty Feb. 19 to moving furniture from the Sedgewick Building of the University of Victoria out onto a lawn. They left furniture and drove off when they were observed.

Ostler gave the woman a suspended sentence with a six-month probation and the co-defendant was fined $100.

A 69-year-old Oak Bay man was fined $250 in court Friday by Judge William Ostler when he pleaded guilty to stealing four golf balls from a downtown department store.

Ralph T. Garland, 2333 Beach Drive, court was told, was observed in The Bay about 2:30 p.m. Thursday where he picked up the golf balls, worth $1.35 each, and left the store without paying for them.

* * *

Louise A. Whitehead, 18, of 4989 Lochside Drive, was fined $150 for shoplifting a pair of sunglasses.

She was seen taking the glasses from The Bay April 5.

Ostler said different fines are appropriate in different cases and hence the lesser total than the previous accused.

* * *

Felix P. Wilson, 17, of Duncan, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a four-month probation for shoplifting.

He had been observed taking a number of clothing items in a fitting room at The Bay Feb. 27 and then leaving the store wearing some of the clothing without paying for it.

Ostler said the accused's pre-sentence report was a good one and that Wilson had had difficulty in home life.

The judge added that the probationary period was shorter than most and this would give Wilson the chance in September to attend a school he wished to go to.

* * *

Shirley L. Harper, 34, of 1879 Townley, was fined $200 in traffic court by Judge Edmond St. Jorre for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

St. Jorre also prohibited the woman from driving for three months except on business purposes.

Pair of Rookies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies have traded veteran baseball outfielder John Briggs to Milwaukee Brewers for a pair of rookies.

Something New For Boxing Fans

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Television viewers in the United States, watching tonight's light heavyweight title bout between Bob Foster and Ray Anderson, will be shown the scores of the referees and judges immediately after each round.

Since the innovation is the branchild of the American Telesports Network, the cumulative scorecard will not be shown to the spectators at ringside.

"Boxing is the only sport where the as-you-go score is kept secret," said Bill Schwing, president of the new independent TV network.

Foster, the champion, and challenger Anderson won't know their round-by-round scores until it's over, but Schwing said Thursday that full knowledge for all could be the next step.

Gorman Beaten In Houston Meet

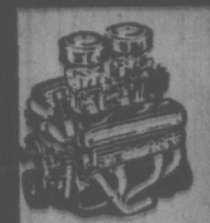

HOUSTON (AP) — Second-seeded Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., and Bob Carmichael of France advanced to the semi-finals of the 37th annual River Oaks tennis tournament Friday.

Richey, the 1968 champion, defeated Harold Solomon 6-1, 7-6 and Carmichael downed Tom Gorman of Seattle 6-2, 6-1.

No. 1 seeded Clark Graebner of New York City and Mike Belkin of Vancouver advanced to the semi-finals Thursday.

Space Link Begins

MOSCOW (AP) — After a chase of more than 41 hours, the manned Soviet spaceship Soyuz 10 docked with the automatic space station Salyut Salute today, then broke away for further approach and linking manoeuvres.

Soviet television announced that the Soyuz 10, with its three-man crew, had made a "rigid mechanical docking" with the unmanned Salute.

Afterward, the link was severed and the Soyuz, which means union in Russian, drifted away. The experiment was carried out after the three cosmonauts had awakened from a nap.

"During the joint flight," Tass said, "scientific and technical experiments were conducted and the work was done for linkup and undocking of the manned spaceship and the orbit station Salute."

Tass added that rendezvous and docking equipment on the spacechips was checked, and the "radio technical equipment was perfected."

The brief dispatch also said that the three cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 10 "feel fine" and that all the systems aboard their craft and the unmanned dummy ship Salute "function normally."

IT'S NEW ITEM

Soviet cosmonauts have docked two Soyuz craft in a previous space mission, but the Salute craft, launched last Monday, is a new item in the Soviets' catalogue of space hardware.

Soyuz 10 streaked into orbit early Friday morning and began pursuing Salute around the earth. The crew made two slight adjustments in the craft's orbit Friday and zeroed in for the rendezvous.

At last report, Soyuz and Salute were in parallel orbits, but the manned craft was slightly higher and would have to throttle down a bit to drop into lower orbit.

This manoeuvre apparently was carried out today.

The linkup of the two craft would be a major step toward the declared Soviet goal of building the world's first orbiting space laboratory.

Three-time cosmonaut Vladimir A. Shatalov, an air force colonel, is command pilot of Soyuz 10. With him are Alexei S. Yeliseyev, also a veteran cosmonaut, and rookie Nikolai Rukavishnikov.

HINTED AT MISSION

Yeliseyev hinted at Soyuz 10's mission shortly before blastoff when he told Russian journalists that the Soviet space program is "entering a period when the creation of orbital space stations is becoming a crucial problem."

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of England's Jodrell Bank Observatory, said Friday he believes the Russians are "very close to carrying out procedures that have been predicted for some time."

U.S. War Protest Draws 150,000

NDP Voting On Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—The five candidates made their final pitches Friday night and today one of them will become leader of a New Democratic Party that has rejected left-wing suggestions for sweeping nationalism and self-determination for Quebec.

On the eve of voting for a successor to retiring T. C. Douglas, 66, party delegates successfully turned back the thrusts of the radical Waffle group, both in policy matters and elected offices.

But Waffle's influence, which at this convention is built around the candidacy of James Laxer, a 29-year-old Queen's University lecturer, was clearly evident.

Votes on several key issues indicated that the group's delegate strength has grown beyond the 20 per cent with which it is credited generally.

On the delicate issue of Quebec's future in Confederation, a policy area that worried party officials because of high emotions and organized factions, delegates rejected by a vote of 853 to 423 a motion favoring self-determination for Quebec.

BACKED BY WAFFLES

It had been strongly backed by the Waffle group, along with the 36 delegates from Quebec ridings.

First Ballot

Lewis	661
Laxer	378
Harney	299
Broadbent	236
Howard	124
Total	1,698

There was no recorded count when the convention voted overwhelmingly to reject the Waffle suggestion for sweeping nationalization of Canada's industries. But the show of hands left no doubt about the outcome.

Delegates instead gave their unquestioned support to a motion calling for the public ownership of the country's resources industries, particularly oil and gas.

Massive March Peaceful

WASHINGTON (AP) —A massive gathering of young war protesters, estimated by police to number 150,000 to 200,000 and still growing, marched peacefully on the United States capitol today in the biggest anti-war demonstration in 1½ years.

The march started spontaneously an hour ahead of schedule. The line of marchers streamed from the locked, partially fenced-off Capitol all the way back down the Mall to the Washington Monument grounds, more than a mile away.

Police gave their first crowd estimate at noon, but marchers were still streaming into the monument staging area.

Helped by perfect spring weather, the march was the biggest anti-war demonstration since 250,000 or more were estimated by police to have gathered in Washington Nov. 15, 1969.

Mayor Walter E. Washington said "things have gotten off to an excellent start." He said it shows "we've maintained a climate where people can come and exercise their constitutional right."

As the Washington crowd swelled, a similar demonstration was scheduled to get under way in San Francisco.

CHANT AND CLAP

The march had been scheduled for noon, but an hour early the chanting, hand-clapping crowd boiled on to Pennsylvania Avenue from the monument grounds.

The head of the march reached the Capitol rally area about half an hour after the procession began. The line of march, perhaps 20 abreast, filled all three lanes of the broad avenue allowed for it.

Through the night and early hours, demonstrators by the thousands moved through Washington streets in a jubilant flow.

At the justice department—in response to directives—all window blinds were lowered and carefully shuttered to deflect any thrown objects.

And for the first time in memory, hastily-erected barricades blocked access to the West Front of the Capitol, where demonstrators planned to end their day-long parading.

WHITE HOUSE CLOSED

Capitol police said the wood-and-wire fencing was merely "to protect the flowers" and not to bar the marchers.

Shells Stray Over Border As India, Pakistan Tense

NEW DELHI (AP) — The Press Trust of India said Pakistani heavy artillery shells fell on Indian territory today during bombardment of a rebel-held border post 40 miles northeast of Calcutta.

Quoting reports reaching Calcutta, the agency said the bombardment began in early morning and shells fell near the customs checkpoint at Petrapole on the Indian side of the border with East Pakistan.

There were no reports of casualties on the Indian side.

Units of the East Pakistani Rifles which support the so-called Republic of Bangla Desh man the East Pakistan border post opposite Petrapole, and Pakistani troops moved to within three miles of the border in the Petrapole district a week ago.

On the Indo-Pakistani diplomatic front, tension reached new heights Friday night when Pakistan ordered the closing of its mission in Calcutta and told India to shut down its high commission in Dacca.

BROADCAST DECISION

Radio Pakistan broadcast the decision which called for simultaneous closing down of the countries' missions, to become effective Monday. It was confirmed later by an official statement issued in Islamabad.

Diplomats and their families would be repatriated under a reciprocal arrangement, the radio said.

The move came after East Pakistanis took over the Pakistani consulate in Calcutta and India declined to take any immediate action to restore it to Pakistan's control.

A spokesman at the Calcutta mission said a letter from Islam was being sent to overseas capitals calling for the establishment of "normal diplomatic relations and exchange of envoys with a view to further strengthening of friendship."

U.S. IN AIR DUEL OVER N. VIETNAM

SAIGON (AP) — United States fighter-bombers duelled Friday with a Soviet-made MiG interceptor and came under heavy anti-aircraft fire over North Vietnam in the sixth day of intensified air activity over the North, the U.S. command disclosed today.

The command said one U.S. aircraft "received minor damage." The U.S. planes were attacking North Vietnamese anti-aircraft defences, but results of the raids were not known, the command said.

The activity was the heaviest in a six-day period since the halt in the bombing of North Vietnam Nov. 1, 1968.

U.S. planes have made four times as many so-called protective reaction strikes this year as the U.S. command announced during all of 1970.

BOMBERS ATTACK

At least 10 U.S. Navy planes and one MiG were involved, and North Vietnamese gunners fired seven surface-to-air missiles at the U.S. aircraft.

While action focused on the North, U.S. B-52 heavy bombers and smaller fighter-bombers kept up heavy attacks on North Vietnamese supply points and routes along the 300-mile Ho Chi Minh trail network, along the demilitarized zone dividing North and South Vietnam and just to the east of the A Shau Valley, one of the exit points of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The U.S. command reported two U.S. helicopters were shot down inside South Vietnam Friday while supporting South Vietnamese forces in the Mekong Delta and far to the north in operation Lam Son 720, centred at the A Shau Valley near the Laotian frontier.

THINK AHEAD AT BED TIME

Daylight saving time goes into effect in British Columbia at 2 a.m. Sunday morning.

Set your clocks and watches ahead — repeat AHEAD — an hour when you go to bed and you'll be getting up perhaps a little more tired Sunday but at least in step with everyone else.

Everyone else who remembered, that is.

For those who like to really look ahead, the province reverts to standard time Oct. 31. That's when you . . . but that can wait.

City Man Dies After Collision

A 20-year-old Victoria man, David Brian Bresenham, 339 St. James, died today as a result of injuries suffered in a two-car collision on the Trans-Canada Highway at the north end of Tunnel Hill Friday night.

Bresenham was the only passenger in a car driven by his mother, Mrs. Daniel Bresenham, who was treated and released from hospital with minor injuries.

Sharp Confers With Pope Paul

It was the first visit to the 73-year-old pontiff by a Canadian external affairs minister since Canada and the Holy See established diplomatic relations last year.

Sharp, on a two-day visit to Italy, already has had talks with Aldo Moro, the Italian foreign minister, and with Marzo Zagari, the foreign trade minister, principally centring on Canadian concern over the effects of British entry into the European Common Market.

At a dinner Friday night, Moro assured Sharp that Italy wants an enlarged European community to be politically and economically outward-looking.

'Honest Abe's' Finger On City Pulse

Abe Wise — and after five minutes' conversation you want to start calling him Honest Abe — firmly believes that one of the best measures of a city's economic pulse is its pawn shops.

He should know. He's been in the business for going on 10 years.

By STEVE HUME

OUT ON OWN

LOTS OF GUITARS

For those inexperienced in the ways of the venerable profession of pawnbroking, a person who needs cash takes an item and borrows money against it. He has a stipulated period of time in which to return the loan after which the broker is free to sell the item.

The time periods, ranging from a month to a year, are worked out in individual contracts, says Abe.

Recently, he says, up to 25 per cent of his customers have not been returning to claim their pawned belongings.

They come largely from youngsters, he says, who give him a good deal of business.

Different people, he says, pawn different things, almost in a kind of sociological categorizing.

"Parents will pawn more expensive things — tools, guns, diamond rings. Bigger things.

"I like hippies. I consider them real nice kids. If they want to dress weird that's their business. They mind their own business and they don't get rough with you like some of the other people do."

That's a basic difference, he says. There are people who pawn things and people who buy — they seldom change their pattern.

"A guy who pawns things will do it when he's earning $100 a week, and he'll still do it when he's earning $150 a week. I think his cost of living goes up with his pay cheque.

"But a guy who buys things always seems to have money, even when times are tough."

FAST TURNOVER

POLICE REPORT

As a pawnbroker Abe makes a daily police report on all merchandise that passes through his hands.

"If something stolen comes in you lose your money usually," he says.

"You fall in once in a while, but I don't get much hot stuff — less than half of one per cent."

The funniest transaction he's had in the last nine months came about when a little old man walked into the store, tottered up to the counter and removed his false teeth.

He wanted to pawn them for $2.

"I needed them like you would take a hole in the head," says Abe, "but I gave him the $2. He redeemed his teeth next pension day.

Born in Montreal in 1914, Abe says he was "in the needle trade" until he was 38. Then he moved to California where he worked "for a state institution" for five years before returning to Canada.

Lots of kids buy their diamond rings in regular jewellery stores and then bring them to Abe when the romance breaks up.

RESCUE BOAT FUND TOPPED

The Percy Brown Trust Fund, formed to provide a rescue boat for the Beechey Head area, has reached its target of $4,700 — with a boost from the provincial government.

Percy Brown, the man who single-handed set out to do something about inadequate rescue facilities in the area, said Friday that a $500 cheque from the provincial secretary's office put the fund over the top.

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black said in the accompanying letter: "... In recognition of the sacrifice made by Mr. Brown and his heroism on March 13 and (the cheque) is to be used to provide a rescue vessel for the Beechey Head area."

Brown has been recommended for a Royal Humane Society Medal for bravery by the Rescue Co-ordination Centre, which asked for his help when the 40-foot troller Janola capsized in heavy seas March 13, throwing its four occupants overboard.

★ ★ ★

But Wick's wife, Marjorie, and Mrs. Parris' husband, John, perished. All four had been in the icy water for more than an hour.

Brown, who operates the Bechey Bay Marina, was so shaken by the experience he took matters into his own hands, borrowed money, and bought a suitable rescue boat.

Names Respect, she is a 17-foot Fiberglas craft and is being equipped with gear needed to meet rescue emergencies.

Relieved that the community has rallied to provide a boat for an area so often the scene of trouble, Brown said:

"It's been a long haul but it was worth it.

"Now I can settle down and start working for myself again — start getting my floats in shape and other chores."

Door Not Closed On Nitinat Lakes For Pacific Park

Lands and Forest Minister Ray Williston said he hasn't closed the door to a Victoria Sierra Club proposal to include three lakes in the national west coast park, now named Pacific Rim National Park.

The lakes — Tsusiat, Squalicum and Hobiton — are the last three lakes of any size which have not been logged off on the southern half of Vancouver Island.

But the minister said before a decision is made to include the lakes, the government would have to carefully consider what effects the loss of forest lands would have on employment.

He noted that plants have been built to certain capacities on the basis of the assured supply of lumber from tree forest licences.

"Any reduction of this supply must be considered for its effect on the economy, and particularly its effect on employment opportunities," he said.

Williston was replying in a letter to a brief submitted by the club requesting the government to preserve the virgin forest around the lakes.

The area is known as the Nitinat triangle and is adjacent to the west coast trail which runs from Bamfield to Port Renfrew.

The club also requested that the half-mile buffer zone along the trail be enlarged to preserve the quality and the wilderness aspects to the 50-mile footpath.

Rick Careless, president, said he could not see how inclusion of the lakes and watersheds would affect employment.

"We are not asking for too much when you consider that most lakes have been logged off and ruined by roads running around their water fronts," he said.

He said tourism is now an important industry and the government should carefully consider prevserving the esthetic values of certain areas of the Island.

CLARKSON FORCED OUT

Strife Spreads Among Poor

A bitter conflict between mothers on welfare and the Victoria Low Income Group surfaced Friday with the alleged firing of social worker Reg Clarkson, one of the founders of the group.

Twenty-two of the 29 women in the Housecleaning Rehabilitation Association signed a petition supporting Clarkson as director of the association prior to his removal as secretary of the Low Income Group.

The association, which operated from the Low Income office, has now moved to a separate office at 2584 Graham, and on Friday alone it sent 13 women out on jobs.

●

According to Low Income president Walter Olszewski, the executive fired Clarkson on Tuesday and again on Thursday after he failed to submit his resignation in writing. Clarkson's failure to abide by executive decisions is one of the main reasons given for the firing.

Olszewski also charged today that Clarkson had "manipulated" the Low Income Group and the women who do the housework.

Mrs. Norma Sprague, 26, of 663 East Burnside, said women who do part-time housework jobs through the Housecleaning Rehabilitation Association are fed up with Olszewski's rudeness and unwillingness to discuss fiscal details of the project with them.

"The power-play was not between Walter and Reg Clarkson," Mrs. Sprague said. "It was between me and Walter."

"I tell you, the mothers would not work for Walter if Mr. Clarkson decided to quit."

The Housecleaning Rehabilitation Association was set up last December with a $10,000 federal grant. The project, headed by Clarkson, was designed to supplement the incomes of welfare mothers through part-time housework. The grant covered operating expenses of an office and transportation, and paid salaries for Olszewski and Clarkson.

CLARKSON . . . backed by mothers

The grant ran out at the end of March, but the women felt details of how they would fit in if the grant is renewed were being deliberately withheld by the Low Income Group executive.

Elaine Olszewski, Low Income vice-president and wife of Olszewski, said today the financial details are "none of their business."

●

At the monthly meeting of the association Tuesday Clarkson showed the women details of how the grant was to be administered.

The women also expressed dissatisfaction with what they considered to be cavalier treatment from Olszewski.

The next morning an emergency executive meeting was called and it was unanimously decided to fire Clarkson and dissolve the association.

However, he offered to resign, and his verbal resignation as director was accepted, effective immediately. It was also decided he could continue to work in the project if the grant came through, but that the project would be under the Low Income group's youth division headed by Dennis Tottenham. Clarkson agreed on condition that the women would go along with that arrangement. But they did not, and the decision to separate from the Low Income Group was made.

Mrs. Sprague explained why the women did not want to be under the youth division.

"Some of these mothers have kids as old as the kids in the youth division — we don't want to be bossed around by a bunch of teeny-boppers."

Clarkson says his verbal resignation, recorded in the minutes of the Wednesday morning executive meeting, did not require a written resignation.

Olszewski says it did, and that's why the executive voted again Thursday to fire him.

●

The real issue, Clarkson said today, is the fact that the welfare mothers have decided to break away from the Low Income Group.

"The power play is between Olszewski and the women, and I got caught in the middle," Clarkson said.

A question which now arises: if the federal grant is renewed, will it go to the association or to the Low Income Group?

Clarkson helped found the Low Income Group in 1966. He was employed as Vancouver Island director for the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. from 1964 until last August, when he was fired. The reasons for the firing were never disclosed.

Cliff Falling Down

Unless something is done to check the erosion within the next few years, a row of firs and maples, plus the steel fence, may slip down to the beach below, Cliff Bates, city park administrator, said today.

He showed a group of city and Saanich aldermen evidence of the erosion. Huge chunks of clay and sand had tumbled down to the beach and a cedar lay on its side.

About 600 feet of waterfront is involved.

Bates said about 20 feet of the cliff had eroded away in the past six years. It actually slides down, taking with it deciduous trees, such as alder, which help check the erosion. The sea in winter washes the earth away.

Aldermen said action would probably have to be done in stages in view of the high costs to put up a wall.

Heavy Vote Seen

About a third of the eligible voters by noon today had cast their ballots in the $900,000 Central Saanich sewer referendum.

A total of 936 electors are entitled to vote.

Fred Durrant, municipal clerk, said he expects voting to pick up towards the end of the day.

"Everything points to a heavy vote," he said.

Ask The Times

Q: Is that raw sewage that's being poured into McNeill (Shoal) Bay through those two concrete outfalls?—D.H.

A: An Oak Bay spokesman says there is an overflow when raw sewage can get into one of them but this doesn't occur in the summer. The municipality is working on a scheme this year to end this. There shouldn't be any sewage in other pipes—there are more than two, the spokesman said. It was added that similar-looking pipes at Willows Beach carry only storm water.

$3.4M EXPANSION FOR UVIC LIBRARY

Construction will begin in December on a $3.4 million expansion of the University of Victoria's McPherson Library.

J. T. Kyle, vice-president of administration, announced the project Friday. It's expected to be completed by the summer of 1973.

The present four-storey building was completed in 1964 and now contains close to half a million volumes, considerably in excess of its design capacity.

The project will be financed out of Uvic's $4 million provincial capital grant.

BACK WHEN SATURDAY Evening Post flourished at a proud address — Independence Square, Philadelphia — one of its editors dispatched me on a sentimental journey.

We had finished our story business before lunch. During lunch, we fell to discussing the symbols of our respective countries. I cited the Maple Leaf, our emblem dear. Erd Brandt, an American of a sort produced by his country in reassuring numbers, countered with the Liberty Bell.

Then, since Ed never seen that cracked reminder of a nation's beginnings, he sent me off to Independence Hall for a look at it.

Enshrined there, this silent partner of the American Revolution made an impressive sight. But how did it acquire the crack?

History fumbles that point. One version is that the Liberty Bell rang on great occasions until 1835, when the metal gave way while it was tolling a knell for a chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. But the English foundry that cast it, and is still in the bell business, insists that it cracked at the first stroke of the clapper in 1753.

Be that as it may, London's Whitechapel Foundry plans to ship a further 2400 liberty bells across the Atlantic. These 15-inch-high replicas, minus the crack, constitute a $2 million "limited edition." The moulds will be broken when the final bell is cast in time for the United States bicentennial in 1976.

Like the original each is embossed with words from Leviticus 25:10 . . . "Proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Edward C. Bursk, Harvard Business Review editor who passed the story on to me this week, finds it ironical that Americans should be snapping up British-made copies of their symbol of independence from Britain.

"But the American purchasers are motivated by patriotism, too," his letter continues, "and that's heartening. Somehow, stories like this take a little of the sting out of Vietnam and the other big problems of today."

Commemorative bicentenary Liberty Bell No. I, fittingly enough, was a gift to Philadelphia by Whitechapel's present master founders, William and Douglas Hughes. The accompanying scroll, to which the lord mayor of London and the mayor of Philadelphia added their signatures, runs in part like this:

"WHEREAS by a Mystery the said Bell suffered an Injury whereby it was rendered Unfit by reason that it did crack upon the first Stroke:

"NOW THEREFORE it is declared and set down that in Recognition of the many Services which it has been their Honour to render to each other, and to History, that the ancient Contract between the Whitechapel Bell Foundry and the Citizens and People of Philadelphia is hereby fulfilled. . . ."

The makers also depose that "save for a diminution in size" their gift is "a like bell in all particulars, and by the Grace of God is sound."

High-flown nonsense in aid of trade? Partly so. But it is also a gracious exchange between a city and a firm that have both witnessed history in the making.

Douglas Hughes claims that the Liberty Bell, cast under the direction of then master founder Thomas Lister, is the only one to develop a flaw since the foundry was established in 1570 at the sign of the three bells in Whitechapel road.

The firm has crossed the road to new premises since then, but it still looks after the bells of Westminster Abbey which it cast. Two of these date back to 1583 and 1598 respectively.

Big Ben, made in 1858 and a mere youngster, was also shaped at the foundry. Like the others, its bronze is 23 per cent tin and 77 per cent copper, cast in moulds consisting of yellow clay, horse manure and cow hair.

One employee belongs to a family that has had a man in the foundry since 1738 . . . years before the Liberty Bell was cast. But his son isn't interested in bells. He means to break with tradition and go into electronics.

Jangling Bell Demolished By Rampaging Prisoners

By GERARD McNEIL

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — After the prisoners at Kingston penitentiary took control April 14, they demolished the bell that jangled 32 times to open or close the 32 rows of cells radiating from the dome—central control area.

"Instead of ringing a bell for breakfast, we'll have to go around and knock on the doors," John Moloney, regional director of penitentiaries, said Friday.

The 599 prisoners who controlled the institution and held six guards hostage for four days left their philosophy on the walls and their frustrations in the wreckage.

They left the three chapels in shambles, hauling out the Roman Catholic altar as a barricade, ripping down the Jewish tapestry, bashing chalices, ripping hymn books, scattering files, overturning pews, smashing two organs to pieces.

In cell block 1-D, on the ground floor where the men classified as undesirables—rapists, child molesters and stool pigeons — were herded, bloody mattresses and sheets were mute evidence of mayhem.

SMELL RANCID

A rancid stench rose from the sticky floor Friday, five days after the prison was brought under the control of authorities, despite the chill wind that has blown through the smashed windows for a week.

The body of Brian Ensor, who was beaten to death, was found either in a service duct just outside 1-D or in the mop room, formerly cell No. 1, just inside.

"To all who participated in this riot: Our sincere thanks," proclaimed a hand-written sign.

Others proclaimed the epitaph of Kingston, the grey father of Canadian prisons. Although the $300,000 in damages was mostly superficial, it was the end of Kingston as a maximum security penitentiary.

Most of the 500 involved in the outburst have been transferred to other, newer prisons, among them Millhaven, 17 miles away, which was suppposed to replace Kingston later this year.

Mr. Maloney told a group of reporters who toured the prison Friday that only about 150 of the close to 600 cells will be restored.

The psychiatric wing, the prison hospital, the kitchen and the dissociation unit—better known as the hole—weren't affected by the riot and still are in operation.

WARNS REPORTERS

Mr. Maloney warned the reporters about wandering along the upper tiers through ribbons of torn-out electric wiring.

"It may be booby-trapped," he said. "We don't know what's up there. Go at your own risk."

He also warned television cameramen against using electrical outlets, which also hadn't been checked.

Nothing had been moved, awaiting the visit earlier Friday of a board of inquiry, except Ensor's body and the prisoners.

The three-man board of inquiry is led by Toronto lawyer J. William Swackhamer. The other members are H. E. Popp, federal director of custody, and W. T. McGrath, executive director of the Canadian Criminology and Corrections Association.

The board of inquiry will report to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer on "the immediate causes and on the assessment of responsibilities" for the outburst.

PRISON PUNISHMENT was inflicted on 12 persons classified as undesirable — rapists, child molesters, stool pigeons—in the area of the dome at centre of cell ranges. Guard stands among the chairs used in the beatings given the 12 men. In centre of photo is a steam heating rad on which was placed the bell that was used to move prisoners through their normal routine. (CP Wirephoto.)

U.S. War Protest Draws 150,000

Space Link Begins

MOSCOW (AP) — After a chase of more than 41 hours, the manned Soviet spaceship Soyuz 10 docked with the automatic space station Salyut Salute today, then broke away for further approach and linking manoeuvres.

Soviet television announced that the Soyuz 10, with its three-man crew, had made a "rigid mechanical docking" with the unmanned Salute.

Afterward, the link was severed, and the Soyuz, which means union in Russian, drifted away. The experiment was carried out after the three cosmonauts had awakened from a nap.

"During the joint flight," Tass said, "scientific and technical experiments were conducted and the work was done for linkup and undocking of the manned spaceship and the orbit station Salute."

Tass added that rendezvous and docking equipment on the spacechips was checked, and the "radio technical equipment was perfected."

The brief dispatch also said that the three cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 10 "feel fine" and that all the systems aboard their craft and the unmanned dummy ship Salute "function normally."

IT'S NEW ITEM

Soviet cosmonauts have docked two Soyuz craft in a previous space mission, but the Salute craft, launched last Monday, is a new item in the Soviets' catalogue of space hardware.

Soyuz 10 streaked into orbit early Friday morning and began pursuing Salute around the earth. The crew made two slight adjustments in the craft's orbit Friday and zeroed in for the rendezvous.

At last report, Soyuz and Salute were in parallel orbits, but the manned craft was slightly higher and would have to throttle down a bit to drop into lower orbit.

This manoeuvre apparently was carried out today.

The linkup of the two craft would be a major step toward the declared Soviet goal of building the world's first orbiting space laboratory.

Three-time cosmonaut Vladimir A. Shatalov, an air force colonel, is command pilot of Soyuz 10. With him are Alexei S. Yeliseyev, also a veteran cosmonaut, and rookie Nikolai Rukavishnikov.

HINTED AT MISSION

Yeliseyev hinted at Soyuz 10's mission shortly before blastoff when he told Russian journalists that the Soviet space program is "entering a period when the creation of orbital space stations is becoming a crucial problem."

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of England's Jodrell Bank Observatory, said Friday he believes the Russians are "very close to carrying out procedures that have been predicted for some time."

NDP Voting On Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—The five candidates made their final pitches Friday night and today one of them will become leader of a New Democratic Party that has rejected left-wing suggestions for sweeping nationalism and self-determination for Quebec.

On the eve of voting for a successor to retiring T. C. Douglas, 66, party delegates successfully turned back the thrusts of the radical Waffle group, both in policy matters and elected offices.

But Waffle's influence, which at this convention is built around the candidacy of James Laxer, a 29-year-old Queen's University lecturer, was clearly evident.

Votes on several key issues indicated that the group's delegate strength has grown beyond the 20 per cent with which it is credited generally.

BACKED BY WAFFLES

On the delicate issue of Quebec's future in Confederation, a policy area that worried party officials because of high emotions and organized factions, delegates rejected by a vote of 853 to 423 a motion favoring self-determination for Quebec.

First Ballot

Delegates instead gave their unquestioned support to a motion calling for the public ownership of the country's resources industries, particularly oil and gas.

Massive March Peaceful

WASHINGTON (AP) —A massive gathering of young war protesters, estimated by police to number 150,000 to 200,000 and still growing, marched peacefully on the United States capitol today in the biggest anti-war demonstration in 1½ years.

The march started spontaneously an hour ahead of schedule. The line of marchers streamed from the locked, partially fenced-off Capitol all the way back down the Mall to the Washington Monument grounds, more than a mile away.

Police gave their first crowd estimate at noon, but marchers were still streaming into the monument staging area.

Helped by perfect spring weather, the march was the biggest anti-war demonstration since 250,000 or more were estimated by police to have gathered in Washington Nov. 15, 1969.

Mayor Walter E. Washington said "things have gotten off to an excellent start." He said it shows "we've maintained a climate where people can come and exercise their constitutional right."

As the Washington crowd swelled, a similar demonstration was scheduled to get under way in San Francisco.

CHANT AND CLAP

The march had been scheduled for noon, but an hour early the chanting, hand-clapping crowd boiled on to Pennsylvania Avenue from the monument grounds.

The head of the march reached the Capitol rally area about half an hour after the procession began. The line of march, perhaps 20 abreast, filled all three lanes of the broad avenue allowed for it.

Through the night and early hours, demonstrators by the thousands moved through Washington streets in a jubilant flow.

At the justice department in response to directives all window blinds were lowered and carefully shuttered to deflect any thrown objects.

WHITE HOUSE CLOSED

Capitol police said the wood-and-wire fencing was merely "to protect the flowers" and not to bar the marchers.

President and Mrs. Nixon are spending the weekend in Camp David, Md. The White House was closed to visitors.

Shells Stray Over Border As India, Pakistan Tense

NEW DELHI (AP) — The Press Trust of India said Pakistani heavy artillery shells fell on Indian territory today during bombardment of a rebel-held border post 40 miles northeast of Calcutta.

Quoting reports reaching Calcutta, the agency said the bombardment began in early morning and shells fell near the customs checkpoint at Petrapole on the Indian side of the border with East Pakistan.

There were no reports of casualties on the Indian side.

Units of the East Pakistani Rifles which support the so-called Republic of Bangla Desh man the East Pakistan border post opposite Petrapole, and Pakistani troops moved to within three miles of the border in the Petrapole district a week ago.

On the Indo-Pakistani diplomatic front, tension reached new heights Friday night when Pakistan ordered the closing of its mission in Calcutta and told India to shut down its high commission in Dacca.

BROADCAST DECISION

Radio Pakistan broadcast the decision which called for simultaneous closing down of the countries' missions, to become effective Monday. It was confirmed later by an official statement issued in Islamabad.

Diplomats and their families would be repatriated under a reciprocal arrangement, the radio said.

The move came after East Pakistanis took over the Pakistani consulate in Calcutta and India declined to take any immediate action to restore it to Pakistan's control.

Meanwhile, the acting president of Bangla Desh, Syed Nazrul Islam, appealed to world heads of state to recognize his government as Pakistani troops continued to push through the East Pakistan countryside.

A spokesman at the Calcutta mission said a letter from Islam was being sent to overseas capitals calling for the establishment of "normal diplomatic relations and exchange of envoys with a view to further strengthening of friendship."

U.S. IN AIR DUEL OVER N. VIETNAM

SAIGON (AP) — United States fighter-bombers duelled Friday with a Soviet-made MiG interceptor and came under heavy anti-aircraft fire over North Vietnam in the sixth day of intensified air activity over the North, the U.S. command disclosed today.

The command said one U.S. aircraft "received minor damage." The U.S. planes were attacking North Vietnamese anti-aircraft defences, but results of the raids were not known, the command said.

The activity was the heaviest in a six-day period since the halt in the bombing of North Vietnam Nov. 1, 1968.

U.S. planes have made four times as many so-called protective reaction strikes this year as the U.S. command announced during all of 1970.

BOMBERS ATTACK

At least 10 U.S. Navy planes and one MiG were involved, and North Vietnamese gunners fired seven surface-to-air missiles at the U.S. aircraft.

While action focused on the North, U.S. B-52 heavy bombers and smaller fighter-bombers kept up heavy attacks on North Vietnamese supply points and routes along the 300-mile Ho Chi Minh trail network, along the demilitarized zone dividing North and South Vietnam and just to the east of the A Shau Valley, one of the exit points of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The U.S. command reported two U.S. helicopters were shot down inside South Vietnam Friday while supporting South Vietnamese forces in the Mekong Delta and far to the north in operation Lam Son 720, centred at the A Shau Valley near the Laotian frontier.

THINK AHEAD AT BED TIME

Daylight saving time goes into effect in British Columbia at 2 a.m. Sunday morning.

Set your clocks and watches ahead — repeat AHEAD — an hour when you go to bed and you'll be getting up perhaps a little more tired Sunday but at least in step with everyone else.

Everyone else who remembered, that is.

For those who like to really look ahead, the province reverts to standard time Oct. 31. That's when you . . . but that can wait.

City Man Dies After Collision

A 20-year-old Victoria man, David Brian Bresenham, 339 St. James, died today as a result of injuries suffered in a two-car collision on the Trans-Canada Highway at the north end of Tunnel Hill Friday night.

Bresenham was the only passenger in a car driven by his mother, Mrs. Daniel Bresenham, who was treated and released from hospital with minor injuries.

Sharp Confers With Pope Paul

It was the first visit to the 73-year-old pontiff by a Canadian external affairs mimster since Canada and the Holy See established diplomatic relations last year.

Sharp, on a two-day visit to Italy, already has had talks with Aldo Moro, the Italian foreign minister, and with Marzo Zagari, the foreign trade minister, principally centring on Canadian concern over the effects of British entry into the European Common Market.

At a dinner Friday night, Moro assured Sharp that Italy wants an enlarged European community to be politically and economically outward-looking.

'Honest Abe's' Finger On City Pulse

Abe Wise — and after five minutes' conversation you want to start calling him Honest Abe — firmly believes that one of the best measures of a city's economic pulse is its pawn shops.

He should know. He's been in the business for going on 10 years.

By STEVE HUME

At 57 he's a little bit confusing. He looks a lot younger than his years, but he talks a lot older.

OUT ON OWN

In the nine months he's been in business, Abe says he's noticed that "this year it's been quite a bit rougher for money in Victoria."

"For the last half of 1970 and the early part of 1971 people have been taking much longer to pick up their pawns — and a higher percentage of them have been losing their pawns."

LOTS OF GUITARS

For those inexperienced in the ways of the venerable profession of pawnbroking, a person who needs cash takes an item and borrows money against it. He has a stipulated period of time in which to return the loan after which the broker is free to sell the item.

The time periods, ranging from a month to a year, are worked out in individual contracts, says Abe.

Recently, he says, up to 25 per cent of his customers have not been returning to claim their pawned belongings.

His spacious two-room store on the corner of Johnson and Broad is cluttered with merchandise — lots of guitars and musical instruments, rifles, skates, used records, radios, gum boots, even a small motorcycle.

They come largely from youngsters, he says, who give him a good deal of business.

Different people, he says, pawn different things, almost in a kind of sociological categorizing.

"Parents will pawn more expensive things — tools, guns, diamond rings. Bigger things.

And then there are hippies.

"I like hippies. I consider them real nice kids. If they want to dress weird that's their business. They mind their own business and they don't get rough with you like some of the other people do."

That's a basic difference, he says. There are people who pawn things and people who buy — they seldom change their pattern.

"A guy who pawns things will do it when he's earning $100 a week, and he'll still do it when he's earning $150 a week. I think his cost of living goes up with his pay cheque.

"But a guy who buys things always seems to have money, even when times are tough."

FAST TURNOVER

POLICE REPORT

As a pawnbroker Abe makes a daily police report on all merchandise that passes through his hands.

"If something stolen comes in you lose your money usually," he says.

"You fall in once in a while, but I don't get much hot stuff — less than half of one per cent."

The funniest transaction he's had in the last nine months came about when a little old man walked into the store, tottered up to the counter and removed his false teeth.

He wanted to pawn them for $2.

"I needed them like you would take a hole in the head," says Abe, "but I gave him the $2. He redeemed his teeth next pension day.

Born in Montreal in 1914, Abe says he was "in the needle trade" until he was 38. Then he moved to California where he worked "for a state institution" for five years before returning to Canada.

Lots of kids buy their diamond rings in regular jewellery stores and then bring them to Abe when the romance breaks up.

RESCUE BOAT FUND TOPPED

The Percy Brown Trust Fund, formed to provide a rescue boat for the Beechey Head area, has reached its target of $4,700 — with a boost from the provincial government.

Percy Brown, the man who single-handed set out to do something about inadequate rescue facilities in the area, said Friday that a $500 cheque from the provincial secretary's office put the fund over the top.

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black said in the accompanying letter: "... In recognition of the sacrifice made by Mr. Brown and his heroism on March 13 . . . (the cheque) is to be used to provide a rescue vessel for the Beechey Head area."

Brown has been recommended for a Royal Humane Society Medal for bravery by the Rescue Co-ordination Centre, which asked for his help when the 40-foot troller Janola capsized in heavy seas March 13, throwing its four occupants overboard.

★ ★ ★

Then, single-handed, he hauled the four into his small boat.

But Wick's wife, Marjorie, and Mrs. Parris' husband, John, perished. All four had been in the icy water for more than an hour.

Brown, who operates the Bechey Bay Marina, was so shaken by the experience he took matters into his own hands, borrowed money, and bought a suitable rescue boat.

Named Respect, she is a 17-foot Fiberglas craft and is being equipped with gear needed to meet rescue emergencies.

Relieved that the community has rallied to provide a boat for an area so often the scene of trouble, Brown said:

"It's been a long haul but it was worth it.

"Now I can settle down and start working for myself again — start getting my floats in shape and other chores."

CLARKSON FORCED OUT

Strife Spreads Among Poor

A bitter conflict between mothers on welfare and the Victoria Low Income Group surfaced Friday with the firing of social worker Reg Clarkson, one of the founders of the group.

Twenty-two of the 29 women in the Housecleaning Rehabilitation Association signed a petition supporting Clarkson as director of the association prior to his removal as secretary of the Low Income Group.

The association, which operated from the Low Income office, has now moved to a separate office at 2584 Graham, and on Friday alone it sent 13 women out on jobs.

According to Low Income president Walter Olszewski, the executive fired Clarkson on Tuesday and again on Thursday after he failed to submit his resignation in writing. Clarkson's failure to abide by executive decisions is one of the main reasons given for the firing.

●

Olszewski also charged today that Clarkson had "manipulated" the Low Income Group and the women who do the housework.

Mrs. Norma Sprague, 26, of 663 East Burnside, said women who do part-time housework jobs through the Housecleaning Rehabilitation Association are fed up with Olszewski's rudeness and unwillingness to discuss fiscal details of the project with them.

"The power-play was not between Walter and Reg Clarkson," Mrs. Sprague said. "It was between me and Walter."

"I tell you, the mothers would not work for Walter if Mr. Clarkson decided to quit."

The Housecleaning Rehabilitiation Association was set up last December with a $10,000 federal grant. The project, headed by Clarkson, was designed to supplement the incomes of welfare mothers through part-time housework. The grant covered operating expenses of an office and transportation, and paid salaries for Olszewski and Clarkson.

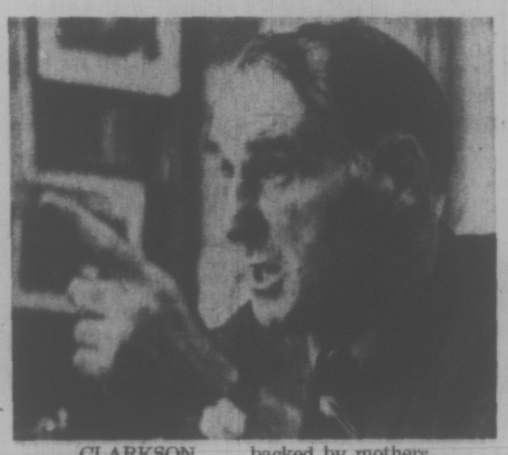

●

The grant ran out at the end of March, but the women felt details of how they would fit in if the grant is renewed were being deliberately withheld by the Low Income Group executive.

Elaine Olszewski, Low Income vice-president and wife of Olszewski, said today the financial details are "none of their business."

The women also expressed dissatisfaction with what they considered to be cavalier treatment from Olszewski.

CLARKSON . . . backed by mothers

The next morning an emergency executive meeting was called and it was unanimously decided to fire Clarkson and dissolve the association.

●

However, he offered to resign, and his verbal resignation as director was accepted, effective immediately. It was also decided he could continue to work in the project if the grant came through, but that the project would be under the Low Income group's youth division headed by Dennis Tottenham. Clarkson agreed on condition that the women would go along with that arrangement. But they did not, and the decision to separate from the Low Income Group was made.

Mrs. Sprague explained why the women did not want to be under the youth division.

"Some of these mothers have kids as old as the kids in the youth division — we don't want to be bossed around by a bunch of teeny-boppers."

Clarkson says his verbal resignation, recorded in the minutes of the Wednesday morning executive meeting, did not require a written resignation.

Olszewski says it did, and that's why the executive voted again Thursday to fire him.

●

The real issue, Clarkson said today, is the fact that the welfare mothers have decided to break away from the Low Income Group.

"The power play is between Olszewski and the women, and I got caught in the middle," Clarkson said.

A question which now arises: if the federal grant is renewed, will it go to the association or to the Low Income Group?

Clarkson helped found the Low Income Group in 1966. He was employed as Vancouver Island director for the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. from 1964 until last August, when he was fired. The reasons for the firing were never disclosed.

Q: Is that raw sewage that's being poured into McNeill (Shoal) Bay through those two concrete outfalls?—D.H.

A: An Oak Bay spokesman says there is an overflow when raw sewage can get into one of them but this doesn't occur in the summer. The municipality is working on a scheme this year to end this. There shouldn't be any sewage in other pipes—there are more than two, the spokesman said. It was added that similar-looking pipes at Willows Beach carry only storm water.

Cliff Falling Down

Unless something is done to check the erosion within the next few years, a row of firs and maples, plus the steel fence, may slip down to the beach below, Cliff Bates, city park administrator, said today.

He showed a group of city and Saanich aldermen evidence of the erosion. Huge chunks of clay and sand had tumbled down to the beach and a cedar lay on its side.

About 800 feet of waterfront is involved.

Bates said about 20 feet of the cliff had eroded away in the past six years. It actually slides down, taking with it deciduous trees, such as alder, which help check the erosion. The sea in winter washes the earth away.

Aldermen said action would probably have to be done in stages in view of the high costs to put up a wall.

Door Not Closed On Nitinat Lakes For Pacific Park

Lands and Forest Minister Ray Williston said he hasn't closed the door to a Victoria Sierra Club proposal to include three lakes in the national west coast park, now named Pacific Rim National Park.

The lakes — Tsusiat, Squaliecum and Hobiton — are the last three lakes of any size which have not been logged off on the southern half of Vancouver Island.

But the minister said before a decision is made to include the lakes, the government would have to carefully consider what effects the loss of forest lands would have on employment.

He noted that plants have been built to certain capacities on the basis of the assured supply of lumber from tree forest licences.

"Any reduction of this supply must be considered for its effect on the economy, and particularly its effect on employment opportunities," he said.

Williston was replying in a letter to a brief submitted by the club requesting the government to preserve the virgin forest around the lakes.

The area is known as the Nitinat triangle and is adjacent to the west coast trail which runs from Bamfield to Port Renfrew.

The club also requested that the half-mile buffer zone along the trail be enlarged to preserve the quality and the wilderness aspects to the 50-mile footpath.

Rick Careless, president, said he could not see how inclusion of the lakes and watersheds would affect employment.

"We are not asking for too much when you consider that most lakes have been logged off and ruined by roads running around their water fronts," he said.

He said tourism is now an important industry and the government should carefully consider preserving the esthetic values of certain areas of the Island.

Heavy Vote Seen

About a third of the eligible voters by noon today had cast their ballots in the $900,000 Central Saanich sewer referendum.

A total of 936 electors are entitled to vote.

Fred Durrant, municipal clerk, said he expects voting to pick up towards the end of the day.

"Everything points to a heavy vote," he said.

$3.4M EXPANSION FOR UVIC LIBRARY

Construction will begin in December on a $3.4 million expansion of the University of Victoria's McPherson Library.

J. T. Kyle, vice-president of administration, announced the project Friday. It's expected to be completed by the summer of 1973.

The present four-storey building was completed in 1964 and now contains close to half a million volumes, considerably in excess of its design capacity.

The project will be financed out of Uvic's $4 million provincial capital grant.

arthur mayse

We had finished our story business before lunch. During lunch, we fell to discussing the symbols of our respective countries. I cited the Maple Leaf, our emblem dear. Erd Brandt, an American of a sort produced by his country in reassuring numbers, countered with the Liberty Bell.

Then, since I'd never seen that cracked reminder of a nation's beginnings, he sent me off to Independence Hall for a look at it.

Enshrined there, this silent partner of the American Revolution made an impressive sight. But how did it acquire the crack?

History fumbles that point. One version is that the Liberty Bell rang on great occasions until 1835, when the metal gave way while it was tolling a knell for a chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. But the English foundry that cast it, and is still in the bell business, insists that it cracked at the first stroke of the clapper in 1753.

Be that as it may, London's Whitechapel Foundry plans to ship a further 2400 liberty bells across the Atlantic. These 15-inch-high replicas, minus the crack, constitute a $2 million "limited edition." The moulds will be broken when the final bell is cast in time for the United States bicentennial in 1976.

Like the original each is embossed with words from Leviticus 25:10 . . . "Proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Edward C. Bursk, Harvard Business Review editor who passed the story on to me this week, finds it ironical that Americans should be snapping up British-made copies of their symbol of independence from Britain.

"But the American purchasers are motivated by patriotism, too," his letter continues, "and that's heartening. Somehow, stories like this take a little of the sting out of Vietnam and the other big problems of today."

Commemorative bicentenary Liberty Bell No. 1, fittingly enough, was a gift to Philadelphia by Whitechapel's present master founders, William and Douglas Hughes. The accompanying scroll, to which the lord mayor of London and the mayor of Philadelphia added their signatures, runs in part like this:

"WHEREAS by a Mystery the said Bell suffered an Injury whereby it was rendered Unfit by reason that it did crack upon the first Stroke:

"NOW THEREFORE it is declared and set down that in Recognition of the many Services which it has been their Honour to render to each other, and to History, that the ancient Contract between the Whitechapel Bell Foundry and the Citizens and People of Philadelphia is hereby fulfilled. . . ."

The makers also depose that "save for a diminution in size" their gift is "a like bell in all particulars, and by the Grace of God is sound."

High-flown nonsense in aid of trade? Partly so. But it is also a gracious exchange between a city and a firm that have both witnessed history in the making.

Douglas Hughes claims that the Liberty Bell, cast under the direction of then master founder Thomas Lister, is the only one to develop a flaw since the foundry was established in 1570 at the sign of the three bells in Whitechapel road.

The firm has crossed the road to new premises since then, but it still looks after the bells of Westminster Abbey which it cast. Two of these date back to 1583 and 1598 respectively.

Big Ben, made in 1858 and a mere youngster, was also shaped at the foundry. Like the others, its bronze is 23 per cent tin and 77 per cent copper, cast in moulds consisting of yellow clay, horse manure and cow hair.

One employee belongs to a family that has had a man in the foundry since 1738 . . . years before the Liberty Bell was cast. But his son isn't interested in bells. He means to break with tradition and go into electronics.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Because we had a great deal of trouble getting our bitch bred the last time we tried it, we would like to do it right this time using the best laboratory method. Some tell us vaginal smears are the best way to do this. Others say using a tape to test for fertility is the best. Can you tell us what is the best, please? —J.E.

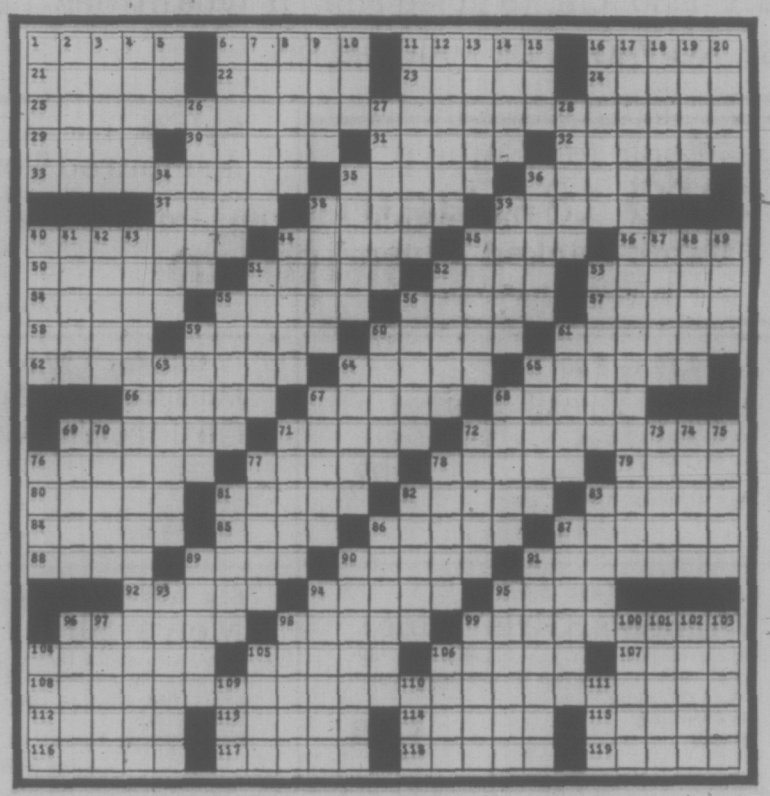

DEAR J.E.: In choosing between the tape and the smear, the vaginal smear is the more accurate. However, neither of these laboratory procedures is the best method for determining your bitch's most fertile period. There is a reliable system that has proven effective for thousands of years (in an amazing variety of species). It is called the period of acceptance. Most frequently the bitch herself is the best judge of when to breed. If given the opportunity, she will leave no doubt as to when this period has arrived.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have one of the green lovebirds and I want to get a mate for it. The trouble is I don't know whether it is a peach faced lovebird or Fischer's lovebird. How do you tell the difference? —S.E.

DEAR S.E.: Along with his green body the peach-face has, not surprisingly, a peach-colored face. The forehead is bright red, the beak is coral-colored. Fisher's lovebird has a deeper red on the head, though on the throat this becomes rosy-hued. The bill is darker red and there are fleshy rings around the eyes.
